Women with Cohasset ties to super up Tuesday's ballot

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Although the race for the Democratic nomination for president of the United States has been heating up between U.S. senators, John Kerry of Massachusetts, the frontrunner, and John Edwards of North Carolina, most prognosticators think Kerry will easily win his home state. So with a Kerry victory all but assured and President George W. Bush unopposed on the Republican side, low turnouts in the primary on "Super Tuesday" are being predicted state-wide.

But the election forecasters haven't been to Cohasset, where Town Clerk Marion Douglas is boldly predicting a turnout of 42 percent of the town's roughly 5,000 registered voters. Douglas said it may be the Republicans that draw voters to the Cohasset polls on Tuesday, but not necessarily just to vote for Bush.

The polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. at Town Hall. Absentee ballots can be cast until noon, Monday when the Town Clerk's office will be closed to prepare for the election.

"It's the most exciting race to hit the Republican Party in this district in many a year."
— Kevin O'Donnell, Cohasset Republican Town Committee

The race for state Republican Committeewoman that features residents, incumbent Polly Logan and Janet Fogarty should be a big draw, Douglas said. Also in the race is Anne Hilbert of Weymouth, a regular columnist with the Cohasset-based Tiny Town Gazette, a Republican newspaper.

Fogarty, who is immediate past chairman of the Cohasset Republican Town Committee, and Hilbert, who is a member of the Weymouth Republican Town Committee, each seek to unseat Logan from the post she's held for upwards of 30 years.

In primary elections, Republicans pull Republican ballots and Democrats pull Democratic ballots. So the Logan-Fogarty-Hilbert race could divide the 1,192 Cohasset registered Republicans. Unenrolled can choose any party's ballot, and could be the wildcard in this race. There are 2,716 unenrolled voters in Cohasset and 1,080 Democrats.

The race for Republican State Committeeman features two Scituate residents, Ron Wheatley and Conley Ford, and John Cafferty of Hingham. The men are each hoping to replace incumbent Tom Barry of School chiefs down to two

Decision is likely tonight

By Samantha Brown

And then there were two.

The field has been narrowed to two candidates to fill the position of Cohasset School Superintendent.

School chief Edward Malvey announced in October he would be retiring at the end of this school year, and since then the School Committee has been busy receiving résumés, forming a screening committee for potential candidates, and participating in the interviewing process.

Last week, the School Committee interviewed five potential candidates for the position and chose Michael Malone of Taunton, currently superintendent for the Plainville Public Schools, and Denise Walsh of Plymouth, currently superintendent of the Middleboro Public Schools, to proceed to the final stage of the interviewing process. School Committee Vice Chairman Chartis Tebbetts and member Pat Martin were slated to make site visits to the districts each superintendent presides over yesterday.

The School Committee could vote to choose the new school superintendent tonight at 7 p.m. at the middle-high school library.

Malone has served as superintendent in Plainville since 1995. Prior to that, he served as principal for the Liberty Elementary School in Braintree from 1986 to 1995. From 1973 until 1986, he was a teacher in the Braintree Public Schools for students in grades five through eight.

Throughout his superintendency in Plainville, Malone developed an elementary world language program, a mentoring program, and a professional development plan for the schools. He also said he carried out a successful debt exclusion vote of $21.8 million for two new school building projects. He developed and implemented

A RADical approach to safety

Training offers self defense for females

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For teenage girls who have grown up in a small, suburban town like Cohasset, heading off to college is a monumental event. It is usually the first time living away from home, and some attend school in the city or out of state.

But in the midst of the excitement of being on their own, girls may not recognize the potential dangers that await on college campuses as statistics show one out of every four college-age women are either raped or assaulted. That's why Cohasset resident Linda Keller got the ball rolling to begin the quest to offer Cohasset High School seniors a self-defense course.

"As I watched us send our children out into the world, I felt there was one important skill that was still needed: rape awareness and self defense."
— Linda Keller, parent

Through the combined efforts of the Middle-High School, Cohasset Police Department, and Social Service League, that idea will soon become a reality.

"Over the years, we have worked to provide age-appropriate health-oriented life skills to our students. As I watched us send our children out into the world, I felt there was one important skill that was still needed: rape awareness and self defense," said Keller.

She thought a perfect place to start would be to approach Middle-High School Health Education Coordinator Michael Gill about beginning a Rape Aggression Defense Systems, or R.A.D. Systems, self-defense program, and he came on board right away.

"When you look at the research, some say it's one out of every four, some say one out of every six, some say one out of every three," said Gill, of the number of women who are attacked. "We want to provide this course for our high school females before they go off to college."

As a result of the renovations to the Middle-High School, the building now has the facilities to be able to offer a program such as R.A.D. The "wrestling room" has padded walls, which makes for a safe environment to train in. But the room isn't of any use without an instructor, which is where the Police Department began making its contribution to the cause.

In order for a male to instruct the course, he has to have a background in law enforcement, or be willing to submit to a significant background check. Police

Rick Shea presented enrollment numbers

In last week's override story, editor Mary Ford inadvertently typed Rick Flynn instead of Rick Shea when detailing school enrollment numbers. Shea presented the figures on enrollment at the Feb. 11 joint meeting with the School Committee, Advisory Committee and Selectmen. Coverage of that meeting appeared in last week's Mariner.

Override not finalized

Advisory Committee Chairman Susan Kent and School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn came before the Board of Selectmen Tuesday to give an update on progress made during budget talks. Kent said her committee needs more time to have questions answered before it will be able to make a recommendation and said a meeting is scheduled for tonight (Thursday). If a vote is not taken tonight, a vote will be made Monday night, Kent said. The Selectmen must vote to make its recommendation at next Tuesday's meeting, as it is the last meeting before the Warrant goes to the printer on March 4.

Upcoming meetings

The following meetings were posted at Town Hall this week:

Advisory Committee, Feb. 16, 7 p.m.

Board of Assessors, March 9 , 4 p.m.

Paul Pratt Library Trustees, March 10, 7 p.m.

Cook RFP Committee, Feb. 26 and March 3, 7 p.m.; Monday, March 8, 6:30 p.m.

School Committee, Feb. 26, 7 p.m., middle-high school library

Selectmen, March 2, 7:30 p.m.

Zoning Board of Appeals, March 9, 7:30 p.m.

All meetings are at Town Hall unless indicated otherwise. Call the Town Clerk at 781-383-4100 for updates.

Production error noted on page one

The "jump lines" that tell readers where to find the continuation of the front-page stories were omitted on page one of last week's Cohasset Mariner. The computer glitch that caused the problem is being addressed. The omission was particularly problematic with the election story that ended at a period and therefore, may have led readers to think the story ended on page one when a significant amount of the story was continued on page 12. The Mariner regrets the error and any confusion it may have caused.

Planning Board nixes Great Neck proposal

The Planning Board voted unanimously last week to deny Ellen Morrissey's proposed plans for a new senior housing project, slated to be built off of Beach Street. Member Peter Pratt said the preliminary plans were not sufficient to move forward, because they lacked basic fundamental aspects, such as access to the property and through the property. There were also large retaining walls placed on property lines in the plans, which are not allowed under the bylaw. Based on reports given by the town's engineering consultant John Modelewski, and the fact that minimal changes were made to the plans even with his suggestions, the board voted 4-0 to deny the project. "We have certain standards that need to be met," Pratt said.

Expenses climbing for police disciplinary hearings

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

While the town is paying two police officers not to work — it's also paying for police overtime during the disciplinary hearings; Town Counsel's legal bills; the cost of the private investigator; and the cost of a court reporter — for an expected total of about $100,000, not counting the officers' salaries and overtime shift coverage.

The town has also spent close to $47,000 for overtime to cover 4.67 overtime shifts per week for two officers at $300 per shift, according to figures provided by Director of Finance Michael Buckley.

The disciplinary hearings for Sgt. William Quigley and Officer James McLean are expected to resume Monday and Tuesday at Town Hall. The officers were placed on paid administrative leave Oct. 20 pending the outcome into an investigation of alleged misconduct.

Here is the breakdown of the cost:

- Deustch Williams, which is Town Counsel, is expected to cost about $65,000 including future hearings.
- Wood Court Reporting is billing $1,000 per hearing for a total of $5,000 after next week's two days of scheduled hearings, according to Buckley's figures.
- DiNatale Services, the private investigator hired by the town, has cost $22,851.65.
- Police overtime during the police hearings is projected to cost $4,320.29.
- Police overtime for shift coverage, $47,000.

On a related matter, Town Counsel, the officers' attorney Doug Louison, Attorney Richard Henderson, who is representing the juvenile's family, and a CNC attorney from Brown Rudnick Berlack Israels LLP were expected to present briefs to Judge Isaac Borenstein at Dedham Superior Court yesterday (Feb. 25) after the Mariner went to press. CNC is the parent company of the Cohasset Mariner, which is seeking to intervene so the hearings will continue to be open to the public . The attorneys will argue why part police hearings involving the juvenile should or should not be conducted in open session.

The juvenile's name and address were inadvertently revealed during testimony of the town's case and the child's parents are seeking an injunction to close that part of the hearing. If that occurs, the officers' evidence about what happened in that incident would be closed to the public.

The officers, who asked their hearings be held in public, are expected to start presenting their side starting Monday. Borenstein's ruling will determine if part of their defense will have to be conducted behind closed doors.

After the hearings finish, Town Manager Mark Haddad, who is the hearing officer, will decide what punishment if any to mete out to the officers including possible termination. The officers have the right to appeal Haddad's decision to Civil Service.

Police, fire overtime costs are covered on the Warrant

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

While Town Manager Mark Haddad says overtime expenses are right on par with what they have been in previous years, voters at Town Meeting are going to be asked to approve $135,000 accrued by members of the fire and police departments.

Article 5 on the Warrant, which was discussed by Selectmen Tuesday, asks voters to allocate a total of $500,000 to cover various departmental budget shortfalls.

The article asks for $60,000 for police department overtime and $75,000 for fire department overtime. However, Haddad said while the police department has remained relatively even in terms of overtime costs from year to year, the fire department has accrued more overtime than usual because South Shore Hospital ended its ambulance service to the town. Because Cohasset and the surrounding towns now all provide their own paramedic services, the department needs to have two trained paramedics on every shift.

"South Shore Hospital's canceling their paramedic services was an unexpected event," said Selectman Chairman Ronnie McMorris.

The fire department is currently running on six-person shifts. On each shift, two members must be certified paramedics. Currently, there are only 10 certified paramedics on the department, so any time a paramedic takes time off for an injury or vacation, someone needs to be called in to take over on the shift.

"We have 10 [paramedics]. Until we have 12, we need to have overtime," Haddad said.

In addition to the fees for overtime, the Board of Selectmen needs $20,000 to cover telephone expenses and advertising. Haddad said advertising for the Cook Estate was an expensive process, and is included in the board's expenses. Various legal cases, which Haddad said includes 3 Jerusalem Lane, require the allocation of $125,000. Both the fire and police departments need $10,000 each to cover vehicle maintenance. The $200,000 to cover school utilities costs is also included in the article.

Haddad said there is an article similar to this year's article 5 each year because he would rather wait to see where the numbers are half way through the year than increase the budget from the start. However, members of the board wondered if there could be anything done to help cut back on the amount of overtime in the police and fire departments.

"This concerns me. Five hundred thousand dollars is a lot of money," said Selectman Michael Sullivan.

Sullivan said a position was added to the police department not too long ago in an effort to help with the overtime problem, but overtime costs have remained the same. The Selectmen asked Haddad if an analysis of overtime at the departments could be done, and whether hiring more personnel would help with the situation. Haddad said he would look into the matter.

Questions raised on removing Citizens Petitions

Town Manager Mark Haddad said the citizen's petition which would sell the Cook Estate property to the Cohasset Land Foundation, has been taken off the Town Meeting Warrant. The 10 residents, who signed the petition all signed a form asking the article come off the warrant because it is no longer needed.

"You can take it off at their request," said Haddad. "They were pleased we got five bids," he said.

The article, if passed, would have allowed the Foundation to construct 48-60 affordable senior housing units, while preserving the house and majority of land as open space. But the petitioners only put the article on as a safety net should potential developers of the Cook Estate not come forward. Four RFPs are currently being reviewed by an RFP committee.

However, Selectman Fred Koed said he had received an e-mail from someone, who wished to remain anonymous, who thought the only way to take a petition off the Warrant was through the Secretary of State's office.

Haddad said this is not the first time a group has wanted to take a petition off the Warrant and Town Counsel has approved it before. However, Koed said he wasn't sure Town Counsel is the final word on the matter.

Haddad said Town Clerk Marion Douglas spoke with the elections division of the Secretary of State's office and she was told the petition could come off the Warrant.

"There seems to be a dispute," said Selectman Michael Sullivan, who suggested the matter be looked into. Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris said she would like Haddad to double check as well.

"The Secretary of State controls elections," said Haddad, adding with Town Meeting, Town Counsel has the final say. Sullivan said he would still prefer it if the matter was looked into.

Although Haddad agreed the matter would be double checked, he still did not see why it was necessary, if the residents who signed the petition also signed to say they would like to see it removed.

Brian McNiff, a spokesman for the Secretary of State's Office, said in a telephone interview Citizens Petitions cannot be removed. "There is no mechanism under state law allowing Citizens Petitions to come off the warrant prior to Town Meeting," he said.

Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said, however, removing Citizens Petitions is a common practice if all those who signed the petition agree and the article is removed before the warrant is signed off on by the selectmen.

Town Moderator George Marlette said decisions regarding Citizens Petitions should be left up to Town Meeting.

GOPOLLY
HAS DELIVERED FOR US.
ON MARCH 2, WE'LL DELIVER FOR HER.

From town offices to the state house to Washington, South Shore Republicans have been blessed to have the commitment, dedication and loyalty of one great lady for years now.

Because in a very large way of Polly Logan, we've maintained a higher Republican voter percentage and office-holder success record than any area of the Commonwealth, except the Cape.

And, with new leadership at the top and renewed enthusiasm at the grassroots, we're implementing programs to expand the GOP base for the future growth necessary to give our residents the chance for true two-party government.

Polly has never had a personal agenda or career advancement in mind. She's literally given her life, so that ours might be better. She's been in our homes...and most of the district has been in hers!

She's mentored all from Kerry Healey, Ellen Roy Herzfelder, Bob Hedlund and Tim Cruz to those she continues to take to campaign school, as you read this. She's been as involved in school committee and conservation commission activities, as she has on behalf of all recent GOP Presidents and Governors. Mitt Romney calls her "the Grand Dame of Massachusetts politics." Bill Weld said "I owe it all to you."

Paula A. "Polly" Logan is one tough but caring person, someone Republicans need in this critical 2004 Election Year and beyond. If you aren't well aware, you can read of how she's helped us–and of her endorsements, honors and accomplishments–on www.gopolly.com.

Join your friends and neighbors in re-electing Polly our Republican State Committeewoman on March 2.

State GOP races create excitement in Plymouth-Norfolk District

By Jeanne M. Rideout
JRIDEOUT@CNC.COM

The Republican Party in Massachusetts is charting a new course, and there is a lot of competition to steer the ship.

In a three-way contest in the eight-town Plymouth-Norfolk District, John P. Cafferty of Hingham, Conley W. Ford of Scituate, and Ronald B. Wheatley, also of Scituate, seek the state committee man position left vacant when incumbent Thomas Barry chose not to run for reelection. A seventh candidate, Jack E. Robinson of Duxbury, dropped out of the race.

In the race for state committee woman, longtime incumbent Paula E. Logan of Cohasset faces challengers Janet R. Fogarty of Cohasset and Anne Hilbert of Weymouth.

Sate Sen. Robert Hedlund, a Weymouth Republican, has noted that the new vitality within the party, created by Gov. Mitt Romney, has people "clamoring" for positions on the state and town committees. In contrast, on the Democratic ballot for the March 2 presidential primary, the incumbents are unchallenged for state committee man and state committee woman.

Each of the contenders in the Republican state committee race credits Romney for their party's resurgence and has a plan to keep the party rolling.

"There is indeed a resurgence," Wheatley said. "There is one vacancy, and three of us are rushing in to fill it. I attribute this to the new leadership provided by Gov. Romney and Lt. Governor Healey, who are committed to energizing the party from the grass roots to Beacon Hill. They are charting a new course. I want to be part of his team, part of this resurgence."

Wheatley, a Scituate attorney who has lost three bids to win the state representative seat from Democrat Rep. Frank Hynes, said the "lopsided" Legislature, where there is just 13 percent Republican representation, needed to be corrected.

"Because of what is going on in the Legislature, the democratic process is short-circuited. Romney's budget bills are overridden and there is no debate. With bills that do go through, what I call 'night riders' are attached that have serious financial consequences," Wheatley said. He said there was a much greater base among the voters for Republican ideology than many people realized. He said it was important to reach out to both the unenrolled and to Democrats, and to educate young people on the importance of politics.

Ford said he had a plan to increase the party's voter base.

"Voters want to get back to a two-party system. We're not a one-party state, we're a one-party state house," Ford said. He stressed that without a voter base, Republican candidates could not do well.

"Nobody is focussing on the base. I'm the only candidate who has this message," Ford said. "Candidates are important, but we've got to grow that base. The future of the Republican Party depends on this. We can't just put up candidates and see them fail."

He said unenrolled voters in the state outnumbered both Republicans and Democrats.

"If each Republican enrolled 10 new voters for the party, we can get control back on Beacon Hill," Ford said.

"People want to do something," Cafferty agreed. "We have six candidates running for two state committee slots. That says something."

Cafferty said he has spent 26 years working on the grassroots level.

"That is where it all happens. You have to build from the ground up," Cafferty said.

He currently serves on the Hingham Planning Board and is in his second term on the Hingham Housing Authority, this time as the state appointee by Romney. He made an unsuccessful bid for Plymouth County Commissioner in 2000.

"I have the experience. I've run campaigns and held public office," Cafferty said. "There is no time for on-the-job training on the state committee. I am ready to go in and take the bull by the horns."

Cafferty said he was the only state committee man candidate endorsed by former state Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, who served for 22 yeas on Beacon Hill. He said he is also endorsed by the Hingham Town Committee, as well as members of the Scituate Town Committee.

In the race for state committee woman, incumbent Polly Logan faces two challengers, but feels her experience will be recognized by voters. She has served as state committee woman for more than 30 years. She served as national committee woman for a dozen more "Experience is always important. I do know people," Logan said. She hosted one of the first fundraisers for Andrew Card, who is now President Bush's chief of staff, and can get right though when she calls the White House. Logan said she knew how to build coalitions on the state level.

More than ever, state committee members have to reach out to voters, she said.

"Getting out the vote is very important. We have a new government and I want to elect people so he will have the power of veto. I want to help us get the farm team," Logan said. "I think there is a new surge of people who want to serve their country."

Anne Hilbert said she was a true activist

"All my opponents say they are activists, but they haven't done any work in the trenches," Hilbert said. "We have a 13 percent representation in the Legislature. I don't know what they have accomplished.

Hilbert said that right now the power of the party was concentrated in Cohasset and Hingham.

"I'm for the little people, for the everyday person who believes in limited taxation and a two-party system," Hilbert said.

She pointed to the recent passage of a bill in the House that weakens Proposition Two-and One-Half. Bill 45-19, passed by the Democrat-controlled House on a voice vote, exempts senior citizens with homes assessed at under $500,000 from paying additional taxes generated by an override of Proposition Two-and-One Half, thus weakening the proposition by making a group of voters unaffected by the outcome. It there was a stronger Republican presence, this would not happen, Hilbert said.

"Who is going to pay for this?" Hilbert said. "People who can just barely afford to pay for their homes. We need Republicans to stand up and speak out against this."

Fogarty also has a vision for rebuilding the party. She noted that Republican party members needed to go with a more grassroots approach when getting candidates to run and get elected.

Fogarty has been chairman of the Cohasset Republican Town Committee for five years and a member for more than 10 years. She said she has worked tirelessly to grow the party through her aggressive support of candidates for local and state offices. Fogarty's fundraising abilities are renowned throughout Republican circles, and she is viewed among present political leaders including District Attorney Tim Cruz and State Senator Robert Hedlund, as a top fundraiser on the South Shore, she said.

Duxbury, who is not seeking reelection. Jack E. Robinson, also of Duxbury, has withdrawn from the race although his name still appears on the ballot.

"It's the most exciting race to hit the Republican Party in this district in many a year," says Kevin O'Donnell, chairman of the Cohasset Republican Town Committee, who is hoping for a strong turnout. "It's a very interesting election."

Democratic Town Committee Chairman Agnes McCann says despite the fact Kerry is the frontrunner, she thinks a lot of Democrats and unenrolled will vote Tuesday.

"I think people want to express themselves," she says. "There is so much interest in this presidential primary and replacing Mr. Bush. I think Cohasset and South Shore Democrats will be out in force."

Incumbents Democratic State Committeeman Fred Koed of Cohasset and State Committeewoman Karen DeTellis are unopposed.

Voters, who pull Republican ballots can also vote for the 35 members of the Republican Town Committee, as can the Democrats, who are fielding 25 with spaces for 10 write-ins for their Town Committee.

Cohasset has three voters registered in the Green Party and 11 registered Libertarians, both those parties are fielding candidates in Tuesday's primary.

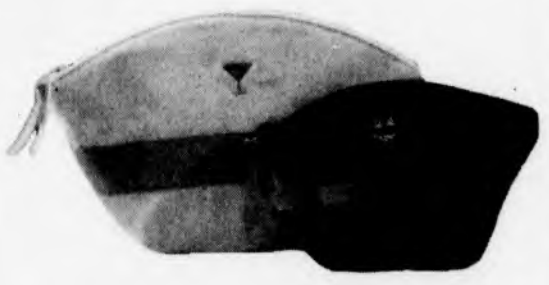
Although Howard Dean, Carol Moseley Braun, Wesley Clark, Richard Gephardt and Joseph Liberman have dropped out of the Democratic presidential race, their names are still on the ballot. In addition to Kerry and Edwards, Dennis J. Kucinich, Lyndon H. LaRouche Jr., and Al Sharpton are still in the hunt for the Democratic presidential nomination and therefore, are still looking for votes.

Register to vote by March 5

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home.

Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If you register during a "closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

The last day to register to vote for the Annual Town Meeting (March 27, 2004) and Annual Town Election (April 3) is Friday, March 5, from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the Town Clerk's office. Mail-in registration forms, are available from the Town Clerk's office, Cohasset Post Office and Paul Pratt memorial Library and must be postmarked on or before March 5.



Absentee ballots available for Presidential Primary

Absentee ballots for the Presidential Primary on March 2, are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Monday, March 1, at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. You may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. Call 781-383-4100 for more information.

Sewer Commission pushes for Little Harbor funding

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Board of Sewer Commissioners is staying on track in its efforts to keep the Little Harbor Sewer project flowing, and is asking the town to allocate $100,000 for the project. Chairman Ray Kasperowicz and member John Beck came before Selectmen Tuesday to present Warrant article 11, which would provide funding for phase two of the ongoing project.

Over the past two years, the Sewer Commission, along with Town Manager Mark Haddad, the Board of Health, and members of Citizens for Equitable Environmental Solutions, or CEES, have been working together to continue the preliminary design of the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue Sewer Expansion effort, as approved at the 2002 Annual Town Meeting. The sewer extension will help eliminate private on-site wastewater disposal systems, which are negatively impacting the water quality of Inner Little Harbor, Little Harbor, and Massachusetts Bay, resulting in the closure of area shellfish beds. It is intended to expand the wastewater treatment plant's capacity by 150,000 gallons per day, to allow the "Little Harbor Sewer District" and "Atlantic Avenue Sewer District" to be connected to the existing municipal sewer system.

The funding being requested at this Town Meeting, would help with phase two of the project, which includes costs associated with design and permitting. Construction costs are being deferred until a later date. When completed, the project will fulfill the last requirement of the Second Amended Final Judgement, which is a state requirement Cohasset needs to fulfill as a result of its violating the Clean Water Act in 1975. Through the first judgement and an amended second judgement, the town has been required to undertake a number of sewer projects to upgrade the sewer systems in critical areas of town.

The funding being requested at this Town Meeting, would help with phase two of the project, which includes costs associated with design and permitting.

One of the key elements of the agreement was a plan to implement an on-site waste-water management plan for homeowners in environmentally sensitive areas of town. The key areas are a section around Lily Pond, and a triangular area where Nichols Road, Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Avenue intersect. By completing the Little Harbor sewer project, the Sewer Commission says there will be no remaining capacity at the wastewater treatment plant.

"We've spent $230,000 on engineering and design work to date," said Kasperowicz, which was allocated from two prior Town Meetings. Town Manager Mark Haddad said the commission could have asked for $200,000 this year, however, Kasperowicz joked his board was able to "pare it down to a mere $100,000."

If the funds are allocated at Town Meeting, the Sewer Commission has an implementation schedule already in the works. This spring, collection system contract documents would be finalized, and solicitation would begin for grinder pumps. This summer, there would be an evaluation of additional regulation changes to control growth in future sewer expansion areas. Those regulation changes would be approved in the spring of 2005, and funds would be appropriated at that time for easements and takings, permitting, and wastewater treatment expansion design.

From spring 2005 to spring 2006, all legal research for easement acquisition would be conducted and granted easements would be solicited. Plans would be prepared, as well as specifications and contract documents for the wastewater treatment plant's expansion design. Permits for sewer expansion will also be submitted.

In the spring of 2006, the commission would seek construction funding for the project. At the same time, continuing into the summer of 2006, it will begin applying for funding from the state revolving fund. By the fall of 2006, the commission hopes to obtain approval for calendar year 2007 state revolving fund grants.

During the winter of 2006, construction contract(s) will go out to bid and a contract will be awarded in the spring of 2007. Construction of the wastewater treatment plant and sewer expansion will take place from the spring of 2007 to summer 2008, and private sewer service construction will take place from summer 2008 to summer 2009.

Copies of the drafted Warrant are available at the library, the Town Clerk's office, Planning Board office, and Selectmen's office. Town Meeting will be held Saturday, March 27 at 10 a.m. at the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium.

Malone has been a member of M.A.S.S., a statewide finance authorization committee, since 2000. He has also served as board of directors chairman for the Bi-County Collaborative since 2003, and has been a member since 1995. The Bi-County Collaborative provides programs and services to students with low incidence special education needs for member communities, which includes Plainville, Attleboro, Wrentham, and Foxboro. Currently, Cohasset is not a member community.

Malone is also a member of the Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents, the Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development, and the American Association of School Administrators. He was also a member of the Plymouth School Committee from 1983 to 1996.

Malone received his bachelor's degree in education and history from Boston State College in 1970, which was followed by a master's degree in instructional technology from the University of Connecticut in 1973. He received his certificate of advanced graduate study in educational administration from Northeastern University in 1981.

Walsh has served as the superintendent in Middleboro since 2000. Prior to that, she served as assistant superintendent for the Silver Lake Regional School District in Kingston. From 1992-1997, she served as the principal of Dedham High School. She was also assistant principal at Hingham High School from 1986-1992, and worked as a teacher, department chair, and assistant principal at Sacred Heart High School in Weymouth from 1979 to 1986.

Walsh said she developed many special programs for the schools in Middleboro. She listed some of her successes as designing violence prevention policies, protocols, and programs through a memorandum of understanding with the police department. Programs included, "Words and not weapons," and "Safe schools," to train students and staff in conflict resolution and mediation strategies. Walsh also said she designed and presented system-wide professional development programs to deal with implementing standards in the classroom. She also developed a full-day kindergarten program.

Walsh also said she has extensive experience with school money matters. She counts among her achievements preparing and monitoring a $25 million annual school budget, and leading contract negotiations with six collective bargaining units. She coordinated and managed state and federal grants, and organized a town-wide economic summit, she stated. She also designed a school building assistance approved renovation project for an early childhood education center. In addition, she said she used her organizational skills to supervise and evaluate staff as well as 3,700 students in pre-kindergarten through grade 12, and led the strategic planning process to establish goals and objectives to "prepare all students to excel in life."

Walsh is affiliated with many professional organizations, including the American Association of School Administrators, the New England Association of School Superintendents, the Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents, and the New England Association of Schools and Colleges.

Walsh received her bachelor's degree in psychology and history as well as a master's degree in education and certificate of advanced graduate study in school administration from Bridgewater State College. She received her doctoral degree from the University of Massachusetts in 2003.

In total, there were 31 résumés submitted for the opening, said School Committee chairman Rick Flynn, adding the applications were pre-screened and résumés which seemed to fit Cohasset's criteria were forwarded on to the superintendent search committee. The committee included School Committee representatives Rick Shea and Pat Martin; administrators Middle-High School Principal Michael Jones, and Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan; teacher representatives Middle School Physical Education teacher Torin Sweeney, Deer Hill fifth grade teacher Kathy Jordan, and Osgood third grade teacher Beth Owens-Rigby; parent representatives Beth Gilman, Sarah Porter, and Lucia Flibotte; community representative Wallace St. John; and student representative Christine Lovallo with Adam Haracz serving as her alternate.

After the search committee sorted through the résumés, the field was narrowed down to eight potential candidates. Of those eight, five came before the School Committee during televised interviewing sessions on Feb. 9 and Feb. 12. Of the five, one prospective candidate, Claire McCarthy, who Flynn said the committee really liked, decided to take a position with the Stoughton school district. The only current Cohasset employee included in the interviewing process was Karen Watts who currently serves as Student Services Director.

Flynn said the two finalists, "had the right answers," and the committee as a whole had a good feeling about both. While the committee said it is looking to find someone with strong educational leadership skills and plenty of budget experience, what it will come down to is an "overall chemistry" and which applicant the committee thinks will fit in best with the Cohasset school system, Flynn said.

Flynn said while it had been hoped a new superintendent could be decided on by March 11, he said it now looks as if the committee will vote to make a decision at tonight's 7 p.m. School Committee meeting, two weeks ahead of schedule.

MAKING A DIFFERENCE

I want to start this week off by honoring a young lady who has worked so hard in so many areas during her school-age years. After you read this piece, you can then read about another young person from our town who is also accomplishing so much. In this day and age when so many times we hear or read about issues that are negative regarding our young people in society, it is so nice to be able to share with everyone the good things that happen in young peoples lives whether it is a story like Kristen's or Michael's, a piece about honor roll accomplishments and so much more. Please try to take the time to let me know about your child and their fantastic news!

STUDENT OF THE MONTH

Kristen James, a senior, was Student of the Month for January at South Shore Regional Vocational-Technical High School in Hanover. The monthly award is given to the student voted by the staff at Vo-Tech.

Kristen is an electronics student, a member of the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America, a member of the Student Council and has completed her Gold Award in Girl Scouts. Kristen met with the Girl Scout council and had her award approved . Her project was "A Look at Non-traditional Vocations for Women" in which she used her school to help girls understand that you can go into any shop and vocation you want. At her school, South Shore Vo-Tech, she is among the less than 10 percent student body that is in non-traditional shop for girls. Her accomplishment there at that school and in the electronics field have helped her in the decision to attend Fitchburg State College in the fall majoring in computer science and possibly minoring in electronics.

She is very excited about the Gold Award, a major accomplishment because less than 3 percent off all scouts ever achieve it. This town is lucky to have it second recipient in two years. Kristen says after attending last year's gold award for Rachel McElroy, her scout mate, that she was impressed with this award. Kristen has not been active in scouting since receiving her silver award in ninth grade but thought she would pursue the gold as a great accomplishment to fill out her scouting year. She especially would like to thank Mary McElroy, who has been such a great leader and mentor over the years. Kristen, I know that your family, friends and Girl Scout family are all so proud of you.

IN THE US COAST GUARD

Wow, Micheal Baird has a lot to remember and continue working for. What an amazing accomplishment for you Michael and for your family and friends to feel so very happy and proud about. Michael's graduation from the US Coast Guard Academy. President Bush and Michael's older brother Bill, a captain in the Air Force and a 95 graduate of the US Air Force Academy presented Michael with his Commission as an Ensign in the US Coast Guard. The graduation was held last May and was also attended by Michael's grandparents, his brother Dan and his wife Heather, his brother Tim, who took a leave from his volunteer year with Americorp NCCC, and his proud parents Pat and Bill Baird. Michael is currently stationed on the US Coast Guard Cutter Steadfast out of Astoria, Oregon. Bill is a helicopter pilot currently stationed with his wife Angela, and two sons, Tyler and Mason, at Nellis Air Force Base, Nevada. Dan and Heather live in Boston and Tim is a freshman at the University of Richmond, Va.

POPPIN' INTO SPRING

"Poppin' Into Spring" with a fling, a flare and a formal setting is under production at First Parish. Performance nights are Friday and Saturday, March 19 and 20 . Theater-goers will enjoy a full-fledged evening at the Pops including gourmet appetizers, fabulous desserts, and entertainment by this beautifully costumed and choreographed musical ensemble – tuxedos, glittering gowns, champagne and roses.

This Spring presentation has been a tradition at First Parish for the past 15 years. The concert has a history of being a fun-filled evening of musical surprises and camaraderie as the multi-talented cast pull out all the stops to entertain. This year First Parish's own super-talents are coming together to create a musical presentation of Broadway hits, spirituals, song and dance routines, instrumentals, rounds, and audience sing-alongs. The Pops Extra surprise that's planned is too good to miss.

Returning will be the "Twisters", the well-know guitar/drums/keyboard trio brought back by popular demand. A jazz piano, harp, flute and clarinet all add to the diversity of the evening's entertainment. These two evenings' performances take place in Trueblood Hall in the Parish House, 23 No. Main St. on Cohasset Common. The evenings begin as a Social Hour from 7 – 8 p.m. with drinks and hors d'oeuvres, a displayed of the evening's Auction items, and a raffle sale. The Pops Concert begins at 8 p.m. Reservations are strongly suggested. Please call the First Parish office (Sandy Bailey) at 781.383.1100 or the Bloomfields at 781-383-1360. Tickets are $25/person or $50/patron. Full tables for 8 may be reserved at $200.

THAYER HONORS

Cohasset resident, Gregory Smith, a senior at Thayer Academy, earned honors for the first semester.

ANNUAL QUILT SHOW

The Second Congregational Church will hold its 11th annual Quilt Show & Luncheon on Saturday, March 6 from 10:30-2 p.m. Proceeds from this popular event benefit two children's charities: Boston Pediatric AIDS Charitable Trust and Boston Medical Center Place's Reach Out and Read Program. Tickets are just $10 each and include the show and luncheon. For tickets, please call (781)383-0345. This is a fantastic event and a sure sign that Spring is on the way. The quilts are beautiful and the causes are tremendous ones.

'LITTLE SHOP OF HORRORS'

"Little Shop Of Horrors" comes to Cohasset. A sweet, but nerdy hero! A demented dentist? A singing plant? Now that I have your attention, did you know that the South Shore is home to one of the oldest continuously active community theater groups in the United States? That's right, and it's right here in Cohasset — The Cohasset Dramatic Club! Coming this March, the Cohasset Dramatic Club proudly presents Little Shop of Horrors, a musical by Alan Menken and Howard Ashman (the same team which also created Disney's Beauty and the Beast, and Aladdin).

Join us as Seymour Krelborn, a lovable nerd, makes a Faustian deal with "a strange and interesting new plant", only to learn the high price he must pay.). This show is full of laughs and toe-tapping musical numbers and is a great way to spend an evening Parental guidance is suggested due to language and implied comic-book style violence. All shows are presented at the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium. Show times are Friday and Saturday nights, March 5, 6, 12 & 13 at 8 p.m., and Sunday afternoons, March 7 & 14, at 2 p.m.. Tickets are $12 and are available by calling 781-544-0304, or you can get them at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset or at the door.

WEBELOS FIELD TRIP

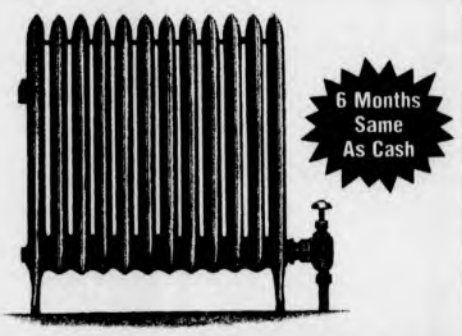
Cohasset's Webelo Cub Scouts and parents rode the commuter boat from Hingham to Boston. They met with architect Keith Moskow. The Webelos saw models and blue prints and toured the office. They drew sketches of rooms of their homes. Their participation and work helped them to earn their engineering badge requirements. They could view the removal of the old road overpasses from the Big Dig. They went to the top of the dome in the Boston Harbor Hotel and saw Boston's many views.

DEAN'S LIST AT ASSUMPTION

Kelly Ann Lordan, class of 2005, has been named to the dean's list for the fall semester at Assumption College in Worcester. Kelly is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lordan who are so proud of her accomplishments.

ST. SEBASTIAN'S HONORS

Paul Cotter, a junior, has earned honors with distinction at St. Sebastian's School in Needham. Paul, whose parents are Dr. Paul and Margaret Cotter, maintained a B or above in all subjects to achieve this honor for the second quarter. Great work Paul.



DEAN'S LIST AT GEORGIA TECH

David Howard Curry of Cohasset has been named to the dean's list for the fall semester at Georgia Tech with a 3.0 or high academic average.

Central air conditioning
for homes with hot water or steam radiator heat.

If a home doesn't have forced air heat, installing ductwork for central air conditioning can mean major remodeling and expense. But a Unique Indoor Comfort® system doesn't require large metal ductwork, or major remodeling.

Cool air is delivered through small 2" flexible tubing that can easily be weaved through walls and ceilings, around studs and other obstacles. All that's visible are small, round outlets in every room. What's more, Unique Indoor Comfort® offers Lennox high efficiency air conditioning.

Proven in thousands of homes, easy to install Unique Indoor Comfort® is the central air conditioning solution for the older home.

BASEBALL AND SOFTBALL SIGNUPS

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association will hold its annual registration for the upcoming baseball and softball season from now through March 6. Parents/guardians have two options for registration: CYBSA will hold a registration on Saturday, March 6 from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m., outside both the Osgood and high school gymnasiums. In the alternative, parents/guardians may register children by mail, provided that mailed registrations are postmarked no later than March 6. Registration forms are available by contacting Nancy Froio on (781) 383-1897. Forms will be available via e-mail. Registrations that are received or postmarked after March 6, 2004 will be subject to a per player $25 late registration fee. Your cooperation in registering players in a timely manner is greatly appreciated, as it allows the CYBSA to establish rosters and order uniforms so that the organization is ready for opening day.

This registration is for boys and girls aged 5 to 12 as of July 31, 2004. A copy of the child's birth certificate must accompany a new player's registration forms. The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the major league baseball (ages 10 to 12) and softball divisions (ages 11 and 12) will be $100. The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the minor league divisions for baseball (ages 7-11) and softball (ages 7-10) divisions will be $85. The registration fee for the farm league instructional division (ages 5-6) will be $65. Please be advised that children assigned to Major League teams are still required to register.

In addition, due to recent the child protection program instituted by Little League governing organization, all adults interested in coaching, managing or volunteering in any way, are required to register at this same time and supply a photocopy of a government issued identification. Individuals not complying with this requirement will not be allowed to participate in the CYBSA program. Questions regarding either player or coach registration may be directed to Liam O'Connell on (781) 383-9538 or Nancy Froio on (781)-383-1897.

SCOUT TRIP

The Webelo Cub Scouts on their recent trip to Boston include, Jake Moskow, Jonah Adkins, Tucker Oddliefson, Alec Hurd, Ben Pratt, David Williams, Adrian Dunne and Morgan McCarthy.

OPINION

Police study is called for

We think an independent study of the Cohasset Police Department is warranted. These studies that can be comprehensive, are not unheard of, and are not that expensive when compared to what the town is paying in legal fees and overtime costs as a result of the current woes at the police department.

In fact, a study — similar to those conducted in Leominster and Hingham — might lead to some positive changes and open the lines of communication in town.

High schools go through a reaccreditation process every 10 years that not only examines curriculum, but looks at the physical plant, teacher morale, school atmosphere and seeks input from parents to name a few. That process could provide a model for looking at other town departments, like the police.

The Town of Hingham commissioned a study of its police department in the late 1980s that was conducted by the Massachusetts Municipal Association and cost $23,500.

The study, which made extensive recommendations, numbered some 165 pages and looked at everything from community characteristics and changing demographics to internal relationships in the police department. It looked at the chain of command, order and discipline, communication, frequency of staff meetings, department morale and abuse of sick time. The study examined evidence control procedures and record keeping and recommended shift changes to cut down on overtime. The report looked at training, evaluating officers' performance on an annual basis, and the cruiser replacement policy. The study called for more delegation of authority by the police chief, with the establishment of a planning task force within the department to formulate long-range goals and policies.

The Leominster study was conducted in 1999 by New Hampshire-based EMS Consultants that used five consultants – all present and former police chiefs and police planners. The 162-page report with some 169 recommendations and cost about $23,600. While the report highlighted the positives, it noted employee morale was low and that management styles needed to keep pace with the times.

"The consultants came up with an extensive prescription for curing what they say ails the department," according to the report summary on the city's website. "They stressed the Leominster Police Department's problems are not numerous, but neither are they easy to solve, because they involve deep-seated feelings, strong personalities, and basically good people who cannot seem to agree."

The consultants interviewed members of the public, representatives from the school system, business community and social service agencies about the police to get a sense of the department's relationship with the community.

Although Cohasset is nothing like Leominster and its neighbor, Hingham, is three times its size – realizing that other municipalities commissioned studies of their police departments demonstrates that other places have been faced with police problems that were not easy to resolve.

Those places commissioned independent, objective studies to get to the heart of the matter. Many of the recommendations involved changing procedures that cost nothing.

While an independent, objective study may tell us some things we don't necessarily want to hear, it could provide a road map for some positive changes. Commissioning a study doesn't mean that any one individual has failed in his or her management style, rather it's a simple recognition that certain aspects of the police department are broken and need fixing.

A Cohasset police-fire station study committee recommended changes to the building, which have been made. Now it's time to put some time, energy and a little money into looking at what's going on inside the station. It's a win-win for the community, Town Hall and police.

Clarifying question posed in Legion story

TO THE EDITOR:

Your coverage of the Town's disciplinary hearings against Sgt. Bill Quigley and Ptl. Jim McLean has been fair and informative. However, in a recent article, Police Hearing Takes Aim At Legion Arrests, you posed a question that I thought might concern some of your readers. In the article you asked "Had Keith Jackson not made a wisecrack to Officer Frank Yannizzi, as the patrol officer tried to squeeze past him on the handicapped ramp outside the American Legion Post on Saturday night last October, would we be here today?" I think that by asking that question some readers may conclude that police officers' decisions to arrest are based on personality conflicts, or an officers dislike of a particular individual. In my 18 years of experience, working with many officers from both a city and small town department, that has never been the case.

Within the law exist several avenues of enforcement that an officer can take. The officer, generally, not always, has the discretion to make a choice between arrest, summons, monetary fine, or verbal warning. The enforcement option selected by the officer is often situational and determined by the facts and circumstances surrounding the particular incident. An officer may base their decision on many factors, including town liability, an increase of complaints about a particular problem, the past criminal history of the violator, if the violator has already received other attempts at corrective enforcement i.e. warning, any specific action or statements made by the violator and general attitude.

Individuals are not arrested because they are deemed "a smart mouth". They are arrested because the officer has probable cause to believe that the individual, at the time of arrest, is committing, or has committed the crime for which they are being arrested. When the officer has sufficient information to arrest is when they decide which level of enforcement is to be used.

Would an officer employ the most severe enforcement option if they were dealing with "a smart mouth"? I would, not because I was personally offended by what the violator said, or how they acted, but because their statements and actions showed disrespect towards the law. It is not about respect for the officer as individual, it is about respect for the uniform, which the officer wears. When I don my uniform, I represent all the good citizens of the commonwealth that enact and uphold the laws. If a violator exhibits disrespect for the office bestowed upon me by the people of the commonwealth should they be eligible for the most lenient enforcement options? It is not an abuse of police power to exercise my discretion and make a lawful arrest. Does it send a message? Hopefully, one that prevents the violator from committing more unlawful and disorderly acts.

What about the disrespectful violators future interaction with law enforeement officials? Will they be encouraged to become more sarcastic, disorderly and perhaps even assaultive if they are treated in the most lenient fashion?

Once the arrest is made it becomes the court's responsibility to address the issue. In most instances it is of little concern to me how the court chooses to dispose of the case. Naturally, some incidents concern me more than others. What matters does not pertain to the individual arrestee but pertains to their behavior.

As a police officer my mandate is not one involving character development. However, if the appropriate, and lawful use of my discretion causes a violator to take responsibility for their unlawful actions, if they swallow their medicine of their own accord, and change their behavior, perhaps a lesson is learned and the greater good is served.

Open burning is a bad practice

TO THE EDITOR:

I see the Feb. 19 issue of the Cohasset Mariner announces: "Open Burning season has started". Last time the Mariner also ran a following informative piece that explained open burning contributes to global climate change by adding greenhouse gases, contributes to smog, and exacerbates breathing difficulties for those with asthma and other respiratory ailments (one in four in Massachusetts). On the other hand, brush piles offer wildlife habitat, and the brush quickly decomposes into earth-enriching compost, all while doing no harm — or the RTF accepts brush at certain times, and chips it for compost, aiding Earth and doing no harm.

I don't understand why the Mariner encourages a practice, which to me, is remarkably similar to smoking cigarettes. Society at large now recognizes the harm of smoking , and prohibits billboards advertising cigarettes, prohibits smoking in public places, etc. Yet the Mariner encourages a very similar activity. What is it that I'm not getting here?

Time to rein in the school budget

TO THE EDITOR:

Again we are faced with the cries of the School Committee for an override because they cannot balance the budget. For years we have watched the school committee in our Town fail to reduce their budget even when the school population dropped from 2,000 to 1,200. This year I have watched them on TV and they cannot think out of the box.

Every year they seem to have a budget crisis and claim that they cannot balance their budget. This year the superintendent is leaving. We have a small school system, during his tenure he has built a dynasty in administration. Why don't we hire a part time superintendent and save half of that salary. We should also have only two principals for the system so we should be able to save about $200,000 in that part of the budget.

Recently the Town of Brookline told the City of Boston it would be happy to take some of their students into the Brookline system for $9,500 payment of tuition per student per year. We should tell the state that we will continue to take METCO students but they must pay the same as we pay for each of our students. A few years ago I reviewed the METCO reimbursement and found the Town was receiving approximately $800 to teach each student. If the state cannot pay then we should drop the program and save the costs we are paying and the subsidy we provide.

We should also change the School Committee membership. They have shown that education is not their main concern. We now have "pretty" buildings at an overall cost in excess of $50 million. The full impact of that cost has yet to be included in the tax rate, so I am told. The taxpayers in this Town have supported the schools year after year. What we have received in return are mismanagement, overstaffing, and a serious lack of vision.

Years ago at Town Meeting Mr. Tower stood before us on two canes and said, " Remember this is a small Town". We only have approximately 2,900 taxpayers in the Town and our burden increases yearly. It is time to say no. I urge everyone to go to Town Meeting and vote no on the school budget. I also urge everyone to go to the polls and vote for sensible leadership. We need some discipline in the budget process. The Town side appears to have control over their side of the budget and is even picking up a share of the school budget. The schools are out of control with their spending and must be brought under control. If an override is presented I urge you to go to the polls and vote no.

Biased school override story was off the mark

TO THE EDITOR:

I am a long time Cohasset resident who enjoys reading the Mariner for news and commentary. For commentary I am accustomed to reading "editorials" in a particular section of your paper. Imagine my surprise when your front-page article in the Feb 19 Mariner expressed your personal views and wishes and not news related to an override request that is still being formulated.

I take exception at your definition of the School Committee's duties in your opening sentence. Referring to Mass Law Chap 71 regarding the powers and duties of a school committee, I see nowhere that they are to, as you say, "lobby for the schools". The most effective and appropriate advocating or "lobbying" for the schools is done be concerned citizens, parents and the Cohasset school system's superintendent. A "lobbyist" for the schools would not typically take into consideration the limited resources of our town and the taxpayers that are footing the bills.

Although the School Committee has the oversight responsibilities for the school budget, it must and should work within the context of the needs and resources of our town as a whole. We are in this predicament, perhaps, because the School Committee has, in fact, been lobbying solely for the schools and not taking into consideration the other demands on our town's resources.

I would hope your editorializing would help promote the idea that the School Committee should be looking out for the interests and the welfare of not only the students and teachers, but taxpayers and the many town employees who both pay the bills and also have a stake in the town's financial condition.

HEALTH NOTES

DEP cutbacks have local impact

Health officers forum conducted

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Last Thursday, the Department of Environmental Protection and the Massachusetts Health Officer's Association held their annual winter conference in Wilmington to discuss various issues of general importance. This meeting is a time for the DEP to provide interpretations of their various rulings and tell us what's in store rule-wise for the future. It is also used by the various Boards of Health to swap news and ideas about what's happening in their respective towns.

For example, the Cohasset Board of Health had a good conversation with Bruce Capman, Health Agent for the Town of Hingham, in which he described his new software for keeping health records. Cohasset has the same system and we've had limited success with it. The difference seems to be in the relative size of the two towns. Hingham is about three times the size of Cohasset in terms of population, and processes a similar proportion of health transactions. Hingham's income from permitting is more than $1 million. Cohasset's is about 1/10 of that. The Hingham system links all the Town offices – Health; Conservation, Accounting, Assessors, Building, etc. electronically. The result is a much more efficient permitting transaction system and more income. Cohasset's records software is only available to the Board of Health. We are looking into the feasibility to change over, but there seems to be little enthusiasm for change because of the massive disruption it would cause. In a small town like Cohasset, it may not be worth the aggravation. Nevertheless, we'll be looking into it, since the cost for a complete town wide e-system for Hingham is 4 percent of fees, which gets them, free upgrades and system support.

There will be more presumptive approvals; that is, local boards will not have to seek state approval for a number of provisions for which state approval is now needed.

Other things, which happened at the MHOA meeting, was the summary of Title 5 changes, which should go into effect this summer. There will be a change in the way bedroom counts are made to determine septic system size, and small changes making it easier to install composting toilets. There will be slightly relaxed rules for percolation tests, and some changes to the use and approval regulations relating to so called 'innovative/advanced systems.

Edward Kunce told us that the DEP will have lost 25 percent of its staff by summer, and described how they would operate in the face of such cutbacks. There will be more presumptive approvals; that is, local boards will not have to seek state approval for a number of provisions for which state approval is now needed. Use of the web will be more widespread with a new web look coming soon, and almost all documentation including forms will now be available on line.

There will be increased surveillance of small water supplies, which serve fewer than 15 people. This in recognition that many small retail facilities may be using wells which may be contaminated by nearby sources of pollution like underground tank leakage. Several such scenarios have been reported to the DEP. This problem, for Cohasset can probably be addressed by adding additional questions to the already thorough procedure used by town food inspectors in their regular inspections of establishments serving food and beverages.

In all, the MHOA is a useful enterprise in which we get a bigger picture of the current health issues and what our colleagues are doing about them. Plus, it's a time to swap gossip and gab with those doing our job in other towns.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Land acquisitions could help local water supply

The Water Department and the Open Space Committee are proposing four articles at Town Meeting to protect the remaining open space in the Lily Pond watershed.

"The Water Department has changed its approach to protecting the water supply and has now decided to acquire as much open space in the watershed as possible," Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt said. "We used to try to place restrictions on uses, but recent studies have shown that existing development in the watershed has been taking a toll on Lily Pond.

"Nutrient loaded runoff from homes and businesses is causing the pond to become eutrophic, and lose depth and capacity. We think it is imperative that we minimize development as much as possible," he said.

One area the Water Department and Open Space Committee is trying to protect is a 70 acre area between Lily Pond and Whitney Woods, which they are calling the Brass Kettle Brook Conservation Area.

"This is the most incredible place to walk," saysDebbie Cook, chairman of the Open Space Committee, who lives on the edge of this land. "There are trails that can take you from the Water Department all the way through Whitney Woods to Turkey Hill Reservation. You can also connect to Wompatuck State Park."

She noted two stream systems, including Brass Kettle Brook run through this property, which also has hemlocks, white pines, fantastic granite outcroppings, swamps, vernal pools, and plenty of upland for development.

"Nutrient loaded runoff from homes and businesses is causing the pond to become eutrophic, and lose depth and capacity. We think it is imperative that we minimize development as much as possible."
— Glenn Pratt, Water Commission

The Trustees of Reservations are currently doing a biological assessment of all the species that are in this 70-acre tract, and note that it is one of the only areas in all of Southeastern Massachusetts to be included on the state's Biomap. The Biomap was created by the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs to be a blueprint of biodiversity "hotspots" in Massachusetts – mapping the most important terrestrial and wetland ecosystems that support the state's diversity of life. From the state's perspective these areas are top priority to save from development.

Estimated to cost roughly $1.4 million, the land is divided into a number of parcels, many of which are owned by Cohasset families, who received the property through inheritance. In fact, most of the land is composed of historic woodlots that were granted several hundred years ago, so people could have access to wood for building and fuel. This land will be acquired over a period of time, working carefully with the landowners to ensure that it is a win-win proposition for everyone involved.

Funding will come from a number of organizations, which are partnering to raise the funds without additional taxes, including the Cohasset Conservation Trust, the Trustees of Reservations, the Water Department and the Community Preservation Fund (subject to Town Meeting approval).

"The Water Department believes the Brass Kettle Brook Conservation area, along with the other land purchases we hope to make, will protect our water supply far better than trying to regulate fertilizer and chemical runoff from the potentially great number of houses that can be built right in our watershed," said Pratt.

Friends of the Brass Kettle Brook Conservation area are meeting every Sunday afternoon, 4 p.m. at the First Parish House to save this land from development, and welcome anyone who is interested to join them. Also donations to help purchase these 70 acres are being accepted by the Cohasset Conservation Trust, P.O. Box 314, Cohasset, MA 02025. Donations are fully tax-deductible. Please note that the donation is for BKBC. For more information, call Debbie Cook 383-6313 or Glenn Pratt 383-0048.

Crows and ravens — a study in black

A BIRDER'S-EYE VIEW

JOANNE C. NORTON

Crows and ravens are considered symbols of death, omens of bad luck, and messengers of evil. The term "crow's nest" for the high lookout seat on a ship's mast comes from the fact that crows nest at the top of tall trees. Edgar Allen Poe wrote a famous poem called "The Raven". Several of Aesop's Fables feature crows. Hitchcock used ravens and crows, I believe, in his movie "The Birds".

Crows and ravens are totally black birds. They have black feathers, black beaks, black eyes, and black legs and feet. Despite this they do not belong to the blackbird family. Instead they belong to the corvid family along with magpies and jays. In New England we have American Crows, Fish Crows and Common Ravens. Altogether there are four species of crow and two ravens found in North America.

Most people can recognize certain birds as being crows. Many do not realize that some of the crows they see may actually be Fish Crows, not American Crows (formerly known as Common Crows). These two birds look almost identical, the size difference not being a reliable tool for identification. The best way to tell the two apart is by their calls. The American Crow's most common call is a loud "caw, caw" sound. The Fish Crow has a much more nasal sounding "caah" or "ca-eh". Young American Crows sound a lot like Fish Crows, making identification by voice difficult for a few months of the year. Common Ravens have a deep croaking sound. When I hear it unexpectedly through the trees it reminds of a human in distress.

Corvids are generally considered to be among the most intelligent of birds. Crows cache food and can find it later, demonstrating memory. They use over 20 distinct calls to communicate among themselves. Crows use older siblings to help raise a new batch of young. This level of cooperation indicates some intelligence. They will work together to mob predators such as owls, their raucous activity usually resulting in the offender moving away. Juvenile crows and ravens take part in activities that look like play. Whether they are truly playing, or whether they are engaging in activities that will help them develop skills needed later in life is debatable. Crows and ravens can be taught to mimic, and ravens, especially, demonstrate definite problem-solving abilities. Experiments have shown some aptitude for counting. There are reports of the New Caledonian Crow making and using hooked tools from twigs.

Farmers tend to dislike crows, because they eat newly planted corn or other grains, also hen eggs, and even the occasional young chick. On the other hand, they also consume quantities of harmful insects, which should make them a friend of the farmer. The scarecrows put up in fields are probably of more interest to people driving by than a deterrent to crows. Crows and ravens, being scavengers and omnivores, will eat almost anything, including carrion, roadkills, and scraps picked up after picnickers or at landfills.

During the non-breeding season crows roost together in very large numbers. Hundreds of thousands or even millions of birds may fly late in the day to congregate in one area. A locally famous roost is near the Framingham Mall. The mess from droppings and the noise from so many birds is not a pleasant scene. Scientists still do not understood why crows gather to spend the night together in such large numbers.

Common Ravens are larger than crows and are our largest perching bird. They can be told from crows by the shape of their tail, which is wedge-shaped, not rounded. This is a good field mark in flight or when the bird is seen sitting upright on a branch. They are more apt to be found at higher elevations and usually prefer forests and wild areas to more populated places. In recent years, however, they have begun to turn up more often in settled areas. In Prudhoe Bay, Alaska, the Common Raven is the only bird species that has been reported on their Christmas Bird Count for at least the past 10 years. Coyotes and wolves are often alerted to potential prey by the calls of ravens. Ravens are then rewarded with a chance to finish off the carcass when the mammals have had enough.

A number of people have remarked to me that they are seeing fewer crows than in the past. This could be partly due to the mosquito-borne West Nile Virus, partly to the capping of the dump, and perhaps to other factors as well. The West Nile Virus first appeared in crows in New York City in 1999. Over 100 species of birds have been found since then to have the virus, but crows and jays seem to be particularly vulnerable. Time will tell whether their numbers will continue to decline, or whether they will rebound.

There is a lot more to learn about crows and their relatives. If you are interested in helping as an amateur birder, check out Urban Bird Studies Program run by Cornell Lab of Ornithology. Party girl gets birthday surprise

ON THE BRIGHT SIDE

JEANE DALY

I was invited to a surprise 50th birthday party for my friend Stephanie. Her two sons and daughter had been planning this party for months and wanted everything to be just perfect.

Her youngest son, Mark, was in charge of parking the guests' cars around the corner to insure the surprise factor. I've known Mark since he was a toddler and I must say I was a little reluctant to pass my car keys over to him, as I recalled all the skid marks he had left on the street outside my driveway.

Scott, her oldest son, had taken her out for a birthday dinner and when they arrived home, we all were to jump out and surprise her.

Everything went as planned and she was thrilled by the thoughtful gesture her kids had made on her behalf. Her daughter Kristin, who is quite a character, had something more in store than birthday cake and ice cream for her shy, sweet mother. She hired a male stripper to entertain.

About an hour into the festivities, the doorbell rang and the birthday girl answered the door. A huge man clad in hospital scrubs, mask, stethoscope, gloves, and all bounced into the room, carrying a blaring boom box. He sat the birthday girl down and began stripping to the pulsating rhythm of the loud music. The guests howled and hooted as he gyrated, swung, and grunted his way around the room. The birthday girl sat red-faced with her mouth hanging open, as her daughter doubled over with laughter.

The doc wiggled and pelvic tilted his remaining piece of outer wear to the floor and stood directly in front of Stephaney with a shiny, silver grape leaf draped over his . . . Stephaney, a nurse, has seen little bottoms and big bottoms, but this was too much! He squirmed, shimmied, dipped and bent, and did other remarkable movements with his muscular, tanned body.

The other gals, mostly 50-plus, myself, included, were cheering him on. The guest of honor sat with a bewildered glazed expression on her pale face, saying, "Oh, My God!"

I noticed the doctor smiled even more as he danced in front of the birthday girl, the reason being he was watching his own reflection in the mirror behind her chair. Great, he brought his own date to the party and it was obvious the two were madly in love.

Peeling off his silver leaf, he continued to bounce around the room, gyrating in front of all the hysterical ladies. They jammed bills down the remaining tiny gold fig leaf.

He wiggled back in front of Stephaney and shimmied up and down her shaking leg. I've never seen anyone look so miserable at their own party. I thought if this joker doesn't stop pretty soon, she's not going to make it to her 51st birthday.

She bent forward in her seat and in a kind, gentle voice said, "Does your mother know you do this, dear?" Everyone screamed with laughter. He told her he was a delivery driver for a national company in the daytime and his mother was proud of that. In a small voice, she replied, "Isn't that nice."

Now, every time I see one of those delivery drivers, I grin and wonder if his mom knows where he really is when he says he's working overtime.

Self-healing art

Saturday, March 6 at 1 p.m. in the Meeting Room, for an introduction to Qi Gong by Lin Lin Choy. Qi Gong is a Chinese self-healing art that combines movement and meditation. Together with natural breathing and focus, these exercises will improve balance, increase suppleness, strengthen bones, joints and tendons and promote general good health. Suitable for all ages, Qi Gong is particularly beneficial for those of middle age and seniors.

Artist reception

Stephanie Roberts' exhibit "Patterns and Pinhole" will be on display at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Cohasset from March 1 through April 30. The public is invited to a reception for the artist which will be held at the library on March 7 from 5 to 7 p.m.

The exhibit will feature woven mixed media works and sepia toned pinhole photographs. The woven cyanotype mixed media pieces are first printed from pinhole photography, cut into strips and woven together. Patterns are cut within them as well as painted and sewn. The photographic images reflect a memory or place and the patterning is a metaphor for the cycles in life.

The sepia toned pinhole photographs were taken on a trip to San Miguel Mexico this past October-November during their holidays "All Saints Day" and "The Day of the Dead." Festive gravesites and Ruins in Pozos will be featured. Stephanie has exhibited nationally and regionally and has won many awards and honors, including a residency at the Vermont Studio Center. Her work is included in public and private collections.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Louis S. Harvey

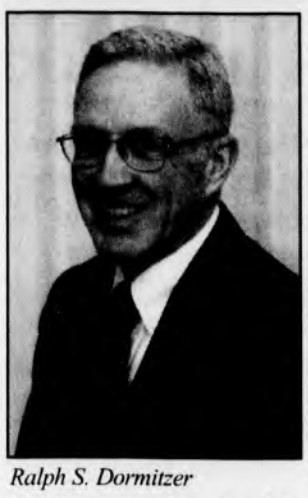
Harvey to run for selectman

Louis S. Harvey has announced his candidacy for the Board of Selectmen.

Harvey recognizes the critical need to protect and restore the quality of life in Cohasset. "Protecting our quality of life requires major improvement in leadership, communication and fiscal responsibility on the Board and across all the component parts of Town government," Harvey says.

Reforming Town government, after decades of eroding "business as usual" politics, will take more than one person on the Board. Harvey has collaborated with Ralph S. Dormitzer to create a dynamic team of highly competent leaders that are dedicated to protecting and restoring the quality of life in Cohasset.

"Our Town will now have an opportunity to vote on whether it's time for fundamental change in the way the Town is run and secondly, if Ralph and I are the team to make the changes," Harvey says.



The fundamental changes that Harvey and Dormitzer will make include foresight to avoid expensive pitfalls, open and responsive dialog with the people of the Town, transparency in decision-making and active oversight of the various Town budgets to bring an end to escalating taxes and annual overrides. The need for foresight is exemplified by the past spending on school buildings without considering the funding needed for utilities and maintenance once the buildings are done.

"We must decide if the leadership skills, communication and fiscal controls that are in place today are adequate to manage our Town" says Harvey, adding "If Town government is not adequate, then you must further decide if Ralph and I are the team to bring it to an acceptable level".

Harvey's natural calm demeanor, sharp mind, articulate communication and ability to deal with people are complemented by his vast experience at the highest levels of business and the non-profit sector.

He has been a resident of Cohasset for 13 years and has participated in a number of local initiatives including the "Narrative History of Cohasset," acquisition of the old Paul Pratt library building for the Historical Society, development of educational materials for the school system, CP Harvey Jazz program.

Harvey is the chief executive at DALBAR, Inc. the nations leading financial services research company with operations in Boston, Toronto and London. He is trustee, treasurer and is chairman of the finance committee of Plimoth Plantation. He has held governance positions in private businesses, cultural institutions, academic institutions and the nations leading securities regulator.

Ralph S. Dormitzer

Dormitzer announces his bid for selectman

Ralph S. Dormitzer is pleased to announce his candidacy for one of the two open positions on the Cohasset Board of Selectmen. In a unique and interesting approach to the contest, Dormitzer and Louis S. Harvey, who is also a candidate for selectman, are running as a team with the same platform and will appear together in many of the scheduled campaign events. They are running together because they believe that the two of them together can be more effective than either one alone.

Both Dormitzer and Harvey believe that, above all, the people of Cohasset want assurance that the leadership of the town represents their interests impartially, with wisdom and effectiveness. Fundamental to these goals is the willingness to listen, to communicate, and to lead.

"We believe that the characteristics which have made the town such an attractive place are inexorably slipping away. Whether defined as quality of life or character of the town, these qualities go to the essence of why we love to be here and to extol Cohasset's virtues to our friends," Dormizter says. "The character of the town derives from the natural beauty of its geography, its open spaces and public places." Dormitzer and Harvey believe it is the town's obligation to preserve these.

Historically, the town has been hospitable to diverse groups of people, those who made their living in the town as well as those who commuted to work. And, when they retired from work they could afford to remain here. Those options must remain open to Cohasset residents today."

Cohasset has been the beneficiary of the talent, time, creativity and generosity of hundreds of individuals whose volunteer contributions surround us," Dormitzer says. "We continue to welcome your insights and help. Finally, families choose to live in Cohasset because it is an enriching and safe place for their children to grow up. It must continue to be so."

Dormitzer brings to the position a background both in business and in local community activities. Beginning in 1967, when he, his wife Jacqueline and sons Philip and Paul moved to Cohasset, he led Saint Anthony's Christian Education Program. He served on the Cohasset School Committee from 1973 to 1976 and was a member of the School Facilities Committee and the Sewer Site Selection Committee. He took a leadership position in the petition drive to protect the character of the village. Now he is the co-chair of the Community Advisory Committee representing Cohasset and 28 other towns in the greater Boston area before Massport and the FAA in a $3.1M aircraft noise abatement study.

Dormitzer has an extensive background in business. He has been an advisor and investor in several high-tech startups. He founded and was the president and CEO of NxtWave Communications. He was president and CEO of Asante Technologies and took that company public in a successful IPO. At Digital Equipment Corporation he managed several hundred people in the development and marketing of Digital's networking products, and as VP of Electro Powerpacs he managed the design, manufacture and sales of products used for medical and instrumentation applications.

Dormitzer has a BA degree from Harvard University. In addition to their two sons, Dormitzer and his wife Jacqueline have four grandchildren, two of whom live in the town and attend Cohasset schools.

Beacon Hill Roll Call

By Bob Katzen
beaconhill@aol.com
February 20, 2004

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE- BHRC records local senators' votes on one roll calls and local representatives' votes on three roll calls from prior sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

$600,000 FOR INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INVESTMENT (H 4330)

House 118-34, Senate 32-5, overrode Gov. Romney's $600,000 veto reduction (from $1.1 million to $500,000) in additional funding for the Massachusetts Office of International Trade and Investment (MOITI). This funding would supplement $169,390 that the Legislature approved for the office in May. Override supporters said MOITI boosts the economy and creates jobs by working to attract foreign companies to Massachusetts and increases exports by marketing Massachusetts businesses internationally. They argued that the full $1.1 million is necessary to ensure that MOITI has sufficient funds to do its job and noted that the reduction to $169,390 has devastated the functions of this office that was funded at $1.1 million last year. Override opponents said the reduction to $169,390 was made because of the state's deficit and budget cuts and argued that the additional $500,000 is sufficient for this office to do its job. They urged the Legislature to preserve the state's funds for fiscal 2005 in order to prevent drastic cuts in important programs and avoid tax hikes. (A "Yea" vote is for the additional $600,000. A "Nay" vote is against the additional $600,000).

$180,000 FOR CONCILIATION AND ARBITRATION (H 4330)

House 133-22 (Senate has not yet voted), overrode Gov. Romney's veto of an additional $180,000 for the operation of the Board of Conciliation and Arbitration. This funding would supplement $514,978 that the Legislature approved for the board in May. The board's function is to assist in negotiating collective bargaining agreements and resolve labor disputes in both the public and private sectors through fact-finding, mediation and arbitration. Override supporters said the additional funding is necessary for the operation of this board that plays an important role in resolving many disputes. They noted that the prompt settlement of these disputes is important to the economy because it saves time, money and jobs. Override opponents said the $514,978 is sufficient to operate this board. They argued that the state should not spend every surplus dollar it has when it is facing up to a $2 billion deficit in the fiscal 2005 budget. (A "Yea" vote is for the additional $180,000. A "Nay" vote is against the additional $180,000).

$3 MILLION FOR BROWNFIELDS INSURANCE (H 4328)

House 157-0 (Senate has not yet voted), overrode Gov. Romney's $3 million veto reduction (from $6 million to $3 million) in funding for the Brownfield Redevelopment Access to Capital Fund (BRAC). This funding would supplement $1 million that the Legislature approved for BRAC in May. The fund subsidizes environmental insurance for developers and lenders involved in the redevelopment of brownfields and protects them by reducing the risk of cost overruns, unanticipated environmental costs and unanticipated environmental liability. Brownfields are abandoned or underused commercial or industrial sites that are contaminated and hazardous. The state created a program in 1998 to offer financial and other incentives to developers who are willing to take a risk in developing these sites. Override supporters said the additional $3 million is necessary for BRAC to adequately subsidize this key environmental insurance that protects developers and lenders. They noted that many developers cannot afford this costly insurance on their own but many banks will only provide loans if the project is backed by this insurance. They argued that these projects stimulate the economy by developing underutilized sites, creating jobs and revitalizing surrounding communities. In his veto message, Gov. Romney said that he reduced this funding by $3 million in order to preserve limited resources. (A "Yea" vote is for the additional $3 million).

ALSO UPON BEACON HILL

SENIORS AND PROP 2 1/2 (H 4470)- The House gave near final approval to and sent to the Senate a bill allowing cities and towns to exempt qualified low-income senior citizens 65 and older from paying additional taxes resulting from Proposition 2 1/2 overrides. The exemption applies to homes valued under $500,000 owned by single seniors whose annual income is less than $43,000 and senior couples with an income less than $64,000. The measure also makes a change in the state's current so-called senior circuit breaker law that gives up to a maximum $810 state tax rebate to qualified low-income seniors whose property tax bills exceed ten percent of their annual income. Under current law, the rebate is given to seniors who meet low-income guidelines and who own a home that is worth not more than $432,000. The bill would raise the allowable value of the home to $500,000. Supporters said that these increased tax breaks would help many struggling low-income elderly homeowners on fixed incomes remain in their homes. They noted that the exemption is a local option one that allows cities and towns to decide whether to implement it. Opponents said the proposal is craftily designed to discourage seniors from voting against overrides and warned that other struggling younger taxpayers would end up paying the exempt seniors' portion of the property tax hike. Opponents also objected to the bill being approved without debate and without a roll call vote at a sparsely attended informal House session during the February school vacation week.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

For selectmen:
Where do you stand on the need for a Prop. 2-1/2 override to help balance the fiscal year 2005 budget?

SELECTMAN/ Rob Spofford

Although I wish it could be avoided, after careful consideration and deliberation I am convinced that an override this year is necessary. Continued reductions in state aid, increases in enrollment at our schools and the increased utility costs to maintain our new and substantially enlarged facilities all point to the need for an override.

The proposed operating budget of $30.6 million reflects fixed costs (contracted salaries, insurance, utilities and debt) of over 95 percent. While it will be important to implement strategies to help better manage these costs going forward, for this fiscal year these costs are set. After reviewing the remaining discretionary amount of less than 5 percent and considering the substantial cuts already made, including three teacher positions, I believe taking any additional action would directly impact our ability to deliver the core services that we as a community have determined are required.

A good public official knows that with their position comes a responsibility to understand the total financial implications of their decisions on every citizen. With this in mind, I am specifically concerned for our senior citizens and others on fixed incomes. My commitment as selectman would be to continue to pursue and explore additional ways to provide tax relief to those citizens needing it most. Based on my research, many other communities, facing similar situations, have more progressive programs that should be considered here in Cohasset and I will lead the efforts with our Town Treasurer to actively understand and pursue each.

Rest assured, that any future budget that comes before me as selectman will face the same level of scrutiny, discipline and questioning that I have demonstrated over the past 8 years to the fiscally responsible, on-time and budget, $52 million school renovation projects and which I do every day in running my own business.

SELECTMAN/ Lou Harvey

Town government is planning to spend more tax money than it expects to take in over the next year. The perennial answer from the Town is to hike your taxes.

I propose, instead, to deal with this problem in two fiscally responsible ways. The first is to set priorities for the expenditures that are most important to our Town. The second is to find the most cost-effective and efficient way to manage those priorities.

The top priority for our society is the education of its children. I propose making the schools' academic programs the top priority, followed by the protection services of police and fire and preserving the character of the Town. Other priorities include roadways, safety, sewer system, etc. After deciding on what priorities we can afford, we should adopt a fee for service structure for non-priority items so as not to impact our tax rates.

In this way we do not cut into the most important services while preserving the less important.

Setting priorities is not enough to meet the obligation to taxpayers. It is also critical we ensure that we get maximum value for each dollar spent. Spending a $1/4 million with waste such as leaving lights, heat and showers on at schools while not in use, needs to be stopped. Spending hundreds of thousands of dollars on police department discipline is a waste. Outsourcing cleaning services but retaining the janitors is a waste.

For the School Committee:
Where do you stand on the need for a Prop. 2-1/2 override to help balance the fiscal year 2005 budget?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Adrienne MacCarthy

About a week and half ago, the School Committee had a joint meeting with our Selectmen and our Advisory Committee. At this meeting, the School Committee presented their fiscal 2005 budget highlights and they also present their complete budget book, for review. This is an important process.

I believe in a transparent budget process and in the cooperative sharing of ideas and concerns between the town boards. Then, we can feel confident through this process that the need to protect the integrity of our schools and our town services will be addressed. So ultimately, my decision to support this override is being based on this open process. I look forward to continuing to following the process, which is still underway.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Scott O'Grady

Some things we can control; some things we cannot. Two years of cuts in state aid to Cohasset are clearly out of our control. State and federal education mandates, many of which are unfunded or underfunded at those levels, are also out of our control. When faced with funding crises based on these issues, we have the option to increase property tax rates to cover budget shortfalls.

The current budget crisis in our schools, however, arises from issues over which we do have control. I believe that in two important areas, we together must reassess our decision making processes, and decide whether we can incorporate a principle of thrift into the assumptions that we bring to bear.

First, in contract negotiations, it appears to me that our incumbent leadership does not in principle accept the limitations of proposition 2-1/2. This is a critical area on which the town must achieve some kind of consensus. Working within 2-1/2 and the multiyear schedule that Mark Haddad has developed for periodic override requests, we can maintain a contractual equilibrium that will obviate the budget brinksmanship that forces us to choose between yet another override and the loss of teachers, activities, or services at our schools.

Second, in the issue of energy consumption, hindsight shows us that we failed to build modern energy efficiencies into our new schools. This is an omission for which we are all culpable, for failing to emphasize thrift as a priority.

Thrift is not stinginess. Sometimes, as in the case of energy efficiency, it means spending more now to save in the long run. It is a quintessential New England value, and one that I feel has not been a principle of the current school committee. For this reason I oppose the 2005 override.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Jamie Williams

I moved to Cohasset in 1992, drawn by a superior school system for my children. Overrides, then, occurred every three years. Today we face overrides every year. As a community, we can agree that maintaining quality schools has created a pattern of fiscal instability — seven overrides in seven years. This method of overspend/override budgeting must end.

I believe we must be fiscally responsible to meet upcoming challenges. We will be successful only if our goals and objectives are prioritized, communicated and managed. It is essential that we develop a master plan for the schools to prepare for future needs, anticipating the effects of rising enrollment and decreased state funding. A superior education cannot be safeguarded by relying on risky taxpayer overrides that may, or may not be passed.

The proposed override for the 2005 school budget is still a work in progress. Should an override go on the ballot and fail, the Town Manager stated that "it is not clear if the schools would shoulder the entire $400,000 cut...or if the town would share the cuts." While the situation is still unclear, as a taxpayer I disagree with this override and am alarmed at the lack of foresight that has brought us to this point. As a parent, however, I am backed into a corner and forced to weigh the threatened erosion of my children's education against another increase in my taxes. I breathe a heavy sigh of dissatisfaction that must be

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Pat Martin

When the citizens of Cohasset stand in the voting box on April 3 to decide whether this override should be passed, they will truly be deciding the future of the school system and the level of education it will provide to the children in years to come. This community decision comes at a difficult time for most people. Although the economy is supposedly improving, many are struggling with increased costs of living. The school budget is not unlike many personal financial situations of less money coming in and more money being required.

Over the past two years, the schools have received significantly less in state aid while the costs of providing an education need for anagement or areas already

examined can only be made by someone not fully facing the facts which are these. The School Committee can cut nor more without significantly affecting the quality of education provided. And, should the override fail, it is likely needed to make an additional $400,000 in cuts. This is without even considering the possibility of hinted further reductions in state aid again this year.

This is the decision the community will need to make. It is that simple and that scary. Knowing that an override failure will mean the loss of team sports and class sizes of 28 or more children. I will support the override and consider it an investment in both the future of my children and the town of Cohasset.

For the Planning Board:
Is the Senior Overlay District Bylaw more than the town bargained for?

PLANNING BOARD/ Stuart Ivimey

We need to strengthen the 'sunset provision' of the by-law. This will protect Cohasset's character from being destroyed by the unintended development of hundreds of new condominium/townhouse units.

The by-law sunsets (becomes void) once 20 percent of Cohasset's housing stock consists of multi-family units.

When Town Meeting approved the by-law, its proponents believed duplexes would "count" against the 20 percent cap; however, the town's attorney later ruled that "multi-family" buildings must contain three units. The town has 2,891 housing units — 250 are "multi-family" (8.6 percent). The by-law sunsets once 328 new units are permitted. This shortfall is already made up by Avalon (200), Cedarmere (104) and Cook Estate (90) – total 394.

The problem arises when we consider the impact of the lawsuits that are challenging Cedarmere and Avalon. These projects do not count against the 20 percent cap during the litigation; however, if they win, both projects will be built. In addition, any developer who files for a permit before the resolution of these lawsuits and receives one, will also build his project. This will result in the construction an additional 300 units, bringing the potential total of new condominium construction to over 720 units.

I fully support both the by-law change amendment on the warrant for Town Meeting this Spring, and an immediate effort to change parts of the Planning Board's regulations to limit new units in the permitting 'pipeline'.

We must protect the Cook Estate senior development from these proposed changes. The Planning Board must fast track the Cook Estate project to ensure that it is developed and its units are counted against the by-law's 20percent cap.

PLANNING BOARD/ Joe Nedrow

The short answer is no.

The creation of the Senior Overlay District was advocated by the Senior Housing Committee. They were concerned about the lack of housing options for neighbors and friends who no longer needed or had the ability to maintain large houses. The committee looked to see what other communities have done to solve this problem. Many felt the establishment of Senior Housing Overlay Districts were their most successful strategy in creating housing opportunities for the senior population.

Simply put, a senior overlay district modifies local zoning bylaws to allow for a higher density of housing units on a given parcel than regular zoning provides. Additionally in Cohasset, the bylaw only applies to parcels of land that are ten acres or more. All such parcels in town have already been identified by other town committees concerned about open space, growth, development, and conservation. Any attempt to develop any of these parcels would no doubt have vigorous and viable competition by open space advocates.

Even a worst case scenario where all available parcels were developed using the overlay regulations, a case could be made that the fiscal impact on the town would be better than if the same properties were developed under regular zoning bylaws. Again this is not a concept unique to Cohasset, but rather a program that has worked well in other communities and highly recommended by state agencies and housing advocates.

Next week's questions:

For the Planning Board: What guarantees can you provide that the new Cohasset Master Plan won't just sit on the shelf and collect dust?

For Selectmen: Would an independent study of the Cohasset Police Department be beneficial?

For the School Committee: Are teachers' salaries the problem with the school budget?

Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by 5 p.m., Monday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. Items may also be dropped off at Cohasset News on Brook Street. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Monday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

Planning Board weighs in on five zoning articles

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Planning Board had its chance to weigh in on the proposed zoning articles for the Town Meeting Warrant last week, and voted to recommend only one of the five which came before it.

Up for discussion were article seven, which pertains to large house site plan review, article 8 regarding earth removal, article 9 regarding non-conforming uses, article 11 which deals with political signs, and article 12, which proposes changes to the current Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw.

Although the Planning Board is the sponsor of article 12, which would change the wording of the sunset clause of the Senior Overlay bylaw, the majority of the board did not vote to recommend it. With the resignation of Chris Ford from the board, there are now only four voting members, and three of them voted against the amendment. Peter Pratt was in the minority when he cast his vote in favor.

"I think we have a moral obligation to Town Meeting," said Pratt, adding because the definition of "multi-family" has changed drastically since the bylaw was originally written, the bylaw should be changed to reflect the new meaning.

When it was originally written, the bylaw was meant to "sunset," meaning development would stop once 20 percent of the town's housing stock is deemed multi-family residences. However, after the bylaw was passed, Pratt said Town Counsel determined the definition of a multi-family residence includes dwellings that can accommodate three or more inhabitants, not two or more as had been previously thought. Therefore, many apartments already existing in town that were thought to "count" toward the town's total affordable housing stock suddenly did not. Pratt said Town Counsel has therefore advised the Planning Board to change the bylaw from 20 percent to 15 percent, in order to help control the number of senior housing units that could come before the town.

"This is not an effort to shut out the Cook Estate," said Pratt, adding by changing the bylaw, it won't prevent any projects that are already in the pipeline from moving forward.

Although the Planning Board did not recommend the article, it will still move forward to be included on the warrant at Town Meeting. However, the Board of Selectmen discussed the vote at its meeting Tuesday and Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris said she wondered if the Planning Board would want to keep the article on the warrant when the majority of the board does not support it. Pratt is slated to come before Selectmen next Tuesday and is expected to give that answer.

The board voted to indefinitely postpone article seven, which deals with large home site plan review, but that article will still move forward on the warrant. However, the board also voted to indefinitely postpone the earth removal and non-conforming uses articles, which will not move forward because their sponsor, the Growth and Development Committee, voted to have them removed.

The one zoning article the Planning Board unanimously chose to recommend was number 11, the political signs bylaw. Although the article was included on the fall Special Town Meeting Warrant, the meeting was dissolved for a lack of a quorum before it could be discussed. However, because the Planning Board had not taken action on the article previously, it was going to be dropped on the floor of Town Meeting anyway.

Selectman Fred Koed has been the driving force behind the political signs article from the very beginning. He said the reason Cohasset began to take a look at its political sign bylaw was because the town of Braintree has rewritten its bylaw when one similar to theirs was found to be unconstitutional. Because their bylaw treated political signs differently from other signs, changes were made so as not to inhibit free speech. Koed thought it would make sense for Cohasset to take a similar look at its bylaw to make sure it was not guilty of the same offense. Town Counsel reworked the bylaw for the fall Town Meeting, and the article has not changed since then.

The Town Meeting Warrant has been modified to reflect changes to the articles and the latest draft, dated Feb. 24, lists the zoning articles as follows: Article 7, large house site plan review, article 9, political signs, article 10, Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District.

Copies of the drafted Warrant are available at the library, the Town Clerk's office, Planning Board office and Selectmen's office. The Warrant will go to the printer on March 4. Town Meeting will be held Saturday, March 27 at 10 a.m. at the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium.

Cohasset's Kehoe, Strazzulla and Baroudi win state wrestling crowns

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

It had all the appeal of a Rocky movie, multiplied by three…really.

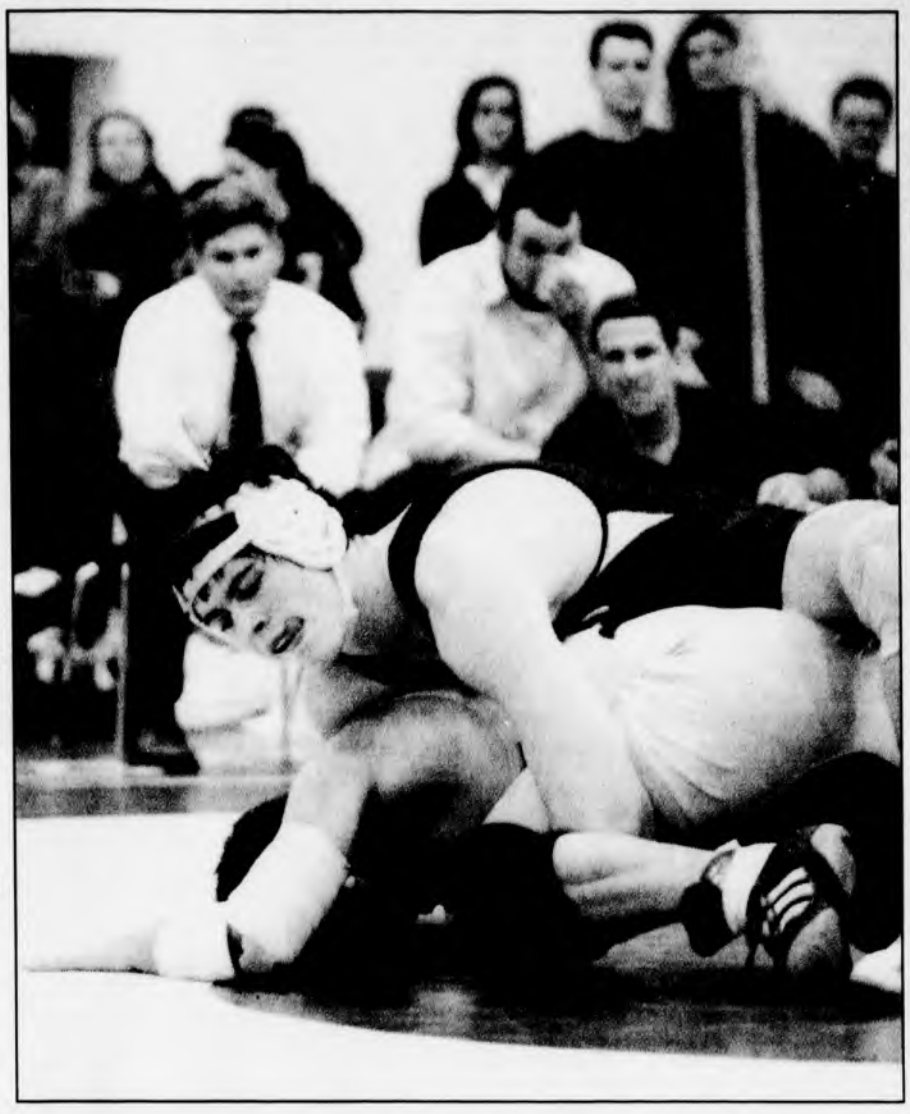
Indeed, what happened Saturday evening on the wrestling mats inside Cohasset High was stranger than any fiction even Sylvester Stallone could have concocted.

Three Cohasset wrestlers—Joey Kehoe, Phil Strazzulla and Matt Baroudi-- all underdogs after taking second place in their respective weight classes at the previous weekend's South Sectional meet, first bucked the odds by getting back to the finals in a much more difficult statewide Div. 3 field, and then outright defied those odds by winning state championships in front of their home town fans—and, seemingly just to make it that much better of a story, all three won their state crowns in dramatic down-to-the wire fashion.

Better still (really), the wins for Kehoe and Strazzulla came over the same wrestlers who'd topped them the previous week for the Sectional crowns.

So now it's on to the All-State championships at Salem High School this Saturday for coach Torin Sweeney and his three champs. The top six finishers in each weight class here will qualify for next week's New England championships in New Haven, Conn.

"Unbelievable," seemed all the normally loquacious Sweeney could say moments after Baroudi became his third state champion on the night, pulling out a thrilling 8-6 win with a takedown of Southwick's Kyle Davidson in overtime.



"Can we talk about it later on the phone?" the beaming coach finally requested, as people kept coming over to slap him on the back and shake his hand. No problem. Clearly, a little time was needed to absorb all that had taken place.

The evening, which is already being hailed from all precincts as the greatest in the short history of Cohasset High's Evie Dorr gymnasium, began with junior Joey Kehoe taking a 9-5 decision in the 140-pound state championship bout over top seed Brian Dietzel of Foxboro, the same wrestler who'd pinned him late in the Sectional title match a week earlier.

Kehoe scored first in this match with a takedown, but Dietzel answered that with 35 seconds left in the first period to

Jeckyl or Hyde?

Which CHS icemen will show up for the postseason?

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

So…which Cohasset High hockey team will show up for the postseason?

If it's the Skippers team that produced a 4-2 win over perennial state power Westwood in the consolation game of the annual Bourne Freezeout Tourney on Friday, local fans can probably count on a nice long run.

If, however, it's the team that fell by a 5-1 score to Stoughton in the Freezeout opener just 24 hours earlier, one and done would seem a far likelier scenario.

"Yeah, we've been a Jeckyl and Hyde type team for a lot of this season, and those last two games showed us at our worst and best," conceded first year CHS head coach Ben Virga. "We ended up with one of our best efforts of the season, though, and it's better to go into the playoffs off that type of game.

The Skippers will open the postseason at the same place they ended their 11-6-3 regular season, at Bourne's Gallo Arena, where they'll take on Blue Hills for the third time this season on Saturday (time not yet announced). The two teams skated to a 4-4 tie back in late December, but the Skippers prevailed in go round number two a week ago Tuesday, 3-2.

While the confidence gained by that win coupled with Gallo's big ice surface, which would seem to benefit the strong skating Skippers, would appear to give Cohasset a couple of noteworthy advantages, coach Virga insists Blue Hills is one of the handful of teams he was really hoping to avoid in the postseason.

"Blue Hills is a very well coached team, and they play with a lot of discipline," said Virga, a former assistant coach

South Shore Christian no match for CHS hoopsters in tourney opener

By Lou Molinari
CORRESPONDENT

The most wins in a single season by a Cohasset High girls basketball team over the last 16 years has been six. As of Tuesday night, a 9 can be added on to the six for the Cohasset team. For first year Cohasset coach John LeVangie, he can now add another win to his career total of 314.

The Cohasset girls brought its record up to 15-6 with a runaway 59-13 win over South Shore Christian in the first round of the Div. 4 South Sectionals.

The Skippers now move on to the quarterfinal round of the championship chace, taking on the winner of top-seeded Harwich (20-0) going against 16th seeded Cathedral (11-10) Thursday. Besides being undefeated, Harwich is also the defending Div. 4 champion.

Harwich drew a bye in the pre-

CHS boys look to continue clutch play in postseason

The Div. 4 South sectional may have started last night, but Cohasset's tournament started two weeks ago.

Needing a sweep of their three-game homestand to get to 10 wins to reach the postseason, the Skippers did just that. Last night's game versus Millis will be the first test in seeing if that experience pays off, as the Cohasset boys face a tough challenge if they want to play beyond this weekend.

If they defeated Millis last night in a game that was played after the Mariner went to press, Cohasset would next travel to play number-one seed and undefeated West Bridgewater. If they get by that one, the Skippers

Mite C1

The Mite C-1's defeated Hingham 9-1 this week and the team played exceptionally well, but forwards Tommy Prendergast and Colby Comeau deserve credit for skating their best games of the season with both earning hat tricks. The game started quickly with Colby getting his first goal in the first two minutes followed a few minutes later by Tommy's first. With the confidence of a lead, everyone settled into their positions and the Team's hard work on passing was put to the test. The first line off the bench, with Pat Shea, Tommy Prendergast and Tucker Ambrose on offense, supported by Brodie Jackisch and Brendan O'Connell on defense, moved the puck around well and set up some great shots on goal. Brodie set up Tommy's second goal with a perfectly timed and placed pass, and Tommy's third came off a quick pass from Pat Shea at a faceoff, which Tommy took right to the net. The second line out, anchored by Charlie Blackington at center with Derek Benson and Colby Comeau on wing, worked smoothly with their defense, Jake Burchill and Adam Benson, and also passed well. Two very effective passes came from Adam who earned two assists when he put the puck first on Charlie's stick and then on Colby's, and both were able to score. Derek also had some good shots on goal and earned his own assist when he passed it in to Colby, who then scored his third. The last line out saw the most action from Hingham's offense giving Stars goalie Charley Michalowski a chance to show his stuff. Charley had several dramatic saves and was very sharp in goal. Good hustle from defensemen Brian Palmieri and Garret Leahy, as well as center Kevin Meehan, broke up several potential scoring bids by Hingham. In addition to good defense, the offense worked the puck well, demonstating their passing strength with winger Justin Fein setting up Kevin who scored a nice one. Moments later Winger Colin MacDonald had the goal of the game, which came from his stickhandling skills. Taking the puck away from the Hingham defense, he came around behind the net and tucked in a backhander, just like the pros. The Stars stepped it up for this one and did a good job using the skills they are learning.

Mite C3

Congratulations to the Coastal Stars Mites C-3 team for winning the 2004 Cranberry Cup Championship. After a week of hard fought victories the Coastal Stars were well represented in the final game which featured the C-3 team versus the Stars C-4 team. The C-3 mites emerged victorious with a 4-1 win after three periods of hard skating and quality scoring opportunities by both hockey teams. The Championship came as the result of an overall team effort and great goaltending by Max Hemingway who earned MVP honors. Additionally, the C-3 mites skated to their league leading 20th victory of the season with a decisive 6-1 victory over W/H/K. After a scoreless first period which featured spectacular saves by both Stars goaltender Sam Topham and the opposing W/H/K goaltender, center Andrew Tautkus opened the scoring in the second period. Andrew scored his first of two goals after receiving a pass from line mates Matthew Tautkus and Declan Leahy. Stars winger James Daley scored the second goal of the period breaking in on net after collecting a pass from fellow winger Mark McGoldrick and center Bryan Bowman. The third period started with Andrew Tautkus scoring his second goal of the contest carrying the puck from mid ice and beating the W/H/K net minder. Hard skating and aggressive play paid off for the forward line of Ryan Davis, Curtis Golden and Ryan Melia as constant offensive pressure led to a goal scored by Ryan Davis on a shot from between the circles. James Daley tallied the fifth Stars goal finishing on a series of passes from Mark McGoldrick and defenseman Garrett Leahy. Winger Curtis Golden concluded the Stars scoring with an exciting breakaway from his own blue line beating the goaltender to the stick side. The Stars defensemen led by Jeffrey Powers, Garrett Leahy, Jake Denton, Max Hemingway and Hugh Healey controlled the play in their own zone as well as the center ice area. A late flurry of quality shots by W/H/K was turned aside by Sam Topham in net to preserve the 6-1 Stars victory.

Squirt C2

The Stars Squirt C2 team got back on the winning track Sunday with an impressive 3-1 win over Hingham. Bouncing back nicely from a tough loss to Needham 3 the week before. The Stars took the ice with a purpose and began taking the play to Hingham right from the opening face-off. Kevin Friedland got things going in the first period with a nice one timer from the slot off a Charlie Coffman pass from behind the Hingham net. Hingham took a costly tripping penalty two minutes later when they couldn't keep up with the hustling Andrew Fontaine. Andrew converted the power play goal one minute into the penalty with Brian Craig and Pat Shay getting assists on the play. This line would continue with great passing and unselfish play the rest of the game just missing on several scoring chances. Kevin Quinn continued his strong play in net turning aside Hingham's early chances. The Defense of Ed Tobin, Dan Leblanc, Gerard Tierney and Jack Nelson really did a great job keeping the Hingham offense off balance through out the game, breaking up several odd man rushes. Hingham made things interesting when they scored late in the second period to make it 2-1. After the goal the stars forwards really picked up their fore checking with Ryan Bertone and Mattie Sullivan creating all kinds of havoc in the Hingham end of the ice. This set up several scoring chances but Hingham's goalie came up big. Jack Nelson ended the suspense early in the third period when he buried a pass from Kevin Friedland, scoring from just inside Hingham's blue line. The Stars completely shutdown Hingham's offense the rest of the way with solid defense and great back checking. The action really got wild when Hingham pulled their goalie with a little less than 2 minutes to go. Even though they had the extra skater Hingham could not get the puck out of their end with several stars players just missing the open net or the Hingham defensemen making big saves. Overall another great effort by Stars.

Squirt C3

Playing with a school break skeleton crew, the Squirt C3 hustled their way to a 4-2 win against Duxbury on Saturday. Despite many early scoring opportunities the Stars were stymied in the 1st period by a determined Duxbury netminder. After giving up the early lead at the end of the period, the Stars regrouped and turned up the pressure to begin the second. As has been the case so often this year, Mike Mascuilli opened the scoring for the Stars when he picked up a Ryan Foohey pass behind the Duxbury defenders, skated in unmolested and fired the puck just inside the left post. Just minutes later Sam Labo picked up another Foohey clearing pass up the right boards and fired a wrist shot from the right slot that caromed up into the left top corner off the goalies stick. After going down 2-1, Duxbury began to press hard for scoring opportunities. Goalie Alec Hurd robbed Duxbury of at least two goals with his glove, both times snaring laser-like wrist shots out of nowhere. Defensemen Mike Timcoe and Mike Foley also frustrated many Duxbury scoring chances, successfully thwarting numerous Duxbury breakouts. Forward Nick Craig also contributed to the defensive effort, catching the Duxbury puckhandler on a breakaway from behind and taking the puck into the corner with a heads up slide. The Stars continued their scoring ways to begin the 3rd period when Vinny Calorio fed Ally Ryan with a beauty of a pass. Ryan skated in uncontested and fired the puck by the Duxbury goalie's outstretched pads. Moments later Sam Labo scooped up the loose puck behind the Duxbury net and fed the puck to Mike Masciulli for a one-timer that was rejected with a beautiful kick save. Left winger Justin Henriksen swooped in and lifted the loosed puck high over the stretched out goalie for the Stars fourth and final goal. Duxbury scored again with seconds remaining and the outcome already decided. The Squirts C3 record now stands at 13-4. Way to go Stars.

would face a long road trip to either Provincetown or Nantucket, depending on who wins a first round game between those two Lighthouse division rivals.

Such is the life if you're a number-16 seed. But head coach Ron Ford wasn't worried about any of that Wednesday morning.

"Millis is all I'm worried about right now," he said.

Millis comes from the Tri-Valley League, a tough group of teams that placed six schools in the Div. 3 South sectional. Millis got in to the tournament with an 8-12 record that is probably not indicative of the caliber of team they are.

"They played in a good league. They're a legitimate tournament team," Ford said. "I expect them to come out and try and be physical with us. They've got some size. We just have to come out and play with the same focus and intensity that we did our last three games."

Conventional wisdom would have it that Ford's last point may be tough to accomplish. Cohasset has not played a game since Feb. 12, when a 50-41 win over Mashpee clinched a tournament berth. One might expect a team to be rusty and sluggish coming off such a long break.

That will probably not be the case, however, with the Skippers. In fact, the two-week layoff is exactly what the doctor ordered, pun intended. It has given the team some time to heal their various injuries.

Senior Chris Bilodeau was playing on two bad ankles the last week of the season, but Ford says his leading scorer has started to regain some of his explosiveness over the last several days. Point guard John Andrade has been battling a sore ankle all year, and center Sean Connolly also was a regular in the trainer's room after games.

"We needed [the break], we were so drained from where we were," Ford said.

Rest assured, the Skippers will be ready for postseason action. They know how they close they were to not making it at all.

"We've already played three tournament games," Ford said. "The fact that we've played those games in that situation can only help us."

All applicants must be 16 years of age and hold current Lifeguard/CPR/First Aid certifications. Letters of interest should be sent to Attn: Darleen Koetsch, Cohasset Swim Center, P.O. Box 132, Cohasset, MA 02025 or e-mail cohassetswimcenter@comcast.net. Anyone interested in employment and enrolled or planning to enroll in a Lifeguard and/or WSI are encouraged to apply. Employment will depend on successful completion of the course.

Coastal Stars Youth Hockey sign-ups

The Coastal Stars Youth Hockey organization will be registering players from Marshfield and Cohasset for the 2004/2005 season on the following two dates:

Saturday, March 6th-St. Christines Parish Lower Hall, Marshfield from 12:00pm–4:00pm.

Saturday, March 13th-St. Anthony's Parish Center, Cohasset from 12:00 pm – 4:00 pm.

The 2004/2005 Fee will be $625 if paid in full at registration. Parents should have child's hockey shirt size and desired shirt number. Registration for any new players that are 8 years old and younger will be announced at a future date. For more information see www.coastalstars.com.

CYBSA signups for players/coaches through March 6

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association will hold its annual registration for the upcoming baseball and softball season from now through March 6, 2004. Parents/guardians have two options for registration: CYBSA will hold a registration on Saturday, March 6, 2004, from 9:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m., outside both the Osgood and High School gymnasiums.

In the alternative, parents/guardians may register children by mail, provided that mailed registrations are postmarked no later than March 6, 2004. Registration forms are available by contacting Nancy Froio on (781) 383-1897. Forms will be available via e-mail. Registrations that are received or postmarked after March 6, 2004 will be subject to a per player $25 late registration fee. Your cooperation in registering players in a timely manner is greatly appreciated, as it allows the CYBSA to establish rosters and order uniforms so that we are ready for opening day.

This registration is for boys and girls aged 5 to 12 as of July 31, 2004.

A copy of the child's birth certificate must accompany a new player's registration forms.

The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the major league baseball (ages 10 to 12) and softball divisions (ages 11 and 12) will be $100. The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the minor league divisions for baseball (ages 7-11) and softball (ages 7-10) divisions will be $85. The registration fee for the farm league instructional division (ages 5-6) will be $65. Please be advised that children assigned to Major League teams are still required to register.

In addition, due to recent the child protection program instituted by Little League governing organization, all adults interested in coaching, managing or volunteering in any way, are required to register at this same time andsupply a photocopy of a government issued identification. Individuals not complying with this requirement will not be allowed to participate in the CYBSA program.

Questions regarding either player or coach registration may be directed to Liam O'Connell on (781) 383-9538 or Nancy Froio on (781)-383-1897.

Cohasset's Matt Baroudi (bottom) gets caught in a headlock by Southwick's Kyle Davidson late in regulation of Saturday's state championship match, but the junior battled back in overtime to win the state championship for the 215 pound weight class.

Lords of the ring

send it into the second frame tied at 2-2.

Dietzel started on the bottom in the second and pulled off a quick escape to take his first lead. Kehoe answered with a nice takedown, getting behind the Foxboro wrestler and then hopping onto his back piggyback style and wrapping both his legs around Dietzel to get him over—a trademark move for Kehoe which he utilized very effectively in this match to stall and tire out his higher ranked rival.

However, a quick reversal by Dietzel inside the final 30 seconds sent him into the third period with a 5-4 edge.

A quick takedown put Kehoe back in front, 6-5, and he picked up another point a few moments later when Dietzel was penalized for stalling.

With Dietzel battling desperately for a takedown in the waning moments, Kehoe was able to counter that aggressiveness and spin Dietzel over for another two point takedown. Then came the image that has been left lingering strongest of all in this typist's mind: Kehoe pushing down with all his might to keep Dietzel's chest and face pressed into the mat as he stared up at the clock to count down the final seconds. The celebration that erupted after the buzzer was also something to behold, as Kehoe flew into the arms of coach Sweeney and was swarmed by his teammates and friends.

The emotion in Kehoe was still visceral a half hour after that win, as he told the story of how his recently deceased grandfather—Joseph F. Kehoe, the man who more or less raised him—had shared his grandson's dream of capturing a state championship.

"This is for him," said Joey quietly. "I said before this season started that I wanted to win a state championship for my grandfather, and now that I've done it, it just feels unbelievable."

Stepping on to the mat even as Kehoe and friends were still wildly celebrating was Cohasset senior captain Phil Strazzulla. Across from him was the wrestler who'd bested him in overtime for the South Sectional crown a week earlier: Foxboro's Nick Avery.

Avery came closest to scoring in the first period, but Strazzula barely rolled out of a fall that could have very easily been scored a takedown. Avery finally got on the board in this defensive showdown with an escape early in the second. With both wrestlers grappling from the mat late in that period, Strazzulla was somehow able to break free from a clinch and roll over on to Avery to score two points for a takedown.

That would be all the scoring this match would see. The third period featured an increasingly desperate Avery trying to get Strazzulla off his feet, but none of his kick-outs or wrap attempts worked. In fact, Kehoe came the closest to scoring in the third, but Avery twice bailed himself out by rolling out of bounds.

"Boy, he was tough," said Strazzulla of Avery moments after the match. "The key was I was able to hold him off without making it look too much like I was stalling. You can't make any mistakes against him."

He then added: "To be honest, I can't even remember a lot of what happened in that match right now."

Tough to believe, but this only set the stage for the real drama of the evening.

Baroudi was hoping to gain the same kind of revenge his teammates had in the finals. However, Mansfield's Tom Creeden, the wrestler who'd topped him in double OT the week before, lost in the semifinals to Southwick's Kyle Davidson.

Baroudi conceded later that this disappointment was perhaps a factor in what he considered a sub-par performance versus Davidson in the championship bout.

Baroudi scored first with a quick takedown, but Davidson wriggled free for escapes at the end of the first and second periods to send the match into the third tied at 2-2.

Baroudi chose bottom to start the third and scored one point for an escape and picked up another one a moment later when Davidson was fouled for stalling.

Davidson tied it right back up again wit h40 seconds to go in regulation, as the headlock move he'd been trying to slap all match on Baroudi finally worked and he pulled the Cohasset wrestler to the ground for a two-point takedown. With the crowd in a frenzy, Baroudi found a way to wriggle free and flip over onto Davidson for a reversal and a 6-4 lead.

The gritty Davidson was far from done, however, as he escaped that hold for a point, and then pulled off another escape in the final seconds, as a re-start saw him start from bottom and he just pulled free from Baroudi as the buzzer to tie it at 6-6 and send it to overtime.

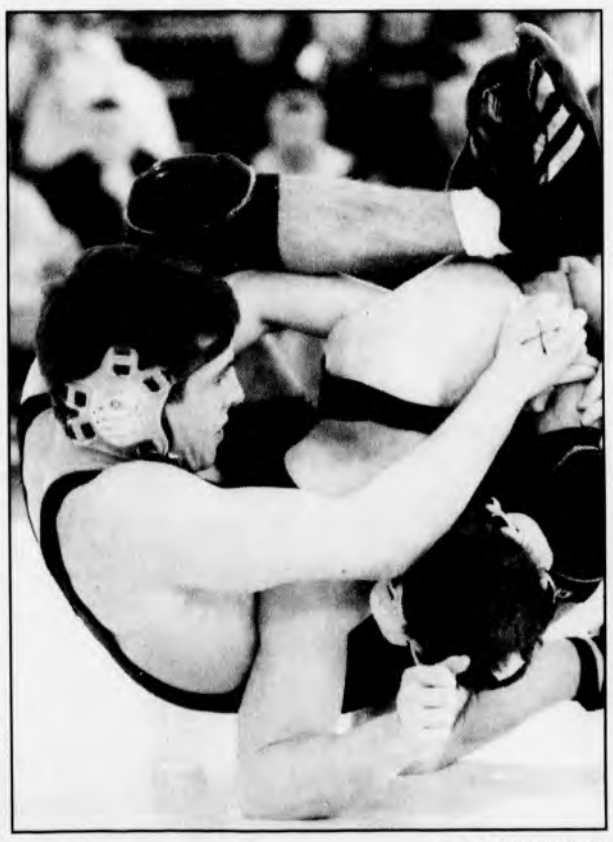
Baroudi figured Davidson would go for the headlock again in OT time, and this time he was looking on it. Baroudi ducked under the expected high lunge of Davidson 20 seconds into OT, slipped behind him in one motion as he stuck his foot out for the trip and then used his opponent's forward momentum to take him over with a belly flop onto him, ending the match with a two-point takedown.

"I was ready for that move this time," confirmed a jubilant Baroudi moments later. "I shouldn't have fallen for it the first time. I didn't feel I wrestled my best, though, so I'm probably a little lucky to have won."

The host Skippers wound up taking fifth in the statewide field with 84 points, with 54 of the state's 58 Div. 3 teams represented at the meet

Quabbin, a bigger school than Cohasset that has no winter hockey program, won with 192.5 points, followed by Foxboro (150.5), Mansfield (105) and Burlington (98).

Finishing behind South Shore League champion Cohasset again were league rivals Carver (sixth, 69 points) and Rockland (8th, 60 points).



"To have even one wrestler win a state championship is fantastic, but I can't even describe what it feels like to have three do it," said Sweeney, a few days removed from the hysteria. "Everything has to go your way for that to happen. You have to be healthy, get the right draws, and even still you can't predict what's going to happen most of the time because, at this level, it just takes one mistake and it could be all over for your wrestler."

Also delivering points for Cohasset was plucky freshman Ryan McLellan, who took seventh/eight place points at 103 pounds. Wins were also record by CHS juniors Kevin Dinsmore (125) and Jonathan Littauer (130). Junior Matt Casey (160 pounds) and senior Jake Berger (heavyweight) also qualified to wrestle in the hometown State meet, which turned into a huge boon for the school and town. Cohasset organizers were initially concerned over whether or not they could handle the scope of the event, but they wound up pleasantly surprised by the way things went off, according to Sweeney.

"Originally, we proposed to hold the Sectional meet, but the people with the state came back and said they thought we had the facilities to host the State Meet," reported Sweeney. "I guess they knew what they were talking about. Of course, we had a lot of people who really stepped up and helped us pull this off."

Taking the night's festivities to yet another level, Sweeney was honored by his peers with the awarding of a plaque commemorating his 200th career coaching victory, notched earlier this season. The presentee then turned presenter, as Sweeney honored the Baird family of Cohasset for its selection to the Mass. Wrestling Hall of Fame. The commemorative plaque was presented by Sweeney to Bill and Pat Baird, whose four sons—Bill, Jr. (class of '91), Dan ('93), Mike ('99) and Tim ('02)--were all standout wrestlers for Sweeney coached teams.

"I don't think I could have written a much better script than this one," Sweeney concluded.

at Milton and B.C. High. "We need to avoid mistakes because Blue Hills knows how to capitalize on those. "That's their game."

It won't get any easier should the seventh seeded Skippers get past the 10th seeded Warriors (10-7-3), as second seeded Bourne (17-3-2) awaits on Tuesday (time not yet announced) right back on Gallo ice.

"Bourne was the other team I was really hoping to avoid in the tourney," confessed Virga. "They've been as good as any Div. 3 team in the state the last few years. Getting them anywhere is tough, but getting them on their home ice is all the tougher."

Should the Skippers get to that point, Virga noted he'd probably look to play a Blue Hills style of game—i.e., holding the third forward back to protect against quick-hitting counter attacks.

"But I'm not even thinking about that game yet, and neither should any one of our players," stated the rookie head coach. "We can start thinking about Bourne if we're still alive after Saturday."

To go anywhere, Virga believes his players need to employ the same brand of physical play they did in Friday's win over Westwood—an effort that was led by captains Ted Straughn and Mike Devine and junior defenseman Tim Pilczak.

"I think we had the Westwood kids really thinking twice about going into the corners in the second and third period, and that was the key to our success," said Virga. "That's the style you need to bring to the tourney because everyone is going to be looking to play a little more physical, and a little more charge up."

Westwood's unwillingness to match Cohasset's physical play was clearly evidenced by the fact it had just six shots on goal combined for the second and third period, this after it fired 13 on Skippers goaltender Stefan Parnell in the first period, including the only two that got by him.

Those Westwood goals were the only points put on the board in the first period.

However, Skippers captain Mike Devine broke the ice and cut that lead in half a few minutes after the break, finishing on the power play off a nice pass from team leading scorer Rob Carpenter.

Red hot sophomore Matt O'Connell knotted the game up at 2-2 late in the second with a nifty unassisted effort.

Junior tri-captain Ted Straughn added to his team best goal and gamewinning goals totals in the third, with Carpenter again notching a power play assist.

Junior Joe Durkin added a late insurance goal, senior Mike Rasmussen assisting to join his fellow tri-captains on the score sheet.

One did not have to be at the game to discern the dramatic swing this game took between the first and second periods. After being out-shot 13-7 in the opening frame, the Skippers held the Wolverine to just three shots apiece in the next two frames while firing off a combined 22 of their own.

"I think the kids got mad," offered Virga when asked for an explanation. "We'd played a bad game the night before, and then we didn't play a great first period. We played two of our best periods of the year after that, though."

Now if only the coach can find a way to get his players good and riled before they get off the bus Saturday.

Virga juggled his lines for the Freezeout Tourney, trying to keep O'Connell hot by flip-flopping him with Durkin to move alongside team leading scorers Carpenter and Straughn.

The physical and hard-working Durkin is now skating a wing with the equally hard-working Rasmussen and Bouchard.

Of course, the four man defensive rotation of Devine, Pilczak, Brandon Smith and Crandon Leahy (all of whom were heavily praised by Virga after the Westwood win) continues to be untouchable.

liminary round, while Cathedral defeated Blue Hills, 45-35, in its preliminary round game.

The winner of Harwich-Cathedral will meet the Lady Skippers on Saturday at 1 p.m. Should the unthinkable—16th seeded Cathedral (11-10) topping Harwich—happen, the Skippers would host the game. If the expected happens, however, the Cohasset girls will be making a long bus trip to the Cape.

As for the Tuesday night win, the Skippers took the lead right from the opening shot and never looked back, running up a 27-0 lead before an opposing point was finally recorded.

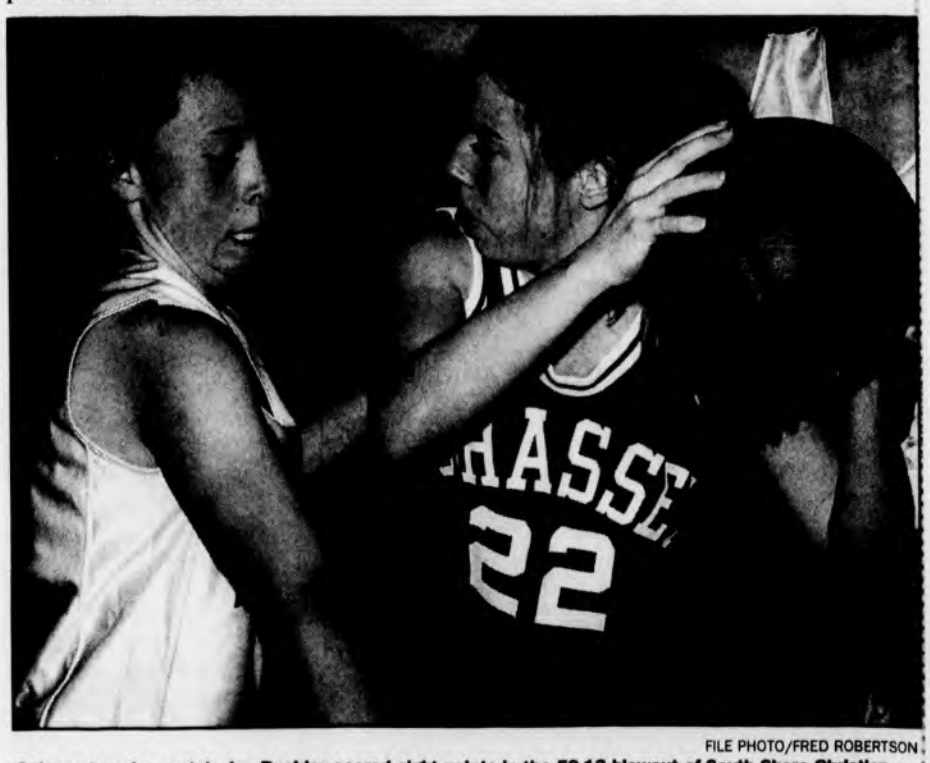
"It was a one-sided start," noted Cohasset coach LeVangie. "South Shore missed a number of shots at the start while Cohasset scorers were right on target. The big lead put Cohasset in control and enabled the Skippers to dominate the game."

Cohasset's first tourney visit in 16 years was obviously a spectacular opener, led by Casey Anderson with 16 points. Casey, the South Shore's leading scorer, has averaged 16 points a game over the 21 games this season.

The leading scorer now has a total of 340 points for the season.

Other top scorers for Cohasset were Ashley Faber, Jen Buckley and Chelsea Grossman, all with eight points apiece.

"It was a very exciting game for the kids," declared the coach. "We had 11 of our 14 players score in the game."



The coach added: "This has certainly been an exciting season for the kids and myself. Tuesday's win was just outstanding. I just can't say enough about the play of the kids on this team. They are among the best I have seen."

The coach has seen a lot of basketball in his time, having coached for 38 years. Along the way he has coached at Boston College High and Westwood High.

Harwich, Saturday night's probable opponent, has been a major problem for the Skippers this year, having beaten Cohasset twice in South Shore League play, once by a big margin, and just 12 points the second time out.

"Our kids looked pretty good against Harwich in the second game," offered Levangie. "They showed a big improvement and we are looking for even more improvement Thursday."

Cohasset entered the tourney seeded eight out of the 22 teams in Division 4. Harwich won the SSL with a 12-0 record, followed by Carver and Abington tied for second at 8-4, Cohasset at 7-5, Norwell 5-7, Hull 2-10 and Mashpee 0-12.

Scit-Coh swimmers wrap up regular season

By Becky Keys
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The Scituate-Cohasset Swim Team finished off their season with two dual meets versus Middleboro High School and the North Attleboro Red Rocketeers.

The Sci-Cohs may not win their meets, but what shines through is their team spirit. These dedicated swimmers make the practices and make the meets despite their lack of victories. One of the truly dedicated swimmers is CHS senior captain Delia Regan.

Fourth year Coach Jami Kearney says: "Delia has been a pleasure to coach from her freshman year through her senior year. She has really developed into an accomplished swimmer."

Another swimmer who had an outstanding season was SHS sophomore Jenny Driscoll. Driscoll was a vital link in both the 200 medley relay and the 200 freestyle relay teams, and was a clutch swimmer when it came to her individual events.

Look for next week's article for a wrap-up with the Bay Colony Conference Championship meet and the Girls Central-South Sectional meet.

Boston Bruins Alums vs. Coastal Stars coaches

The Boston Bruins Alumni Team will be playing the Coastal Stars Youth Hockey Coaches at Hobomock Arena in Pembroke on Sunday March 14th at 3:15 p.m. The Proceeds from the benefit game will go to support the Ace Bailey Children's Fund and Coastal Stars Youth Hockey. The Ace Bailey Children's Fund was established in memory of former Bruin Garnet "Ace" Bailey, who was aboard United flight 175 on 09/11/01. The proceeds raised by the fund go directly to improve the hospital environment for sick patients at The Floating Hospital for Children. A limited number of tickets will be available in advance and the day of the game. Ticket prices are $8 for adults and $5 for children. Please contact Bill Quackenbush at 781-319-1929 for tickets. There will be Bruins merchandise, photo opportunities and even more excitement on the ice.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse looking for coaches

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is looking for volunteer assistant coaches at all levels for its spring season, with a particular emphasis on finding coaches for its girls teams.

Cohasset currently expects to field at least 10 teams this spring, although the growth in the number of participants could push that number even higher, provided there is adequate coaching available to protect and develop the youngsters involved.

In all, Cohasset will field boys teams at the 14 & Under (7th and 8th grade), 12 & Under (5th & 6th grade) and 10 & Under (3rd and 4th grade) levels, and girls teams at the 14-U and 12-U levels, plus a weekly clinic for girls players in grades 3 and 4.

The shortage of coaches is particularly acute for girls, where the current coaching staffs are so limited that roster sizes may be kept particularly small unless more coaches volunteer.

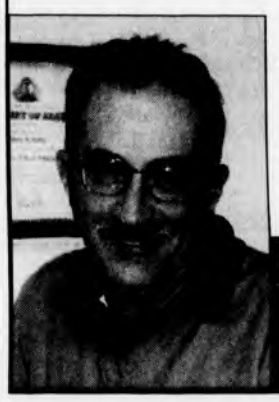
In the younger boys' age groups, more coaching volunteers could enable the program to add additional teams, keeping roster sizes smaller and more manageable, resulting in a better experience for all kids involved.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse currently has head coaches at all age levels, but with the probability of more than 300 children spread throughout the program this year, increasing the size of coaching staffs is essential for player development.

Through its nine-year history, the foundation of the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse coaching staff has been volunteers who do not have children on the teams involved. In seeking additional coaches, the program is hoping to get both community volunteers and parents whose children will play. Experience playing or coaching the game is desired, but not necessary; coaches must be able to throw and catch with a lacrosse stick in order to teach others and facilitate drills. Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will pay registration costs to coaching clinics for those individuals interested in participating.

At all but the youngest age levels, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse holds two practices each week, and has games on Sunday afternoon. The youngest boys have one weekly practice, while the girls clinic program will be one weekly 90-minute session. Assistant coaches are not expected to attend every event, although they should be able to appear often enough to be perceived by the players as a team leader.

In addition to coaches, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is interested in developing referees who can work its games. Interested individuals will be required to take some officiating instruction classes during the winter, and may then be eligible to work games either with a partner or solo in the spring.



For more information or to express your interest in coaching or officiating, call Chuck Jaffe, coordinator of youth lacrosse, at 781-383-9858.

If you want to get to know a rug, rub its back.
DOES IT FEEL TOO SMOOTH, TOO STIFF? IT'S PROBABLY A MACHINE-MADE RUG.
SOME EXQUISITE RUGS HAVE AS MANY AS 800 KNOTS PER INCH.

MOST RUGS ARE MADE OF WOOL. MORE ELABORATE DESIGNS ARE OFTEN WOVEN FROM SILK. WE HAVE SOME THAT COMBINE WOOL AND SILK.
WE HAVE THE WIDEST SELECTION AND BEST VALUE OF ANYONE IN NEW ENGLAND, LIKE THIS RUG FROM THE MAHAL COLLECTION BY SAMAD (M-101 RED/RED).
If it feels a little too smooth, if you can't feel the knots, if it feels a little stiff, then it's probably a machine-made rug. There's nothing wrong with a rug made by a machine as long as you aren't paying like it was a rug made by hand. The same design executed by a machine should cost a third of what a hand-made costs. Hand-knotted rugs are guaranteed to out-live you. A machine-made rug has the life expectancy of five to ten years. Many people buy hand-made rugs for a living room, dining room, or entrance hall. They put the hand-mades where there's a lot of traffic. They put the machine-mades where there's less traffic. That's pretty much the rule.
If you're really serious, measure an inch (the tip of your index finger in length) and count the number of knots. More knots per inch are another measure of quality. There are some amazingly elaborate works of art that have as many as 800 knots per inch. (We have some in our store.)
A simpler design might have around 80 knots per inch. The knottier rugs are often made of silk. The simpler ones are generally made of wool. We have some outstanding rugs that are a combination of wool and silk, basically the best of both worlds. At our store, Dover Rug, we can show you everything from an investment grade rug to a beautiful broadloom carpet. We have the widest selection and the best value of anyone in New England. Plus, on our hand-made rugs, we offer a lifetime (That's lifetime) exchange policy.
So, another way to make sure you're getting what you paid when you buy a rug is to turn the corner and look for our label.

Kindergarten sign-ups are being conducted

Kindergarten registration for 2004/2005 is being conducted daily, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., at the Joseph Osgood School. Kindergartners must be 5 years old on or before Sept. 1, 2004 in order to enroll. Birth Certificates and proof of residence are required. Call the school if you have any questions at 781-383-6117.

SPED speaker on MCAS

Parents Advisory Council for Special Education (PAC), invites South Shore parents and faculty to its meeting on Tuesday, March 2 at the Osgood Elementary School, 210 Sohier St., at 7:30 p.m.. A speaker from the Federation for Children with Special Needs will focus on MCAS.

Be sure to mark your calendars for Tuesday, April 6 at the Osgood School at 7:30 p.m. when Isabel Phillips, Ed.D. will be featured. She has an extensive background in reading and language-based learning disabilities, assessment and intervention.

In 2001, PAC members from Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth joined to promote communication, combine workshops and establish a broader network. The South Shore Regional PAC goal is to meet informally throughout the year.

Making healthy choices focus of Deer Hill event

On Friday, Feb. 27 at 9 a.m., Cohasset fifth- and sixth-grade students will attend a fun and thought-provoking theatrical presentation designed to build positive body image and improve their ability to make healthy eating, exercise and lifestyle choices.

Sponsored by the PSO Curriculum Enrichment program, the award-winning "This Is Your Life" is a 50-minute show performed by two Boston area comedic actors who speak to teens through humor, skits and improvisational theater. Important issues from self-esteem, fitness, tobacco prevention, Osteoporosis, to media and peer group pressure are presented in a language kids can relate to.

The PSO Curriculum Enrichment program was created to enhance areas within current classroom study, as well as introduce topics that students may not be exposed to on a regular basis. The program is funded through general PSO fundraising efforts within the Cohasset community.

Pilgrim Skating Arena offers $5K scholarships

Eligible students must complete and submit a scholarship application by April 9. The applications can be picked up at the information desk in the main lobby of the hospital or by sending a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope to: Scholarship Chairman, The Friends of South Shore Hospital, 11 Downing Street, Hingham, MA 02043. The applications may be returned to the information desk in the hospital's main lobby or to the scholarship chairman at the above address.

• Eligible applicants must meet the following criteria:

• Be presently enrolled as seniors in a public high school

• Be residents of a community served by South Shore Hospital

• Have been accepted to study medicine, nursing or any other health-care related field at an accredited higher learning institution

• Demonstrate financial need

• Have good high school records

• Recommendation of guidance counselors

• Personal references.

The Friends of South Shore Hospital is an auxiliary whose members are dedicated to bringing together persons who will support and advance the good health of our region through the mission of South Shore Hospital. The specific goals of The Friends are to encourage volunteerism, generate financial support for the Hospital and to foster community goodwill and involvement. To join, call (781) 340-8520.

Summer Arts at Derby Academy

Summer Arts at Derby is beginning its 16 year at Derby Academy in Hingham. the five-week program is open to ages 8 to 15 and offers more than 100 courses in visual arts, drama, dance, writing, music, photography, video production, gymnastics and sports. There are also special offerings, such as cooking, yoga, chess, Tai Chi, and circus arts.

In addition to the regular classes, there is a non-time show and a free choice period with new offerings each day. On Friday, July 30, Summer Arts culminates in an Arts Festival featuring performances of theatre, dance, music, and gymnastics and several exhibits of clay, painting, furniture, mosaics, jewelry, and photography. Animated films and videos are also shown. Summer Arts produces a full-scale musical production as well.

The goal of Summer Arts is to offer a very high quality arts experience to children, with an atmosphere that is exciting and bursting with creativity. The children are from diverse racial, cultural, and economic backgrounds; twenty Massachusetts communities are represented. One of the main goals is to create a spirit of cooperation and respect, where the students feel supported and free to express themselves.

The program is staffed by professional artist/teachers and together with the students, they create a special summer of artistic achievement, acceptance, and exuberant energy. For more information, call Thalia McMillion, Director at 781-740-4766.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

FEBRUARY VACATION CAN BE A GREAT TIME FOR CHOOSING A CAMP!

Many camps fill up during the winter months . . .some are even full by the end of the previous summer. But, there is hope and there is help. The following tips will help many of you who still haven't signed up for camp:

Basic camp search steps:
1. Determine your family's expectations and requirements of camp.
2. Identify appropriate camp options based on the goals and priorities you have set.
3. Choose a camp from the options that you selected.

How do we determine our expectations?
List the most important elements of your family's camp search, keeping in mind your child's personality. First and foremost, ask if your child is ready for a camp experience. Consider what type of camp experiences could round out or reinforce your child's school year experiences. Is your child ready to sleep away from home for several days or weeks? (This will help you select either a resident or day camp setting.) What are his or her interests and needs? Does he or she have any special dietary or physical needs?

The following definitions may be useful:

Resident Camp
Resident camps are generally for children, ages 7-15. Children stay for one to eight weeks and may sleep in cabins, tents, yurts, tepees, hostels or a variety of other types of accommodations.

Day Camp
Day camps generally serve children ages 3-13. Campers return home at the end of the day.

Specialty Camps and Programs (Day or Resident)
Specialty camps and specialty programs at general camps offer campers the opportunity to concentrate in specific areas such as horseback riding, the arts, wilderness and adventure tripping, travel, sports or computers.

Additional Considerations

• Do you have a maximum traveling time or distance? Will your child need transportation?

• What session length will appeal to your child and to your family plans for the summer? (1-8 weeks)

• What is your budget for camp tuition? Camp remains a very affordable option for most everyone. Fees can range from $15 to $180 per day, depending upon the choice of camp, the facilities offered and the camper's needs. Many camps offer financial assistance based on need.

• What size of camp community will make your child feel comfortable?

• What kind of scheduling method will make your child most comfortable? Will he or she feel comfortable about making activity choices every day? Once a week? Every two weeks?

• What level of competition suits your child?

• What activities or program would most interest your child at camp?

• Would a single sex or coed camp be most appropriate for your child?

How do we identify appropriate camp options?
Seek out camps that you think may meet your expectations by:

• Checking at your local library or exploring the camp section of your local newspaper.

•Attending camp fairs and expos.

• Asking friends, family, co-workers, teachers, coaches and doctors for recommendations.

Once you have identified appropriate options, contact the camps and request their marketing materials.

How do we choose one camp from the options we've selected? With your camp expectations in mind:

• Review the camps' brochures, Web sites, videos, DVDs, and CD ROMs with your child.

• Talk with directors and/or camp representatives.

• Request parent references and check them.

Questions you may wish to ask finalist camps include:

• How can I stay in touch with my child during camp? Does the camp allow phone calls or e-mail?

• Does the camp have parent visitation days?

• How will the camp meet my child's special dietary or physical needs?

• What training does the staff receive on safety, supervision, counseling, problem solving and other issues unique to working with young children?

• Is the price all-inclusive or are there extra charges for transportation horseback riding food service overnights group pictures field trips waterskiing T-shirts extended care camp uniforms registration

• If transportation is offered, what are the specifics?

• If before- and after-camp extended care is offered, who is with the children and what activities take place?

• Is an open house offered before camp starts so that you can tour the camp and visit with the director?

Keeping your child involved in the camp selection process is vital. Jointly review camp materials and the answers you find to the questions outlined above, consider the expectations you set at the beginning of the search process, and make an informed camp choice!

Storm essays

The following essays were written by the students in Mrs. Wells' second-grade class at the Joseph Osgood School after a visit from Channel Five's meteorologist, David Brown:

Can people survive a tornado? It's happened. I saw a show called worst-case scenario and a family was having a barbeque and suddenly a tornado was heading their way! They went in the basement and they survived! Tornados are the most dangerous windstorms but not the most destructive. Hail is! Your house could be on the ground and your neighbor's house could be fine. Tornados only last 15 to 20 minutes. Tornados start out as funnel clouds and then it's a whirlwind of terror. I don't think it would be fun to be in one.

— Hannah Piasecki

A meteorologist needs tools to predict the weather.

You need a windsock to tell which way the wind is going.

You need a barometer to tell how fast the wind is going.

You need a satellite to take pictures of the world.

You need a hot air balloon to see what the clouds are doing.

You need a thermometer to tell what the temperature is.

I love weather!!!

— Kathryn Dunn

On Wednesday the weatherman came to school. The weatherman put on a movie. We watched it. It was about tornados, hurricanes, and blizzards. We watched how hurricanes blow down your homes and trees.

— Gabrielle Weissman

Which storm causes more damage, tornado or hail? Tornados and hail destroy land. Hail causes the most destruction per year. Tornados form over the land. They last for a short time. They are small. Tornados move fast over the land. A tornado's wind goes 250 mph. Tornados are worse than hail.

— Lexa Graz

BLIZZARDS!

Can we stand the cold? Blizzards are often bad. The one in 1988 was really bad. It had lots of WIND! And it needs SNOW! It also needs a cold temperature of 32 degrees or below. The snow sometimes covers doors. BEWARE OF BLIZZARDS!

— Emily Swanborg

On Tuesday the weatherman came to our school. He told us about the weather. Then he put on a movie. In the movie there was a hurricane and if you looked very closely in the hurricane you could see a pick up truck in the air, and then the hurricane dropped it. When it dropped, the pick up truck was destroyed. He told us about when the horrible storm came to school and it broke down a lot of houses. The blizzard was so bad that the people stayed in their cars, but then they got stuck all night long. It was a horrible story. It was a blizzard for a long time. It was a beautiful blizzard. The end.

— Carly Kinscherf

Hail! Hail!

Most of the storms are only hail! Hail is very dangerous! Hail is little balls of ice. Up in the clouds it is warm, but down in the clouds it is cold. So…Hail is cool!

— Callie Shanley

A meteorologist came to the Osgood School. Today I am writing about the differences about tornados and hurricanes. Hurricanes happen over water and tornados happen over land. Tornados happen for a short time and hurricanes happen for a longer time. Hurricanes happen over a longer area and tornados happen over a smaller area. Tornados are very different from hurricanes.

— Julien Geyer

Yesterday at 1:30, David Brown came in to teach us about the weather. Tornado's wind can go up to 250 mph. Tornados always start over land. There are many more tornados than hurricanes. Tornados can pick up cars, houses, and people. I would not want to be in a tornado.

— Ryan Davis

Do you want to know the most destructive storm? It is hail. Hail starts as a raindrop. Then a big gust of wind carries the raindrop up to the top of a cloud where it is below zero degrees. It starts to fall. While it's falling, little raindrops attach to it to make it bigger.

— Jack O'Brien

A meteorologist came to our school. We talked about anemometers that measure the wind power. A barometer measures the weight of air. He told us that hail was the most destructive storm. He showed us electricity in a bottle.

— Jared Pratt

Tornado's air is 250 mph inside. Yesterday a meteorologist came to our school. He taught us about tornados and other stuff, but he likes to stick with tornados. A tornado can suck up a person and throw it back out, and the person won't get hurt. It is so strong that it can pick up a truck. It is so strong that it could pick up a cow even. It causes a big destruction and destroys a lot of damage.

— Ryan McKeon

Yesterday a weatherperson came in. His name was David Brown. He told us about hail. Hail is very destructive. It can destroy lots of homes. It can knock out windows. It can cause more damage than a tornado because a tornado can't go as fast as hail is on a big piece of land. It can cause harm and destruction. Hail is so powerful.

— Matt Arnold

Yesterday David Brown came to our school. He taught us about storms. I learned about tornados. They are a windstorm. They are a lot like a vacuum. Do you know that the wind in a tornado can go over 250 miles per hour? There might be some good things, but I would still run for my life.

— Anna McCarthy

Yesterday a weatherman came in. His name was David Brown. He told us about hail. Did you know that hail is very dangerous? It can destroy lots of homes. If there were a lightning rod and another lightning rod, the lightning would only go to one. Did you know that hail is worse than a tornado? Hail only comes when it is less than 32 degrees. It is more powerful than a tornado. It is the strongest.

— Dylan Bomeisler

Yesterday at 1:30, David Brown came to our school. He talked about hurricanes and tornados. Tornado's winds can go over 250 mph. Tornados start on land. Hurricanes start over water. Hurricanes can go over 50 mph. They both start in cloudy areas, but they are both dangerous.

— Danny Tangherlini

Watch out for a tornado. It could blow your house down. Meteorologist David Brown talked to us about what one tornado can cause. A tornado's winds can spin up to 250 mph on the ground, but it only lasts up to 20 or 15 minutes while a hurricane can last up to 7 days! A tornado may be small but it can cause more damage than a hurricane and they both start from a cloud. That is why you should watch out for tornados.

Boating lecture to benefit maritime studies

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

On Saturday, the town of Cohasset will be introduced to Douglas and Bernadette Bernon, a husband and wife sailing team that has traveled extensively in the Western Caribbean. The two will be giving a lecture at St. Anthony's Parish Center, sharing knowledge they gained throughout their travels, including how to navigate through reefs, anchor in hard-coral bottoms, how to get through customs, and the best side trips.

The Bernon's are coming to Cohasset as part of an annual lecture series sponsored by the Cohasset Yacht Club. For the past five years, lectures have served as a means of fund-raising for the Cohasset High School Maritime Studies Program and Summer Institute, a program which offers students in Cohasset and the surrounding area the opportunity to participate in an academic program, while taking advantage of the summer months outdoors.

"The lectures always benefit the Maritime Program and are always boat oriented," said Mary Whitley, one of the coordinators of the event. Past lecturers have included Tania Aebi, who at 18 years old was both the first woman sailor and the youngest person ever to circumnavigate the globe; and Cam Lewis, who along with four French sailors, navigated an 86-foot catamaran around the world in 79 days, setting a new speed sailing record.

The Bernon's sold their home to spend three years sailing in the Western Caribbean.

This year, the Bernons will travel to Cohasset to share in their lecture, "How to Voyage to the Western Caribbean," what it was like to sell their home, cars, and furniture to spend three years of their lives sailing on their Shearwater 39. They set sail in 2000, leaving their home port at Newport, Rhode Island, to sail up to Canada, then down to Cuba, Mexico, Belize, Guatemala, Panama, the San Blas Islands, and Columbia. Whitley said already there are 50 people signed up to attend.

Prior to setting sail, Bernadette served as the editor-in-chief of "Cruising World" magazine from 1990 to 2000. She was also the editorial director of Cruising World and Sailing World magazines from 1997 to 2000. During her time with the magazines, Bernadette won national Folio and Ozzie awards from the publishing industry for editorial design excellence, as well as Boating Writers of America awards for technical writing and editing.

Bernadette also founded the Cruising World Safety At Sea Institute, which organizes a dozen day-long safety seminars with US sailing around the country each year. In addition, she developed Cruising World Adventure Charters which has sent more than 3,000 readers to destinations around the world, and has served on the Board of Directors of Sail America.

Douglas' experience with sailing includes an 18-month single-handed cruise in the late 7'0s aboard his 30-foot wood folk boat, Evora. He and Bernadette also owned a 24-foot Quickstep, Ruby, which they sailed with friends on ocean passages across the Atlantic and down to the Caribbean.

Douglas and Bernadette Bernon soak up the sun on the deck of their Shearwater 39.

By profession, Douglas was a psychologist and psychoanalyst in private practice, treating adults and children, and maintaining an active forensic practice. He was a clinical assistant professor of psychiatry at Brown University Medical School, and president of the Rhode Island Association of Psychoanalytic Psychology. He is also an accomplished photographer, and his work has appeared in Conde Nast Traveler and in Cruising World. He has lectured professionally on a wide range of subjects, including psychoanalytic profiles of Buster Keaton and Stephen King, childhood suicide, and forensic profiling. He is currently a Contributing Editor for Cruising World, where he writes a monthly column with Bernadette.

Bernadette and Douglas Bernon will give their lecture, "How to Voyage to the Western Caribbean," Saturday, Feb. 28 at 7 p.m. at St. Anthony's Parish Center, located at 129 Main St. For more information or to reserve tickets, please contact Mary Whitley at (781) 383-9708. Tickets will also be available at the door and cost $15 each. Children under the age of 12 are free. The lecture is open to the public and light refreshments will be served. More information on the speakers is available on the Cohasset Yacht Club's web site at www.cohassetyc.org.

Shows are Friday & Saturday March 5, 6, 12 & 13 at 8p.m., and Sundays March 7 & 14 at 2p.m. Tickets are $12 and can be purchased at Front Street Books in Scituate and Buttonwood Books & Springbrook Kids in Cohasset or by phone at 781-544-0304 and at the door.

ASP mandatory meeting

Next mandatory Appalachia Service Project meeting is Sunday, March 7 at 8 p.m. at First Parish sanctuary.

Medical and permission forms are due March 7. Notaries will be available before meeting from 7:30 - 8:15 p.m.

Kitchen tour to offer a feast for the senses

Designer fabrics, lush floral arrangements and table settings befitting the most elegant and formal of evenings to the most comfortable and relaxing of family breakfasts. Hors d'oeurves, finger sandwiches, pastries and sweets from the best-loved South Shore caterers. It's all part of the South Shore Community Center's Kitchen Tour 2004, Friday, April 2, from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

As individual as their owners, each of this year's six Cohasset kitchens reflects the vast and varied options available to today's homeowner when planning or decorating a kitchen as well as the individual style and flare of today's hostess.

Advanced tickets may be purchased at the Center or by calling 781-383-0088. Tickets are $25 and $30 the day of the tour. Ticket sales are limited, so early purchase is suggested.

Funds from the Kitchen Tour 2004 will be used to support the programs of the South Shore Community Center. The Center, at 3 North Main St., Cohasset is a non-profit organization dedicated to a wide range of educational and enrichment programs for infants to seniors.

For more information about the Kitchen Tour or for a free course schedule call 781-383-0088.

Garage dance

There will be a dance at the Garage on Friday, March 5, from 7 to 10 p.m. Everyone from Grades 6 and over is welcome. There will be a door charge of $5 per person. Snacks and refreshments will be sold as well.

The production crew of "Poppin' Into Spring" is hard at work

'Poppin' into Spring' on stage soon

"Poppin' Into Spring" with a fling, a flare and a formal setting is under production at First Parish in Cohasset. Performance nights are Friday and Saturday, March 19and 20. Theater-goers will enjoy a full-fledged evening at the Pops including gourmet appetizers, fabulous desserts, and entertainment by this beautifully costumed and choreographed musical ensemble – tuxedos, glittering gowns, champagne and roses.

This Spring presentation has been a tradition at First Parish for the past 15 years. The concert has a history of being a fun-filled evening of musical surprises and camaraderie as the multi-talented cast pull out all the stops to entertain. This year First Parish's own super-talents are coming together to create a musical presentation of Broadway hits, spirituals, song and dance routines, instrumentals, rounds, and audience sing-alongs. The Pops Extra surprise that's planned is too good to miss.

Returning will be the "Twisters", the well-know guitar/drums/keyboard trio brought back by popular demand. A jazz piano, harp, flute and clarinet all add to the diversity of the evening's entertainment.

These two evenings' performances take place in Trueblood Hall in the Parish House, 23 No. Main Street on Cohasset Common. The evenings begin as a Social Hour from 7 – 8 p.m. with drinks and hors d'ouvres, a displayed of the evening's Auction items, and a raffle sale. The Pops Concert begins at 8 p.m.

Reservations are strongly suggested. Please call the First Parish office (Sandy Bailey) at 781.383.1100 or the Bloomfields at 781-383-1360. Tickets are $25/person or $50/patron. Full tables for 8 may be reserved at $200.

Jade Forest to host seminar on 'I Ching'

March 26-28, Professor Zhang Guangde will offer I Ching, Tai Chi, Health Preservation, and TCM at the Jade Forest, 130 King St.. Professor Zhang is one of China's most eminent Qigong scholars. He is founder of the Dao Yin Yang Sheng Gong Center in Beijing and Professor and Researcher at the Wushu Dept. of Beijing University.

The average person has been indoctrinated by books and media to think of Tai Chi as a beautiful fluid movement pattern. Yet, long before Tai Chi Chuan existed in its current form as a martial and wellness art comprised of movement patterns Tai Chi existed in the aftermath of Wu Chi (nothingness) as a "way of being" and as an expression of the I Ching. In this weekend Professor Zhang Guangde will teach about the role of the I Ching in Chinese cosmology, as well as its utilitarian aspects as guide for practical and healthy living. There will be several simple movement patterns taught, including the famous Ba Duan Jin (8 Brocades), and the Yi Jin Jing (Muscle Changing Classic).

The cost to attend is $300 ($270 ppd by March 15). Payable to Jade Forest, 130 King St, Cohasset, MA 02025. Please contact Jade Forest at 781-383-6822. www.jfkungfu.com. jadeforest@comcast.net.

Quilt Show & Luncheon is March 6

A view of some of the quilts featured in last year's show.

"There is no finer sleep beneath Heaven above than under a quilt handmade with Love" is the saying that appears on the back of the quilt being auctioned off at the 11 Annual Quilt Show and Luncheon at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset on Saturday, March 6. More than 55 of the South Shore's most beautiful quilts will be displayed from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Tickets for the quilt show and luncheon are just $10 each. Proceeds support Boston's Pediatric AIDS Charitable Trust and Reach Out and Read. Be sure to get your tickets early for this popular charitable event by stopping by the church office on Highland Avenue from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday, or by calling 781-383-0345.

WIN Tickets to See the World's Greatest Skaters!

Cedarmere abutters file appeal

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Flint and Kennedy charge that the Planning Board should not have granted Cedarmere a special permit because of its lack of a wastewater treatment plan.

Prior to the Cedarmere development team's being granted a special permit by the Planning Board, abutter to the project Charles Flint said he would file an appeal should the permit be granted. The Planning Board did grant the permit on Jan. 15, and Flint has not gone back on his word.

Flint, 215 South Main St., and John Kennedy, 115 Beechwood St., filed a joint appeal in Norfolk Superior Court on Feb. 3, 2004, in an effort to not only annul the decision of the board, but to award the two their cost of suit, including attorney's fees, as well as grant further relief as the court deems appropriate.

The suit names the defendants as King Taylor LLC, King Taylor Cohasset LLC, and Planning Board members Al Moore, Peter Pratt, Bob Sturdy, Bill Good, and Chris Ford. Ford recently stepped down from his position on the Planning Board.

Flint and Kennedy charge that the Planning Board should not have granted Cedarmere a special permit because of its lack of a wastewater treatment plan. The suit quotes the bylaw, which states, "the applicant shall provide…sufficient information, including soil evaluation and percolation test data, in accordance with the rules and regulations of the Cohasset Board of Health and applicable Department of Environmental Protection regulations, to make a determination that adequate provision is made for the disposal of septic waste or written confirmation from the Town of Cohasset Sewer Commission detailing an agreement to accept the proposed wastewater flow."

Because the Sewer Commission denied the Cedarmere team access to the town's sewer lines, and Cedarmere has not submitted an alternate wastewater plan for approval, the abutters say Cedarmere is in violation of the bylaw and their application is not complete. They believe without a complete plan, the Planning Board does not have the right to issue a special permit.

However, after Cedarmere was denied access to the town's sewer, developers decided to file an appeal. They are still awaiting a decision from the courts and believe they have a good chance of overturning the Sewer Commission's decision. In the meantime, they believe their wastewater plans fulfill the bylaw, and are aware the final approval of their project is conditioned on having a definitive wastewater plan.

The Cedarmere development team was granted a special permit by the Planning Board as a result of a unanimous vote on Jan. 14. The special permit was granted with a list of 67 conditions, and was filed with the Town Clerk's office on Jan. 15. When a special permit is granted, there is a 20-day period in which appeals can be filed before the plans can move forward. Flint and Kennedy filed their appeal on Feb. 3, stating the Planning Board's decision was "arbitrary, capricious, whimsical, and in excess of the authority of the board for several reasons."

In late July of 2003, Cedarmere developers applied for a special permit to build 105 units of senior housing on the 41 acre parcel of land known as the Hayes Estate, located off of Beechwood Street. The principals, Kelli and David Calhoun of Sheldon Road and Tom Ragno of Lexington, had planned on building under the town's Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw, which requires a special permit. As an incentive to build senior housing, developers who are granted a special permit are allowed to build more densely than would be allowed under the town's zoning regulations.

Throughout the entire public hearing phase of the approval process, Flint and other abutters have expressed their concerns regarding various aspects of the project, namely the density, whether affordable units will "count" toward the town's affordable housing stock, and how wastewater will be handled.

OBITUARIES

Rosilla T. Trott

Rosilla T. Trott, 100, a lifelong resident of Cohasset, died Feb. 19, 2004, at Southwood at Norwell Nursing Center following a brief illness.

Chief Robert Jackson was approached about possibly sending one of his officers to instructor training, and he thought it would be a great program for the department to become involved in.

"We thought this was a good way for the department to interact with the middle-high school students," said Jackson, adding he thinks it is a very worthwhile project because so many students will be leaving their small hometown for larger cities. "Hopefully through this program, they will be a little more aware of their surroundings," Jackson said.

The department had money from a grant which Jackson used to fund officer Michael Carini's three-day training course to become certified as an instructor. "He's got a master's degree, but he's also got a black belt," said Jackson, which he thought would make Carini a perfect instructor for the course.

Since the age of 10, Carini has been training in the martial arts, specifically Parker Kenpo, a type of karate.

But the Police Department only has so much to give in terms of funding, which is where the Social Service League has stepped forward to make the project financially feasible. "We were the last piece of the puzzle," said Program Committee Chairman Holly Hill. Because one of the last requirements to pass the R.A.D. course is taking part in a simulated attack, equipment is necessary to ensure all participating are protected. Both the instructor who acts as the "attacker," and the female who is being "attacked" wear some padding and protective gear. There are also instructional videos and other training items for the program, and the Social Service League picked up the entire $2,700 tab.

"We thought this was something we would be more than willing to help with," said Hill.

Everyone involved is working hard to get the program off the ground as soon as possible, and are aiming to offer a pilot program this spring in a selected physical education class of between 10 and 12 senior girls, which is the standard class size for the program. Gill said students currently take a 90-minute physical education class, and he hopes over a 12-week timeframe, a R.A.D. course could be taught for an hour of each class. In the future, he hopes to see a R.A.D. course offered for senior girls every quarter, as well as classes for those in the community.

While classes during school would be free for students, a "nominal fee," would be charged for those in the community. Hill said by offering the class to those in the community, it would allow students who attend private schools to take part in the course as well.

The R.A.D. program was started in 1989 and offers realistic self-defense tactics and techniques for women. It is a comprehensive program that begins by teaching awareness, prevention, risk reduction and risk avoidance, and progresses to the basics of hands-on defense training. The course does not offer training in the Martial Arts. Students are given a manual and workbook which outlines the program, and a free lifetime return and practice policy is offered for all R.A.D. graduates. Equipment has been ordered and Hill estimates it will arrive in time to begin offering classes this spring.

For more information, please contact the Social Service League at (781) 383-0821 or visit the R.A.D. Systems web site at www.rad-systems.com. Signup for classes will be advertised in the Mariner and will be coordinated by the Social Service League.

Sting tries to make smoking history

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

You have to be 18 to buy tobacco products in Massachusetts.

In an effort to make sure local vendors who sell cigarettes comply with the law, the Hanover-based South Shore Boards of Health Collaborative Tobacco Control Program in conjunction with area Boards of Health conducts tobacco stings periodically in area towns.

"The Cohasset Board of Health believes that stings are important because they help us to enforce the non-smoking law," said Steve Bobo, chairman of the Board of Health.

"The Cohasset Board of Health believes that stings are important because they help us to enforce the non-smoking law."
— Steve Bobo, chairman of the Board of Health.

On Jan. 19, two Cohasset retailers — CVS and Leo's Exxon — were found to have sold a pack of cigarettes to a minor.

After a Feb. 2 public hearing on the violations, the Cohasset Board of Health imposed a fine of $200 for CVS and $300 for Leo's Exxon. The board also suspended the tobacco sales permit at CVS for seven days and at the Exxon station for 12 days. The suspensions started Feb. 5.

This was CVS's second violation in a two-year period and the third for Leo's Exxon. The fine structure increases with each violation within two years, explained Tara Tradd, of the Cohasset Board of Health office.

Employees at both places are required to participate in an education program provided by the Collaborative.

The sting is part of an effort to enforce the state's tobacco sale, vending and distribution laws. No one under the age of 18 is allowed to purchase any type of tobacco product. However, there are no laws prohibit those under 18 from using tobacco.

"Our goal is to limit youth access to tobacco by holding vendors responsible for selling a controlled product," says Jim Wells, director of the Collaborative, which is funded through the Mass. Tobacco Control Program that operates under the Department of Public Health. "State law requires anyone who sells tobacco to check the ID of anyone who looks under 27."

During the sting, which is conducted quarterly, an underage person goes into a store and asks for cigarettes. If he or she is turned away, the store is ruled in compliance and nothing further happens. If the store does sell, the minor and an adult educator from the Collaborative file a report and submit it to the local town Board of Health.

Thirteen vendors in Cohasset were checked Jan. 19. KoKo Island was closed at the time of the sting and not checked.

The Cohasset Board of Health wants to congratulate those vendors who were in compliance, Tradd said. They include: Cohasset Food Mart, Tedeschi's, Cohasset Mobil, Walgreen's, Curtis Liquors, Cohasset News, Mary Lou's News, Shaw's, Stop & Shop, Village Wine and Spirits and Cohasset Plaza Liquors.

Elm St. apartments may get new locks, stoves and fridges

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Someone forgot to tell Marilyn LeBlanc and Nancy Barrett that Christmas was two months ago.

But judging from the women's faces, the present they received Monday night was a like terrific holiday surprise.

"Thank you so much," said LeBlanc, who is director of the Cohasset Housing Authority, as she shook the hand of each individual member of the Community Preservation Committee.

The CPC, which is charged with making recommendations on spending from the Community Preservation Fund, will ask Town Meeting for some $70,000 for upgrades to 60 Elm St., an apartment complex run by the Cohasset Housing Authority.

If Town Meeting voters give the OK, the money will be spent on entry door security locks and an intercom system; a generator for the community room; 20 new refrigerators; 35 new electric stoves and to install door handles to replace door knobs, which are difficult for some frail seniors to turn.

The Harborview Apartment complex, located behind the police-fire station, consists of 64 units of subsidized housing in 16 buildings. The housing is for qualifying senior citizens 60 and older. There are also 12 units for the developmentally disabled. The complex was built with state funds back in 1974.

According to Taffy Nothnagle, who is the housing authority representative on the CPC, back in 1974, no one worried about security systems and locks. But times have changed, she explained.

She said state funding for capital upgrades has been long in coming. The complex has been waiting since 1996 for new sidewalks that were promised.

The community room generator is needed so there is a warm place for residents to congregate should they not have any family near by during power outages, Nothnagle explained. The apartments have electric heat. "There have been two power outages this winter so far," she said.

Many of the units still have the original refrigerators and stoves.

LeBlanc said the housing authority purchases through HUD (U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development), which provides the lowest prices. Barrett, who accompanied LeBlanc to the meeting, is chairman of the Cohasset Housing Authority.

The CPC makes recommendations to Town Meeting, where voters have the final say on whether to fund a particular project using money from the Community Preservation Fund.

Money from the Community Preservation Fund can be spent in three specific areas: open space, affordable housing, and historic preservation. Each year, the Community Preservation Committee must spend or bank 10 percent of its annual revenue on each of those areas.

Money for the fund comes from a 1.5 percent real estate tax surcharge and state matching funds. The town adopted the Community Preservation Act in 2001.

Alternatives to open burning

Open burning releases large amounts of carbon dioxide, other gases, and solid substances directly into the air, which can contribute to respiratory problems. Disposal of natural materials is never as good for the environment as using them again in a different form. Tree limbs, brush and other forestry debris can be chipped or composted into landscaping material. Check with the public works or highway department; many have chippers at their municipal recycling center or transfer station, and will process debris from homeowners.

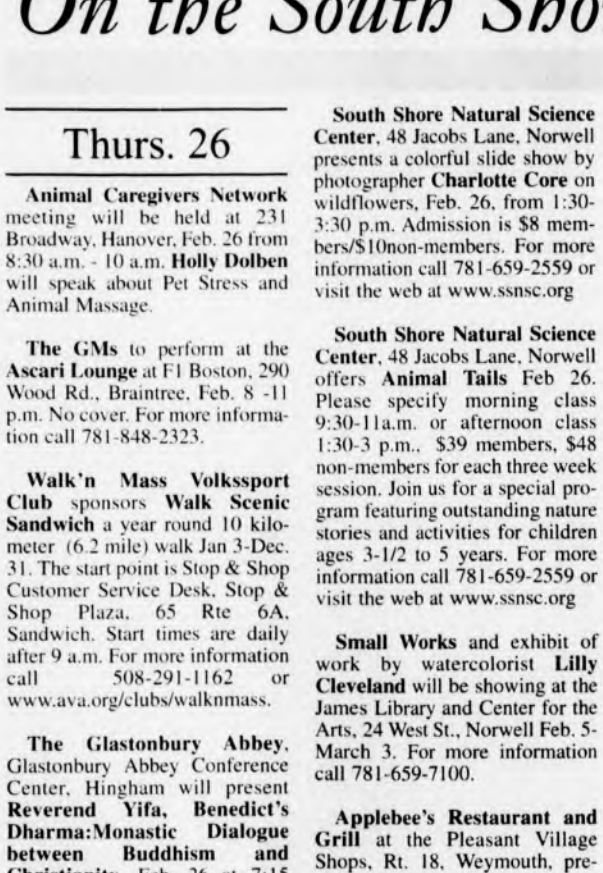
Elizabeth Berkley and Richard Dreyfuss in "Sly Fox."

BEST BET

"Sly Fox" brings Berkley to Boston

Elizabeth Berkley first gained fame on the television teen series "Saved By The Bell." Berkley left the Saturday morning sitcom in 1994, and a year later starred in the infamously awful feature film, "Showgirls." A lesser talent might have sunk under the weight of that movie's failure, but for Berkley things have only looked up since then. She has appeared in films like "The First Wives Club," "Any Given Sunday," and "The Curse of the Jade Scorpion" and just this week was named by "The New York Times" as one of eight "people to watch" on the New York theater scene thanks to her featured role in the new stage production of "Sly Fox." Now through March 7, prior to Broadway, the actress can be seen - alongside Richard Dreyfuss, Eric Stoltz, Rene Auberjonois and Bronson Pinchot - in the revival of the Larry Gelbart comedy, based on Ben Jonson's "Volpone" and once again being directed by Arthur Penn, at Boston's Shubert Theatre.



It doesn't matter that cable reruns of "Saved By The Bell" and a DVD version of "Showgirls" may mean that those projects live on forever, Berkley has no need to look back. "People can choose to live in the past, but I'm all about what's now," she explained last week during an interview in the Shubert lobby.

Berkley may be all about today, but "Sly Fox" is set at the dawn of the Gold Rush in San Francisco in the late 1800s and concerns a con man out to swindle as many people as he can before staging his own demise. Berkley plays the devoutly religious Mrs. Truckle, the only virtuous character amidst a range of rapscallions. "Sly Fox" may be a period piece, but Berkley sees much contemporary relevance in its story.

"As I see it, the theme of the play is very timely, because of everything that's going on today in corporate America. It holds up a mirror to many sides of our humanity including greed and lust. What's great is that it's all done within a comedy."

"Sly Fox" will be at the Shubert Theatre, 265 Tremont Street, Boston, through March 7. For tickets and information, call 800/447-7400 or visit www.telecharge.com.

AT A LOSS TO EXPLAIN?

Sensorineural hearing loss is one of the two basic types of hearing loss. It results from damage to the sensory (or hair) cells located in the cochlea of the inner ear, or to the nerves that transmit sounds to the brain. Over time, hair cells grow old and die, inhibiting the conduction of sound wave messages to the brain. Sensorineural hearing loss includes presbycusis, or age-related hearing loss. Noise is the greatest contributor to hair cell loss. An extremely loud sound, such as an explosion, can cause sensorineural hearing loss, but it is more often caused by the cumulative effect of daily assaults of noises above 85 decibels. Fortunately, hearing instruments help those with this type of hearing loss.

Unfortunately, many people don't realize they have exposed their hearing to dangerous noise levels until it's too late. And although new research and products are making better hearing more accessible than ever to the hearing impaired, it is still best to avoid places where noise levels are high unless your hearing is protected. When a hearing aid is indicated, rely on FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER to fit you with the most appropriate aid to suit your needs. Be kind to your ears - call us at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, 781-337-1144. We accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass Health.

P.S. More than 80% of people with a hearing impairment have sensorineural hearing loss.

Voters say GO – Polly!

Polly Logan stands outside the polls on Tuesday. She won reelection to the Republican State Committee in a landslide.

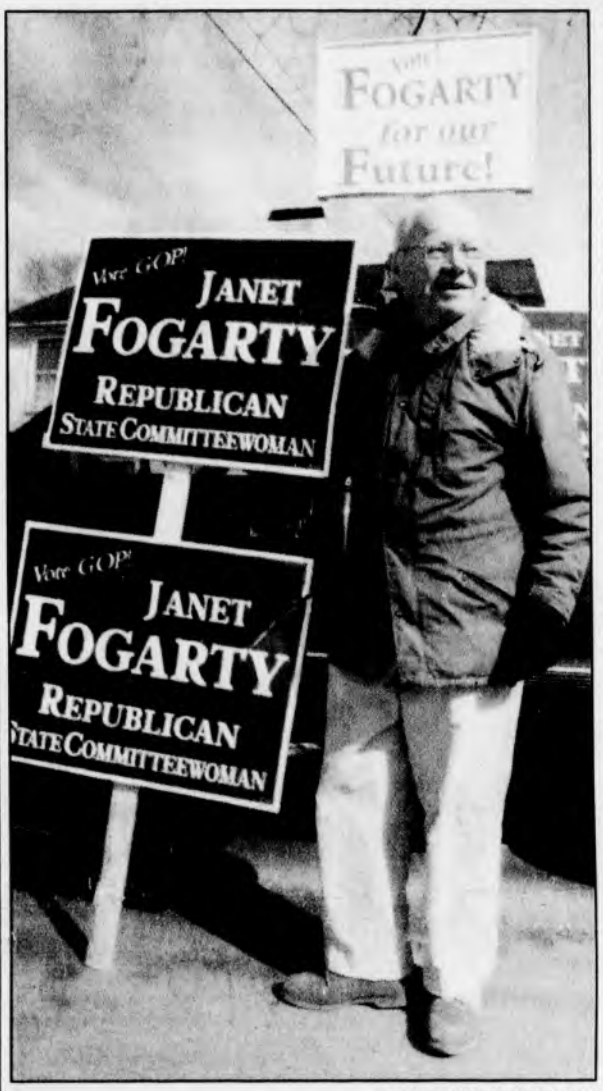
Pledges to work on growing party

By Matthew J. Gill
MGILL@CNC.COM

With John Kerry closing in on the Democratic nomination and Republican President George W. Bush running unopposed, the only hot race Tuesday in the eight-town Plymouth-Norfolk District was for seats on the Republican State Committee — for both men and women.

Voters in Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Norwell, Scituate, Marshfield, and Duxbury elected Hingham resident John Cafferty with 52 percent of the vote, while incumbent Polly Logan of Cohasset garnered 50 percent in the eight towns. Logan earned 2,087 votes district-wide, while Cafferty won 1,708 votes.

Both candidates earned about twice as many as their closest challengers.



Logan the long-time incumbent, defeated Anne Hilbert of Weymouth and Janet Fogarty of Cohasset. And Cafferty defeated challengers Conley Ford and Ron Wheatley, both of Scituate. Incumbent Tom Barry of Duxbury did not seek reelection.

As expected by many, voter turnout throughout the district was low. Just over 19 percent of Hingham registered voters turned out at the polls, while 25 percent voted in Cohasset, 18 percent in Scituate, 15 percent voted in Marshfield, and only 5 percent voted in Norwell.

Following the election the winners shared thoughts on the race and goals for the party.

Sherry gesture lifts the spirits

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Although most registered voters opted to sit Super Tuesday out, for those devoted to politics, sign holding along "Election Row" on Highland Avenue is always an interesting affair.

In fact Eleanor Wheatley of Scituate, who arrived just after 4 p.m., liked the atmosphere. Wheatley's husband, Ronald, was in a tough three-way race for Republican State Committeeman in the eight-town Plymouth-Norfolk District that includes Cohasset.

"I'm usually campaigning only in Scituate and Marshfield," said Wheatley, referring to her husband's runs for state representative against Frank Hynes in the Fourth Plymouth District. Wheatley, holding a sign for her spouse, stood among the Janet Fogarty camp. "I'm enjoying being in Cohasset immensely," she said.

Then a fellow Republican offered Wheatley and all the sign holders along the street – Republican or Democrat – a small glass of cream sherry, literally lifting everyone's spirits.

The sherry gesture prompted Tom Fogarty, whose sister Janet Fogarty was trying to unseat incumbent Republican State Committeewoman Polly Logan, to suggest a real tail-gate would be nice. And others standing

It's official: override to go before the voters

Town Meeting, polls must OK

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Despite some reservations about the price tag, selectmen have agreed to place a $400,000 override for the schools on the Town Meeting Warrant.

Passing an override is a two-step process, which first requires Town Meeting to approve the budget contingent on the override and then a ballot question must pass by a simple majority at the polls.

"As much as I don't want to, I'm going to support this," said Selectman Tom Callahan, adding he feels the town has so many outside factors which are out of its control, it has been "boxed in" to making this decision.

However, he did put forth a few recommendations for the future, which included not hiring any more school administrators. He suggested instead of cutting back the position of school business manager to a part-time post, that it be eliminated altogether. Instead, he believes the town's director of finance should take over the duties on both the town and school sides. (Michael Buckley is the Director of Finance.)

If passed, the Prop. 2-1/2 override would add 23 cents per $1,000 to the tax rate. The owner of a $600,000 home has a property tax bill of about $7,134 this year. If the override passes, that bill would increase about $294 to $7,428 - $138 of which would be attributed to the override.

Another way of looking at the tax numbers is: the current tax rate is $11.89 per $1,000 of assessed valuation and the town is allowed to increase that rate next year by 26 cents under Prop. 2-1/2, the state law that caps the amount a municipality can raise its tax levy from year to year. If the override passes, another 23 cents would be added to the tax rate for a total of $12.38, according to Town Finance Director Michael Buckley.

"As much as I don't want to, I'm going to support this."
— Selectman Tom Callahan

The School Committee is recommending a budget of $11.9 million which is 6.45 percent or $723,753 over last year. But during these tight fiscal times that are also facing the town side of the budget, that figure is about $400,000 more than Town Manager Mark Haddad has allocated for the schools next year.

In addition to Selectmen, the Advisory Committee also voted to unanimously recommend the override, but not before first meeting with the School Committee one last time, in an effort to answer remaining questions. The Town Meeting on March 27 will act on the $400,000 request and then it will face a ballot box vote.

The Advisory Committee's main concern was whether the proposed budget was as low as it could possibly be. One of the first items to be discussed was whether the $169,000 set aside for special education requests couldn't be phased in over the course of the next two years. Member Pat Waters said he understood the additional special education teachers at both Osgood and the middle-high school, as well as the school psychologist, are preventative measures to help ensure future students who require special education will remain in Cohasset, rather than choose to be educated out of district.

However, the School Committee said based on the current students enrolled in the schools and projected enrollment figures, the additional staff will help save money in the long run because parents do have the option to seek help elsewhere if they feel their son or daughter's needs cannot be met in Cohasset. By making the additions to the in-house staff, the School Committee estimates the schools will save roughly $50,000. School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn added the budget does compensate for the special education additions by eliminating three elementary level teachers.

However, Advisory Committee member Maureen Jerz said no matter what improvements are made to the special education staff, "a parent could say that's not good enough," and reject what Cohasset has to offer.

There was also discussion between the boards concerning whether two full-time principals are needed at Osgood and Deer Hill when many towns have elementary schools that are kindergarten through fifth grade with only one principal presiding. However, Supt. Edward Malvey said with the amount of students in the schools, even if the entire elementary contingent was together in one building, "One person could not do it alone."

"We're not unique," in having two elementary school principals, said Malvey, adding most elementary schools that offer kindergarten through grade five in one building have a full-time assistant principal as well.

The Advisory Committee also

OT is adding up to big expense

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Article 5 on the Town Meeting Warrant will ask the town to appropriate $500,000 for various departmental budgets, $135,000 of which will be spent on overtime for both the police and fire departments.

At the behest of selectmen, Town Manager Mark Haddad provided them with more information Tuesday concerning the OT figures.

Haddad presented figures dating back to 1998 for both the fire and police departments. Currently, at $75,000, it is the fire department that is the worst overtime offender, which is a direct result of South Shore Hospital's terminating ambulance service to the town in December.

Sullivan suggested an in-depth analysis be conducted for both departments, which will outline why overtime is being paid.

The fire department is currently running on six-person shifts. On each shift, two members must be certified paramedics, now that the town must run its own ambulance service. Currently, there are 10 certified paramedics on the department, which means any time a paramedic takes time off for an injury or vacation, someone needs to be called in to take over on the shift.

Haddad said because the town does run its own ambulance service, it has generated more revenue. In fact, ambulance revenue has increased consistently every year since 1998. From 2002 to 2003 ambulance revenue increased by almost $60,000. However, overtime costs continue to increase as well, and because expended overtime for the fire department went from $145,000 in 2002 to $213,996 in 2003, the additional ambulance revenue doesn't seem to be making a difference.

"We're not quite breaking even," said Selectman Michael Sullivan.

But overtime costs are high due to on the job injuries as well. When someone cannot come in to work, an additional member of

Phone scam about selectmen's race

Town Manager Mark Haddad said he was contacted yesterday (Wednesday) by a town resident who had received a phone call from an individual conducting a town survey. One of the questions asked was who the resident was going to support in the race the Board of Selectmen, Haddad said. When the resident asked who authorized the survey, the resident was told the Town Manager had authorized it, he said. "This is completely untrue. In no way did I, nor any representative (of the Board of Selectmen) commission such a survey. It is illegal for the town to expend funds for such a purpose and residents should be aware of this hoax," said Haddad. A report of the incident has been filed by Town Counsel with the Office of Campaign Finance, he said.

Correction is noted

A story in last week's Mariner should have said Town Manager Mark Haddad said Town Clerk Marion Douglas spoke with the elections division of the Secretary of State's office and was told the citizen's petition on the Cook Estate could not come off the Warrant. The article incorrectly reported Douglas was told the petition could come off the Warrant. The Mariner regrets the error.

Union negotiations

Town Manager Mark Haddad said he has been working on contract negotiations with four town unions, and has reached a tentative agreement with two. He said both the Cohasset Clerical Association and the Cohasset Library Association have agreed to zero percent increases for fiscal year 2005, and 3 percent increase for FY 2006.

"I would like to thank the clerical union for working with the town and agreeing to go with the zero percent," Haddad told selectmen last week. "I would also like to thank the library association for its willingness to work with the town in these tight financial times."

Haddad went on to say the negotiations have brought about "two very favorable contracts for the town" and he is "very happy," to have settled the issue. As far as other union negotiations are concerned, an agreement will have to be made soon, or negotiations will have to be brought up again after Town Meeting. All contract negotiations must be settled 30 days prior to Town Meeting, Haddad said.

CEA has openings

Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris said Cohasset Elder Affairs is looking to fill both full and associate positions on its Board of Directors. She said in a time when many residents are campaigning around town, she would like to make a pitch for "the old-fashioned value of public service," and encourages people to come forward and lend a hand.

"It's a tremendous group, and they do a lot with very little funding," she said. "They're a great bunch of people." McMorris said the openings can be filled by anyone 18 or older.

For more information, please contact the Council on Elder Affairs at (781) 383-9112.

Victoria's to expand

The Board of Selectmen voted last week to grant an alter to premises for the restaurant wine and malt beverage license held by Victoria's Pizza of Cohasset. Ramin Doorandish, manager of Victoria's, located on Route 3A, came before Selectmen to give a brief overview of planned changes to the restaurant, which includes new floors and counters, as well as more space for staff working behind the counter. Doorandish said all abutters had been notified and the Building Inspector had approved the plans. He said the Board of Health will inspect the restaurant once renovations are complete. Doorandish said the changes will make the restaurant more friendly for patrons who wish to stay and dine in the restaurant. During renovations, Victoria's will have only minor changes to its regular operating schedule, closing early only one day, to be followed by a late opening the next. Otherwise, the restaurant will maintain a regular schedule.

LIP application process drafted

Town Planner Liz Harrington has compiled a step-by-step application process for local implementation of the Department of Housing and Community Development's Local Initiative Program. The material has been reviewed and has met the preliminary approval of the Planning Board. Harrington suggested the Board of Selectmen and Planning Board meet jointly to discuss the process before adopting any new procedure. Town Manager Mark Haddad said he will set up a meeting with members of the DHCD to review and discuss the information.

Register to vote by 8 p.m., Friday

Any citizen of the United States who is a Massachusetts resident and who will be 18 years old on or before a town meeting or Election Day may register to vote. There is no waiting period to be eligible to register to vote. If you move, you may register to vote as soon as you move into your new home.

Registration is closed for a brief period before each town meeting and election to allow election officials time to prepare the voting lists. If you register during a "closed" period, you will be eligible to vote only in later town meetings or elections.

The last day to register to vote for the Annual Town Meeting (March 27, 2004) and Annual Town Election (April 3) is Friday, March 5, from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the Town Clerk's office. Mail-in registration forms, are available from the Town Clerk's office, Cohasset Post Office and Paul Pratt memorial Library and must be postmarked on or before March 5.

If the Republican Party is to grow in Massachusetts, and create what many of the candidates were describing throughout the campaign as a "balanced" State House, Logan said people have to get more involved on a personal level.

An incumbent for more than 30 years, Polly Logan said she still enjoys the campaign process.

"I love it, I love to go door to door," she said. "That's the way we're going to have to do it, one by one."

Logan said the consistent goal of committee members is to continue to get more Republican candidates elected to the State House, and to continue to open up the Republican party to younger and unenrolled voters.

"We have to plan things that involve people who may be potential candidates."

Although she's been campaigning for years, during this campaign, Logan employed the use of a campaign Web site for the very first time, technology she said was helpful.

Not only does she want to sign up more Republican voters, but Logan said she wants to get more young people thinking about, and finding an appreciation and passion for politics in general.

"I think I can bring a lot to the table," said Cafferty, who has been involved in Republican party politics in Massachusetts for 26 years. "I want to make sure we're going down the same road. Hopefully we can get a plan that we can all agree on."

"The first thing we have to do is get organized," Cafferty said. "When we bring people in we have to show them we have a plan."

In recent years, Cafferty said Massachusetts Republicans have not been very efficient in spreading their message at the grassroots level, something he hopes to change during his term.

Cafferty was particularly impressed by his vote totals in Weymouth and Hingham, where he earned more than 500 votes each, or 71 and 84 percent respectively.

He said he wants to get new people involved in the party, and get candidates to run for different positions in town government — including school committee and the planning board.

"There's a new breed of Republican out there," Cafferty said. "And they need to have a plan. Young voters are interested if we have something to offer them."

Cafferty said in 10 years he would like to have more Republicans in his district than in any other district in the state. He said the low turnout didn't come as a surprise.

"We knew it was going to be a very low turnout. Most people don't know what state committee man or woman does."

Logan said she was disappointed that Scituate's Conley Ford lost the race for committeeman because the two campaigned together. She wants to continue to work with him to bring unenrolled voters over to the Republican side. "He just has to be kept involved," Logan said.

And despite the loss, Ford plans to do just that.

Ford, who won in his hometown and in Marshfield, said he appreciates the support he's received from voters throughout the district, and said the election and the entire campaign was a positive sign for Massachusetts Republicans.

Although Janet Fogarty came up short in her bid for State Committeewoman, she said she learned a lot from her first political campaign.

She said many young voters cannot relate to today's Republican party. "I've had a lot of people say they just can't identify with the party as it is right now," she said.

If the party is going to challenge the Democrats for supremacy in the Statehouse, Fogarty said there has to be party unity.

around noted hamburgers and hot dogs wouldn't be apropos, but scallops wrapped in bacon or canapés with caviar just might be.

All the talk wasn't about food, however. The Democrat contingent, confident of their candidate John Kerry's win, pontificated about who Kerry's running mate might be. Democrat activist John McNabb said it was a toss up between U.S. Sen. John Edwards of North Carolina and Gov. Bill Richardson of New Mexico, who held several important posts in the Clinton administration.

Although the predicted rain didn't materialize until after dark, only 1,232 of Cohasset's roughly 5,000 registered voters cast votes in Tuesday's presidential primary. Voting was steady but light. But the spring-like weather seemed to put everyone in a good mood.

"There have been lots of friendly faces," noted Agnes McCann, who is chairman of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee, as she held Kerry signs outside the polls.

At the end of the day, incumbent Republican State Committeewoman Polly Logan with 351 votes, beat opponents Janet Fogarty (145 votes) and Anne Hilbert (21 votes). On the men's side, John Cafferty of Hingham with 163 votes, edged out Conley Ford (134 votes) and Ronald Wheatley (71 votes), both of Scituate.

President George W. Bush, who was unopposed in the primary, picked up 404 votes and Kerry received 485 votes to John Edwards' 165. Edwards, a Democrat senator from North Carolina, dropped out of the race the following day, virtually assuring Kerry of the Democrat nomination. Top vote-getter in Cohasset was incumbent Democrat State Committeeman Fred Koed, who got 524 votes. Koed is a selectman and former water commissioner.

Rob Spofford, who is running for Selectman, was out with his campaign signs along "Election Row" even though the Town Election is a month away.

"I'm getting an early start and getting my name out," Spofford said. "I feel it is a great opportunity to show our colors," he said referring to his red, white and blue signs.

Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, also had sign-holders out. Bradley will be seeking a third term in November.

Public airing of Cohasset police matter can continue

Hearing to resume March 15

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"The judge ruled appropriately on the law and the facts that the two officers' statutory right to an open hearing before the public is paramount as well as the press' right to report on it."
— Attorney Doug Louison

A Superior Court judge did not order the ongoing Cohasset police disciplinary hearing be conducted behind closed doors as the parents of a local juvenile had hoped.

In a hearing last Wednesday in Dedham Superior Court, Judge Isaac Borenstein denied the motion from the juvenile's parents to close the proceedings. The name and address of the juvenile were inadvertently mentioned during testimony during one of the sessions of the police disciplinary hearing at Town Hall, prompting the parents to seek the court action.

The hearing, which has been televised live on cable-TV and covered extensively in the press, has been the subject of considerable public interest.

The ongoing disciplinary hearing, which accused officers Sgt. William Quigley and patrolman James McLean asked be held in public, was slated to resume this past Monday but has been postponed to March 15. Attorney Richard Henderson, who is representing the juvenile's parents, indicated he may appeal Borenstein's decision, according to lawyers at the Superior Court hearing last week. Henderson did not return phone calls to the Mariner.

The hearing was postponed to March 15 to allow time for the appeal and for the parties to draft an agreement pursuant to the judge's recommendations. The parties have agreed to refrain from using any identifying information relative to the juvenile and his parents.

Judge Borenstein denied the parents' motion for an injunction to close the hearings during the Feb. 25 court proceeding. Reached by telephone, the judge declined to comment.

But according to lawyers at the hearing, Borenstein said the public interest outweighed the juvenile's right to privacy in an administrative hearing. In other words, the juvenile's right to privacy in this type of proceeding did not trump the officers' right to a public hearing.

"The judge ruled appropriately on the law and the facts that the two officers' statutory right to an open hearing before the public is paramount as well as the press' right to report on it," said Attorney Doug Louison, who is representing the two officers.

According to lawyers for Community Newspaper Company (CNC), the parent company of the Cohasset Mariner, which sought to intervene to keep the hearings open, there were less draconian measures available to insure the juvenile's right to privacy without completely excluding the public and the press.

The charges facing the officers include alleged violations of search and seizure procedures during the juvenile's arrest.

"The judge recognized that the rights asserted by the family of the juvenile are adequately protected without extreme measures," said Attorney Robert Dushman, of Brown Rudnick Berlack Israels LLP, which is representing the Cohasset Mariner.

"The judge was able to come up with a solution that provided adequate protection for the privacy interests that the juvenile and his parents asserted, while at the same time preserving the right of the press as the eyes and ears of the public to attend the hearing and inform the public of the activities of public officials," Dushman said.

There was discussion at the hearing if the juvenile's parents were called to testify and the hearing was televised, in a small town people might connect the dots, so to speak. Borenstein said he would address that issue if it ever arose, CNC lawyers said.

Officer McLean and Sgt. Quigley have been on paid administrative leave since Oct. 20, 2003. Town Manager Mark Haddad, who is serving as the hearing officer, will decide what punishment if any to mete out to the officers including possible termination. The officers, who maintain they have done nothing wrong, have the right to appeal Haddad's decision to Civil Service.

The town has charged both Quigley and McLean with conduct unbecoming an officer for allegedly drinking on duty at the Rod & Gun Club. McLean faces charges of inappropriate activity in one arrest and three arrests and one booking procedure by Quigley are being questioned. The officers did not learn about the charges until Jan. 13 and continue to deny all the allegations.

Louison is optimistic the officers will prevail.

"I think we've already won and this is the town's case. We haven't even presented the defense yet," he said. "Any outside view of the proceedings would come away with the sense the officers not only acted appropriately but are certainly not in any violation."

The town's attorney Peter Berry declined to comment.

We'll make you smile.

Supt. finalists' home turf visited

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Now in the final stages of the interviewing process, School Committee Vice Chairman Chartis Tebbetts and member Pat Martin made site visits last Thursday to the school districts of both candidates vying for retiring Cohasset superintendent Edward Malvey's position.

Malvey announced in October he would be retiring at the end of this school year, and since then the School Committee has been busy receiving résumés, forming a screening committee for potential candidates, and participating in the interviewing process. The two finalists for the position are Denise Walsh of Plymouth, currently superintendent of the Middleborough public schools, and Michael Malone of Taunton, currently superintendent of the Plainville public schools.

During the site visit to Middleborough, Tebbetts and Martin met with roughly 25 of Walsh's co-workers, during the course of three and a half hours. Prior to their visit, 10 phone calls had been made to conduct short interviews with various individuals in her school department. In Plainville, the two met with roughly 19 of Malone's co-workers during two and a half hours, and prior to the visit, five telephone interviews had been completed.

"We spent time with teams of co-workers and it was a very productive meeting," said Martin, adding the meetings were informative and provided additional references the School Committee would like to pursue. "We'd like to take another week before we make our decision, to make sure we do all our homework," she said.

Because Tebbetts and Martin were not able to either meet or speak on the phone with every member of both school committees prior to their meeting, the two thought it was important to hold off on making a final decision until those contacts could be made. "I think it's important to talk to all of the School Committee members in the two communities and we've talked to the majority," said Tebbetts.

While Tebbetts and Martin were busy conducting their interviews, Malvey said the two candidates both paid a visit to Cohasset, one in the morning and one in the afternoon. "I think it was very productive for them," said Malvey, adding the two enjoyed their "tour of our beautiful new facilities." Malvey said he shared information with both candidates concerning the various punch-list items which will need to be completed in the future, as the renovation process winds down. Both candidates have experience with school construction and Malvey said both would be more than capable of carrying out the finishing touches.

Malone has served as superintendent in Plainville since 1995. Prior to that, he served as principal for the Liberty Elementary School in Braintree from 1986 to 1995. From 1973 until 1986, he was a teacher in the Braintree Public Schools for students in grades five through eight.

Malone received his bachelor's degree in education and history from Boston State College in 1970, which was followed by a master's degree in instructional technology from the University of Connecticut in 1973. He received his certificate of advanced graduate study in educational administration from Northeastern University in 1981.

Walsh has served as the superintendent in Middleborough since 2000. Prior to that, she served as assistant superintendent for the Silver Lake Regional School District in Kingston. From 1992-1997, she served as the principal of Dedham High School. She was also assistant principal at Hingham High School from 1986-1992, and worked as a teacher, department chair, and assistant principal at Sacred Heart High School in Weymouth from 1979 to 1986.

Walsh received her bachelor's degree in psychology and history as well as a master's degree in education and certificate of advanced graduate study in school administration from Bridgewater State College. She received her doctoral degree from the University of Massachusetts in 2003.

Tebbetts said the original deadline to select a new superintendent was set for March 11, and despite the fact that the committee has been working diligently on the budget, which has taken quite some time, it anticipated making a decision at their Thursday meeting on the night the on-site visits were completed — two weeks ahead of schedule. However, in light of the new contacts the committee would like to pursue, members have decided to take another week and make a decision March 4, one week ahead of schedule.

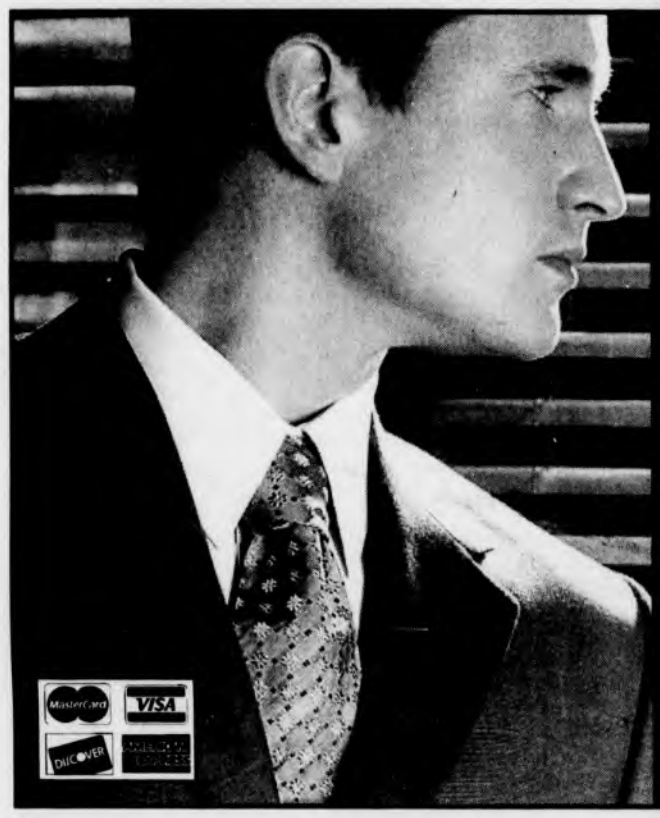
Override to go before the voters brought up the $223,000 cost to cover utilities, and Waters questioned whether the committee had over-budgeted.

"I'm glad you've funded as to what you expect, but have we gone too far?" he asked.



Waters said because the utilities costs are still unknown, it might make more sense to fund the budget at the actual 2003 expenditures, which could save around $50,000 up front. However, the School Committee said it has gone with a number it believes is the best estimate for an actual utilities cost, and it will continue to go with that number.

"We made our best guess based on last year and the year to date's numbers," said School Committee member Mark DeGiacomo, adding the schools could under fund the budget and reduce the override by $100,000, but it would be back again for that $100,000 later on.

"We have put all the expenses we think we're going to incur on the table," said Flynn, and the committee intends to stay with its original numbers.

Aside from questions pertaining to the actual budget figures, Advisory Committee chairman Susan Kent said she wished her committee had had more time to review the budget before having to make its decision. "We have to get the budget sooner," she said. "We understand it's an evolving process."

However, she said she would like to see the process done sooner in the future to give it all the attention it deserves without being rushed.

the department has to be called in to cover the position, and the town is required to pay for the department member who is injured. If the injured party is a paramedic, that requires another paramedic to be called in, and the department currently only has a total of 10.

However, the fire department will soon be adding an additional paramedic to the staff, to take the place of a retiring firefighter. In the future, should any positions open up, Haddad said one additional paramedic will be hired for a total of 12 paramedics on the department.

"Our goal is to have 12," said Haddad, noting that the department runs on four shifts of 12 firefighters, and by having 12 paramedics in the department it will allow for three paramedics to be scheduled on each shift.

"If someone is out, we'll still have two," said Haddad, which he thinks could help cut down on overtime costs. The number of total firefighters, currently at 24, will not change.

The police department is having the same problems as the fire department in terms of on the job injuries adding to its overtime costs. In 2002, $271,928 was spent on police overtime, and in 2003 that total rose to $276,269. While the difference in cost between those two years is only a little more than $4,000, police overtime has been steadily climbing since 1998.

"Why do you think we were significantly lower in 1998 and 1999?" asked Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris. Without all the data before him, Haddad said he could only guess the department was running at full force at that time, and therefore overtime was not needed as much.

In 1998, total expended overtime was $128,476. That figure increased in 1999 to $146,027, and then had a jump of more than $70,000 for a total of $217,142 in 2000. From there, an additional almost $40,000 increase brought the department overtime up to $256,043 in 2001.

Sullivan suggested an in-depth analysis be conducted for both departments, which will outline why overtime is being paid. Figures will be broken down to highlight various overtime needs, including covering for vacation time, sick time, and injuries, to give the board a better understanding of why the costs have been so high and if anything can possibly be done to cut back. Recently, more officers were added to the police department payroll, which was expected to decrease overtime, but hasn't thus far, and Sullivan asked Haddad to look into that matter as well.

Police officer leaves opening in department

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

With Town Manager Mark Haddad looking into ways to help bring down costs associated with overtime, circumstances on the department aren't helping any. Haddad said another officer is now out on leave due to an injury he sustained while on the job. Haddad said to fill the position, one of the detectives will be put back in to cover shifts on the department, effective Monday.

Haddad said he believes the officer intends his absence to be permanent, but until he receives something from the town stating the officer is off the payroll, the town is required to pay his salary.

In terms of filling the position permanently, Haddad said he will be either be looking to fill the position through a lateral transfer or by contacting the Civil Service rehire list. However, he said by filling a position through the list, there is no guarantee the position will be filled quickly.

"Is there a point where overtime gets excessive?" asked Selectman Michael Sullivan, adding the officers will be extremely tired if they're constantly being asked to work extra shifts. Haddad said there is nothing that can be done by the town until he receives a letter stating the officer is off the department.

Baird graduates from Coast Guard Academy

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

IN THE US COAST GUARD

Wow, Micheal Baird has a lot to remember and continue working for. What an amazing accomplishment for you Michael and for your family and friends to feel so very happy and proud about. Michael's graduation from the US Coast Guard Academy. President Bush and Michael's older brother Bill, a captain in the Air Force and a 95 graduate of the US Air Force Academy presented Michael with his Commission as an Ensign in the US Coast Guard. The graduation was held last May and was also attended by Michael's grandparents, his brother Dan and his wife Heather, his brother Tim, who took a leave from his volunteer year with Americorp NCCC, and his proud parents Pat and Bill Baird. Michael is currently stationed on the US Coast Guard Cutter Steadfast out of Astoria, Oregon. Bill is a helicopter pilot currently stationed with his wife Angela, and two sons, Tyler and Mason, at Nellis Air Force Base, Nevada. Dan and Heather live in Boston and Tim is a freshman at the University of Richmond, Va.

UCONN DEAN'S LIST

Thomas Anderson, class of 2007, has been named to the dean's list at Connecticut College for the fall semester. Tom needed to maintain a GPA of 3.3-3.69 to achieve dean's list status. A lot of work for you Tom, keep it up.

EMORY STANDOUT

Karen McMorris, daughter of David and Ronnie McMorris, was named to the dean's list for the fall semester at Emory College, the liberal arts college of Emory University in Atlanta. Students must be in the top 20 percent of Emory College or have a GPA of 3.8 or higher for this honor. Fantastic news Karen.

TUFTS HONORS

Rebecca Moje, Allison Moje and Jeffrey Garber, all of Cohasset, have been named to the dean's list for the fall semester at Tufts University. Way to go, guys! Thomas Chase of Cohasset, an eighth-grade student at St. Paul School in Hingham, has been named a recipient of the Boston College High School Fulton Scholarship. The Fulton Scholarship, named for Father Robert Fulton, was awarded to 27 students from a diverse and highly competitive applicant pool to the BC High Class of 2008. William was selected based on his outstanding work on the entrance examination, recommendations from teachers and his distinguished academic performance at St. Paul's. This is a great accomplishment Thomas, one your family and friends must be so proud of!

NATIONAL DEAN'S LIST

Thomas Bilodeau (Roger Williams University), Caroline Carter (Boston College), Keri Dinsmore (Laboure Junior College), Katherine Ronan (Roger Williams), and Katherine Roth (Massasoit Community College) are featured in the 26th annual edition of the National Dean's List, 2002-2003. The National Dean's List recognizes high achieving college students. Those selected are recommended by their college deans, registrars for honor society advisors and must be in the top 10 percent of their class, on their school's dean's list or have earned a comparable honor.

SCHOLARSHIP TO BC HIGH

William J. Kemeza, President of Boston College High School, is pleased to announce that Thomas Chase of Cohasset, an eighth-grade student at St. Paul's School Hingham, has been named a recipient of the Boston College High School Fulton Scholarship.

Each year, Boston College High School awards over $1.7 million in scholarship and financial aid to qualified students from all four class years.

The Fulton Scholarship, named for Father Robert Fulton SJ, was awarded to 27 students from a diverse and highly-competitive applicant pool to the BC High class of 2008. He was selected based on his outstanding work on the entrance examination, recommendations from teachers and distinguished academic performance at his present school. Chase will join the BC High Class of 2008.

"We have carefully selected the most qualified young men from a highly-competitive applicant pool to become part of BC High's over 140-year tradition of academic excellence, character development and service to others," said President Kemeza.

"At BC High, they will be challenged in a nurturing and supportive environment and will graduate as leaders marked by competence, conscience and compassion; leaders who will engage our Church and our world."

President Bush and Michael Baird's older brother Bill, a captain in the Air Force and a 95 graduate of the US Air Force Academy presented Michael with his Commission as an Ensign in the US Coast Guard.

DENIM TO DIAMONDS

The South Shore Art Center is raising funds for the expansion of its Educational Outreach Program with a special evening entitled From Denim to Diamonds...Dancing and Dessert at the River Club in Scituate, Saturday, April 3.

The Art Center's popular Outreach Programs: Looking at Art and Arts to Go bring school groups to the Art Center or artists into the schools to enrich arts education with hands-on creative art experiences tied to current Art Center exhibitions. While school systems are struggling to maintain art offerings, the work of the Outreach Program becomes more important than ever. This gala will help bring the programs to more area schools. Bellevue Cadillac, the renowned swing, jazz, and rock band with its get-up-and-dance repertoire guarantees a dance party not to be missed!

A raffle for a diamond necklace and earring set donated by King Jewelers, a silent auction of jewelry donated by jewelers and artists as well as denim jackets artfully embellished by local artists promises something for everyone. Volunteers working on the committee received an overwhelming response from area jewelers and artists eager to support this educational initiative. NEW ADDITION

John and Alice Bellefontaine, along with big sister Lauren (almost 2 years old) are pleased to announce a new addition to our family. Brandon Daniel Bellefontaine was born on Jan. 24, 2004. Brandon was born 12 weeks prematurely. He is a little guy, but he is growing. He is currently receiving care at South Shore Hospital. We all look forward to his homecoming this spring.

POP INTO SPRING

Variety is spicing up the spring musical this March at First Parish, the Unitarian Universalist church on the Common in Cohasset. Their "Poppin' into Spring" musical takes place on Friday and Saturday, March 19 and 20. This year's musical is different from their past cabarets or "Spring Fever" of the past. A totally new approach, beginning with the opening number of their "pops concert", introduces new instrumentalists from their church community, a new repertoire, and includes a pops "extra" with the special flair of a "black tie" affair.

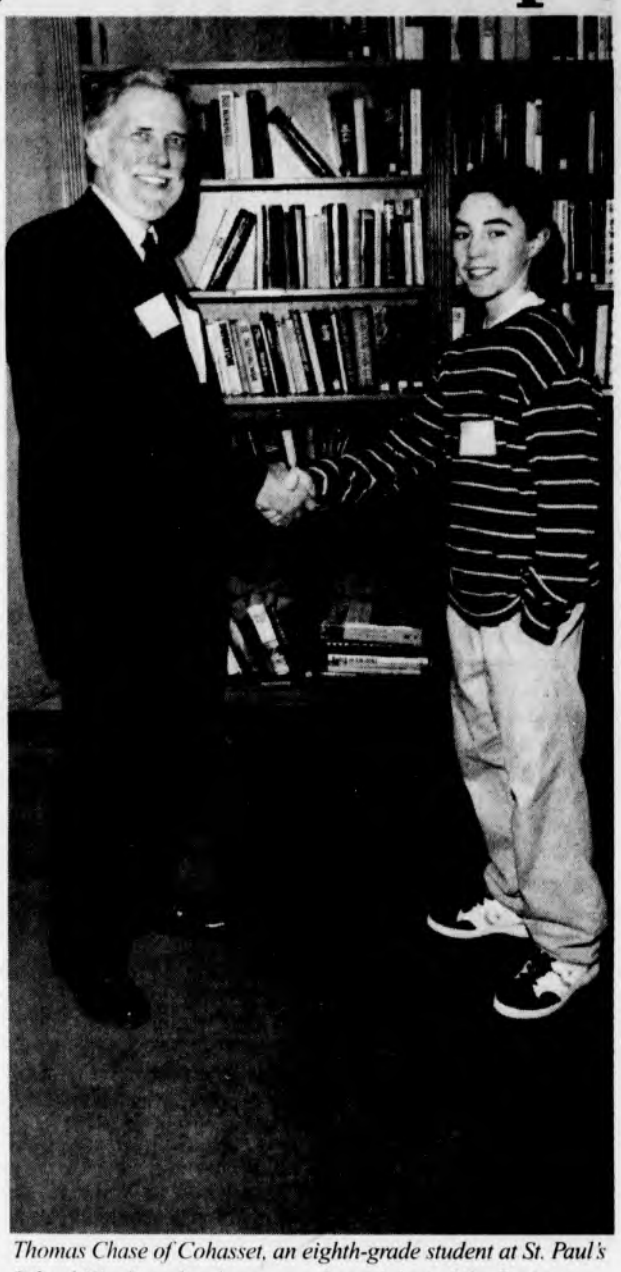
For every person performing on stage there are at least three people assisting with production. The extensive amount of time invested by the church's extended choir shows a willingness and determination to provide a full and varied evening's entertainment. These two evenings' performances take place in Trueblood Hall in the Parish House, 23 No. Main Street on Cohasset Common. Social Hour from 7 - 8 p.m. with drinks, hors d'oeuvres and a display of the evening's Auction items and a raffle sale - Pops Concert begins at 8 p.m. Reservations are strongly suggested. Please call the First Parish office (Sandy Bailey) at 781.383.1100 or the Bloomfields at 781-383-1360. Tickets are $25/person or $50/patron. Full tables for 8 may be reserved at $200.

QUILT SHOW

The Second Congregational Church will hold its 11th annual Quilt Show & Luncheon on Saturday, March 6 from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Proceeds from this popular event benefit two children's charities: Boston's Pediatric AIDS Charitable Trust (PACT) and Boston Medical Center's Reach Out and Read Program. Tickets are just $10 each and include the show and luncheon. For tickets, please call (781) 383-0345.

CYBSA REGISTRATION

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association will hold its annual registration for the upcoming baseball and softball season from now through March 6. Parents/guardians have two options for registration: CYBSA will hold a registration on Saturday, March 6, from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m., outside both the Osgood and High School gymnasiums.



In the alternative, parents/guardians may register children by mail, provided that mailed registrations are postmarked no later than March 6, 2004. Registration forms are available by contacting Nancy Froio on (781) 383-1897. Forms will be available via e-mail. Registrations that are received or postmarked after March 6 will be subject to a per player $25 late registration fee. Your cooperation in registering players in a timely manner is greatly appreciated, as it allows the CYBSA to establish rosters and order uniforms so that we are ready for opening day. This registration is for boys and girls aged 5 to 12 as of July 31, 2004. A copy of the child's birth certificate must accompany a new player's registration forms.

The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the major league baseball (ages 10 to 12) and softball divisions (ages 11 and 12) will be $100. The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the minor league divisions for baseball (ages 7-11) and softball (ages 7-10) divisions will be $85. The registration fee for the farm league instructional division (ages 5-6) will be $65. Please be advised that children assigned to Major League teams are still required to register.

In addition, due to recent the child protection program instituted by Little League governing organization, all adults interested in coaching, managing or volunteering in any way, are required to register at this same time and supply a photocopy of a government issued identification. Individuals not complying with this requirement will not be allowed to participate in the CYBSA program. Questions regarding either player or coach registration may be directed to Liam O'Connell on (781) 383-9538 or Nancy Froio on (781)-383-1897

Proposition 2-1/2

It's hard to believe but an entire generation of Massachusetts residents have been born since Proposition 2-1/2 became law some 20 years ago. Those future homeowners could take the property-tax cap legislation for granted because they won't have known life any differently.

So as Cohasset prepares for yet another override campaign, we think it's a good time to turn the clock back to the mid- to late-1970s, when Massachusetts was known as "Taxachusetts" and important industries and jobs were headed south to warmer climes and friendlier tax policy.

A taxpayer rebellion had been boiling just below the surface for some time when Citizens for Limited Taxation took the ball and ran with it. The grassroots group garnered enough signatures to get the tax-limitation question put on the November 1980 state ballot — on that same ballot Republicans Ronald Reagan and George Bush challenged President Jimmy Carter and Vice President Walter Mondale for the keys to the White House.

Today, some 24 years later, taxes have still gone up but clearly not at the same soaring rate they would have without the law.

However, under 2-1/2, for taxes to increase beyond allowed limits — the people have to be asked permission. Voters must approve "overriding" the 2-1/2 tax cap at the polls. This can be a cumbersome task and oftentimes, the resulting debate pits interest groups such as parents of schoolchildren and senior citizens against one another. But nevertheless, we think Prop. 2-1/2 is a good thing because it makes government fiscally accountable.

We also think, as citizens and homeowners, it is crucial that we understand Prop. 2-1/2 is not an enemy to government but a control mechanism.

Barbara Anderson, executive director of Citizens for Limited Taxation, puts it best.

"Before Prop. 2-1/2, government thought it was entitled to just take instead of ask," she says.

For many of us, a large portion of our hard-earned dollars pay for the privilege of living in our town. So it's incumbent on us to understand the laws that govern our property taxes, so we can make a fair determination when an override is needed.

In the weeks ahead, there will be a lot written about a potential Prop. 2-1/2 override to help cover a gap in fiscal year 2005 school budget. It is important to remember that Prop. 2-1/2 puts the choice whether to raise taxes beyond allowed limits clearly in the hands of the taxpayer, so we all need to pay attention so we can make the right decision come Election Day.

Drama Club shines on stage

The Massachusetts High School Drama Guild is presently conducting The 73 Annual Massachusetts High School Drama Festival. Well over ninety high schools across the state participated in the Festival which commenced its Preliminary Level on Saturday Feb. 28.

Cohasset High School students, directed by Jenna Emmons, presented "Postponing The Heat Death Of The Universe." Cast members included Austin Breslow, Ali Earon, and Brenna O'Donnell. Crew members included John Keniley, Katharine Murphy, and Emily Savage. Stage managers were Nicole Durant and Krissy Watts.

In addition to Cohasset High School advancing to the Semi-Finals, all three cast members received All Star Acting awards! Catch the Cohasset Semi-Final performance at Duxbury H.S. on Saturday March 13.

Town Election Policy explained

All candidates opposed or unopposed, who have not already done so, are invited to submit photographs and formal statements announcing their candidacies.

Candidates' Corner is limited to a few paragraphs (no more than 150 words per week), from any candidate — opposed or unopposed — who chooses to submit dates of coffees and fund-raisers. Candidates must observe the word limits; submissions that exceed the word limit will be cut from the bottom. Question of the Week is reserved for candidates in contested races and responses are limited to 300 words.

Candidates may send by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Open burning should be nixed

TO THE EDITOR:

We heartily endorse Jim Shipsky's complaint about outdoor burning expressed in his letter in your Feb. 26 issue. Coming here from out of state 15 years ago, we were amazed that this primitive practice was still in use in Massachusetts. It continues to appall us that people living as close to each other as we do in Cohasset would be permitted – even encouraged – to set backyard bonfires, wafting smoke and ash into their neighbors' eyes, noses, mouths and lungs. This, when there's an easy alternative: cart it to the RTF (which now accepts brush every open day).

Are there others out there besides Jim and us that feel this way? If so, let's hear from you. Maybe there are enough of us to persuade Massachusetts to let go of the 19th century and ban outdoor burning.

Tax hikes are part of Cohasset's character

TO THE EDITOR:

In the next few weeks those that attend Annual Town Meeting will be asked as always to spend a great deal of money and pass some articles that will supposedly maintain the character of Cohasset.

Unfortunately nothing can be done now to bring back the character of the town that since the late 90's has seen a dramatic change. If someone were to return after being gone the last few years they wouldn't be able to tour the Lothrup House, enjoy the rotunda while checking out a book at the original Paul Pratt library, eat at the historic Red Lion Inn, stop on the Veteran's Memorial on Depot Court while crossing the street, volunteer for a day in a primary class at the old Osgood, climb the rock outside of the Deer Hill or walk in the woods behind Deer Hill on the way to Old Pasture Road.

And soon thanks to the Selectmen, the Cook estate is to be turned into a senior development with a possibility of up to 96 units. God forbid if the land was sold to a developer and turned into only 10 single-family homes, then the town would lose almost $200K in tax revenue. For the town it is the proverbial win/win with the increase of up to $375K in real estate revenue. For the taxpayers we get more congestion in the elementary campus area, more seniors selling their homes to families, which equates to more children in the school and bigger budgets.

The one thing that hasn't changed is the insatiable need for more and more taxpayer money to keep the wheels turning. The schools as usual want a bigger and bigger piece of the pie. One of the reasons they give is the vast increase in utility costs. What a surprise to the School Committee and the School Building Committee that after they built one school where the utilities quadrupled, they couldn't figure out with their soaring ceilings and much bigger spaces that utilities would surely greatly increase with the next two renovations.

Then there is the new carpeting needed at the new Osgood school, the $100K of maintenance required at the new high school field and before we know it the technology in the schools will be obsolete. After increasing the size of the fire department with the assurance of cutting the overtime, the costs are higher than ever. And this is just the tip of the iceberg.

With all of the budget woes it makes you wonder why the School Committee has decided one of their top priorities is to add a full time psychologist to the staff even at the cost of classroom teachers.

We have mansionized our schools rather than going for environmentally and taxpayer friendly green renovations. Now we are hearing from some sources against the mansionizing of the houses that are needed to pay the taxes to support all the spending the powers in charge can't seem to stop.

How many more times will we increase our taxes through overrides before we say enough is enough and demand that our town officials live within their budgets.

School budget is out of control

TO THE EDITOR:

The School Committee members tell us that they are seeking a budget which is about 6.5 percent greater for FY 05 than this year's. But if you add in the staff and program cuts to the 6.5 percent increase, what the School Committee really is saying is that in order to provide the same level of services and staffing for our children as this year, the budget increase for FY 05 would have to be more than 10 percent above this year's budget – a figure which by any measure, compared to either the private or public sector, is way out of control.

Certainly, some of the budget items accounting for the increase were unforeseeable, such as the utility bill account. But Selectman Tom Callahan correctly identified the School Department payroll growth as the chief reason for the excessive increase in the school budget. One School Committee member said that he and his colleagues did not have crystal balls to foresee that the contract the committee agreed to two years ago would have put us into such a hole. But they certainly knew at the time they signed the contract, which provided for pay raises of 3 percent, 3.5 percent, and 3 percent (plus the step raises) for each of the three years of the contract (FY 05 being the third year), that this year was not going to be an every-three-years-override year for the Cohasset taxpayer. So where did they expect the money to come from, given that the pay raises and automatic step-raises combined represent almost three times the cost of living, three times the wage growth for other employees in the country, and more than twice the rate allowable under Prop. 2-1/2, all of which were known facts at the time they signed the contract? To be specific, how did the School Committee expect to fund a $533,000 increase in the School Department payroll (assuming level staffing) when the schools' share of the Prop. 2-1/2 annual allowable increase is only $250,000, thus leaving a budget gap of almost $300,000 in payroll alone? No business, public or private, would operate in such a fiscally irresponsible manner.

I realize it is easy to be a Monday morning quarterback from the peanut gallery, so here are two ideas to try to balance the budget and restore some of the cuts which have been made.

1) The School Committee should raise the athletic user fee by $100 for middle and high schoolers to raise the $68,000 to save the middle school athletic program, which means so much to so many of our children. Between this fee increase and help from all of the various booster clubs in our town, the middle school athletic program easily can be saved – if the School Committee members are willing to do so. Elimination of middle school interscholastic athletics will have a negative ripple effect as our children move into high school where they will be competing against high school athletes in other communities who have had the benefit of middle school sports programs. Increasing the fee to $175 for middle schoolers and high schoolers will work no hardship on parents who presently are paying as much or more than that per season for their children in grades K-6 for soccer, lacrosse, Little League, etc. Given the popularity of the middle school interscholastic program, especially for girls in sports as diverse as soccer and softball, I am disappointed in an attitude by our School Board members which in my view amounts to nothing less than a dereliction of duty on the part of every school board member who is so willing to dump this popular program without so much as even giving a thought of working to save it.

2) As Selectman Callahan suggested, the School Committee forthwith should demand to get back to the negotiating table with the teachers to see if there is any room to scale back the pay raise for FY'05. The Hingham teachers, for example, are taking a 0 percent (that's zero per cent) pay raise for FY'05, while keeping their step raises. State employees likewise have foregone pay raises while keeping their step raises. If the teachers gave back 1.5 percent of their 3 percent pay raises, about $150,000, they still would be in line to receive a very generous 4.5 percent collective salary increase in FY 05 (a 1.5 percent pay raise plus their step raises). This would be enough to save the jobs of the three elementary school teachers who are being laid off, and have a little bit of money left over to restore the relatively-puny stipends for the janitors, whose work, after all, keeps our schools clean and safe for our children.

And what if the teachers don't show some good faith effort on their part to maintain the integrity of the Cohasset school system which has been increasing their collective salaries at a rate far greater than inflation and

Insider's view of school budget process

EDUCATION MATTERS

RICK FLYNN

Over the past few weeks there has been a lot of information and misinformation written regarding the School Department budget for Fiscal 2005. I am writing today in an effort to give an insider's view of this year's budget process and the thought process surrounding its outcome.

This year's budget process began for me in late October. A meeting was held with the Town Manager, Mark Haddad, Director of Finance, Michael Buckley, Chairman, Ronnie McMorris and Vice-Chairman, Merle Brown, of the Board of Selectmen and Donna McGee and Bernadette Faulkner of the Advisory Board. At this meeting Mark Haddad informed us that based on the current financial situation of both the town and the state we would be looking at a level funded budget from the previous year. Knowing that our contractual obligations would be somewhere in the range of $400K, before we even started looking at other budget additions, we were in a serious situation. Based on the schedule that the Town Manager was trying to follow of an operating override every three years, an override was not in his plans. Before that initial meeting adjourned I made it clear that an override needed to be considered

Two weeks later a similar meeting was held. Mr. Haddad and Mr. Buckley presented a revised budget where they had made adjustments to debt service and other budget components. The outcome was that they were able to come up with additional funds. At this meeting we were informed that the School Department could now expect an increase of $324K. This, for me, was welcome news, but I still knew there was a tough road ahead.

Prepared with this news I informed the School Committee and the School Superintendent where we stood, and we went to work. We knew we had specific items that needed to be funded, no matter what, and in order to do that significant budget cuts were necessary. The three major items to be funded were contracted salary obligations, increased utility and cleaning costs as a result of the school renovations and Special Education needs. Additionally, there were a number of budget items that needed to be increased so that they would be fully funded in this year's budget. Specific items in this category are substitute teacher costs, staff development, student transportation and contracted services. We did not want to be in a situation where we would have to come back to Town Meeting for items that are regular predictable costs which should be included in a responsible budget.

Teachers' salaries

With regard to teacher's salaries, we are entering the third and last year of a contract that was negotiated in good faith three years ago. This contract was considered very fair at the time and it was in line with the other union contracts the town had negotiated. At that time no one knew what the future would bring with regard to state aid and other monetary issues. The expectation that the teachers will not receive what they are due is wishful thinking. The teachers are highly valued for all they do for our district and should not be blamed for our budget shortfall. As a result of six teacher retirements the district will realize savings of roughly $175K in salary expenses. The total costs for salary obligations are $355,452. This is a 3.16 percent increase over last year.

With regard to utility and cleaning expenses, there are many misconceptions. On April 8, 2000 a Debt Exclusion Override vote was held asking for $41.8M to renovate and expand the Deer Hill School and the Cohasset Middle High School. The plans for this project called for an overall increase in square footage of roughly 65 percent, with state of the art HVAC and electric systems. As the campaign for the School Building override was taking place, it was made quite clear that these buildings would be more expensive to maintain. That anyone is surprised with these increased costs is hard to understand. The reality is that the old model of heating air and circulating it over and over is outdated. Today's codes and standards call for a healthier environment which is created by introducing new air into the system on a regular basis. There is no culpability here in employing wasteful systems. The reality is that it costs more money to operate larger buildings and we need to pay our bills. The vote count for this project was 1,537 to 887, a clear majority. We are budgeting an additional $223,000 for our utility line item, representing a 1.98 percent increase in our total budget.

With regard to cleaning expenses, we, as a School Committee, take our obligation to maintain these buildings very seriously. Part of the quid pro quo for these new buildings was that if we built them they would be properly taken care of. Once again, it takes more dollars to clean more space. Also, we have employed an outside vendor to try to do a better job of cleaning the schools. When this was undertaken, there was never a plan to do away with custodians altogether, as has been written elsewhere. There is a necessity to having custodians in the buildings. Last year we reduced our custodial staff from nine to six and this year's budget calls for further reduction to five custodians.

Our third major cost increase arises from Special Education demands. The FY05 increase is $169,000 or 1.5 percent of our total budget. We have to provide additional services for several students with severe needs. By spending this amount of money in house, we hope to avoid more costly outside placements. Special Education is an obligation we cannot shirk. We have had good success over the past few years in terms of containing costs. This is an example of an under-funded state mandated program that is placed on our doorstep. However, we do have an obligation to do the best we can to satisfy these needs.

Budget cuts

In order to fund the above items we found it necessary to cut $460,774 or 4 percent from the school budget. We have done our best to make cuts that will have the least impact on class sizes. To avoid any impact is impossible. The cuts proposed include the elimination of three teachers at the elementary level, elimination of interscholastic Middle School athletics, a reduction in the business manager's position to a business clerk position, and combining the Curriculum Coordinator position with that of Middle School Administrator, the savings of one full time senior position. We are also eliminating the Director of Physical Education and Health, one SPED aide and some library services. The above mentioned reductions will be made regardless of the override and additional cuts will be unavoidable should the override vote fail.

This is not an optimal solution, but as a committee we are trying to achieve a tenable balance in a tough year while also dealing with a continued increase in enrollment. At the elementary level some class sizes will be increasing from 20 to possibly 26 students, which we as a committee think is too high. Furthermore, we did not want to dismantle more of the school system to achieve a balanced budget. Making budgets cuts is the easy part of the process. The difficult part is reinstating services down the road. It has taken years to rebuild our system from the cuts made in the late eighties. The whole idea of a Proposition 2-1/2 override is to put the decision in the hands of the voters. We wanted the citizens of the town to have the right to cast their ballot for what they want for the future of the Cohasset School system in terms of the quality of their investment.

As a School Committee we are not trying to avoid making tough decisions, quite the contrary. We have been forced to justify all of our decisions more than ever. Throughout this whole process you should feel extremely confident in the scrutiny we been put through. Both the Board of Selectmen and especially the Advisory Board have gone through our budget line by line. They are exercising the authority and the responsibility they have been given to represent all the townspeople. We have been asked very tough questions and have had to justify all of our positions. After doing so, we have received unanimous support from both boards. I consider that a major validation in a year so clouded with negative news.

Please do not be confused by the claim of seven overrides in seven years. That is an apples to oranges comparison that must be clearly understood. In the past 10 years there have only been four operational overrides. Other overrides have come in the form of Debt Exclusions. Three have been for sewer construction and the others have been related to school building projects, where we will eventually receive a 60 percent reimbursement. The reality is that we have a town that is run very efficiently, we get a great value for our tax dollar, and we have a school system that is the envy of many other towns.

In a recent article in the Boston Business Journal, Cohasset was ranked sixth in the state for median housing prices at $710,000. Our home values continue to increase. Most of the new buyers are young families who are willing to pay top dollar to live here. As beautiful as this town is, if we had a second rate school system we could not and would not command these high property values. All of us on the School Committee are taxpayers and residents. We are proud of what we have to offer in terms of our academic environment and are fighting to maintain a top quality educational product.

I promise you that we as your School Committee do not take overrides lightly, but feel that at the end of the process a successful override will carry us forward to a better economic climate where we can enjoy some budgetary relief. I want to thank all of the town boards, town officials and citizens who have participated in this year's budget preparation. It has been undertaken in a healthy spirit of cooperation, while not taking anything for granted. Hopefully the outcome will be one we can all be proud of.

Rick Flynn is chairman of the School Committee.

BUSINESS NOTES

New tissue tightening offered at Skin Center

The South Shore Skin Center 223 Chief Justice Cushing Highway announced it is the first South Shor dermatology practice to offer Thermage™ Tissue Tightening Procedure. This FDA-approved procedure for cosmetic dermatology uses the ThermaCool TC™ system to improve the appearance of skin around the eyes, tighten the skin around the jowls and neck, soften lines around the mouth, and lift the eyebrows and tighten eyelids.

The Thermage System is based on a new radio frequency-based device that tightens deeper tissue without requiring any needles or scalpels. The procedure requires no recovery time, enabling patients to return to normal activities the same day of treatment.

The South Shore Skin Center will hold an informational seminar on the Thermage Procedure on Tuesday, March 16 at 6 p.m. at its new Cohasset office at 223 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Rt. 3A), Suite 202. Call 508-747-0711 for more information.

Chamber sponsors dinner with humorist

The Cohasset Chamber is sponsoring "An Evening with Loretta LaRoche", Thursday, March 11, 6-9 p.m. at the Red Lion Inn. Come, laugh and learn from this humorous speaker, author, columnist and PBS personality. Tickets are $45 and include a buffet dinner at the Red Lion Inn. Order your tickets before they are sold out by calling 781 383-1616 or go on the chamber web site www.cohassetchamber.org for more information. Tickets will also be available at Pilgrim Co-op Bank (downtown and Rte 3A), Conlon Family Chiropractic, and Goodwin Graphics. Don't miss out on an evening with Loretta LaRoche. Tickets are limited.

Mark your calendars! The Chamber will also be hosting several events for its members and our community: Unity Dinner for Cohasset Candidates (May), Bill Cosby (August), Tri-Chamber Golf Tournament (September) and Christmas in Cohasset (December).

LIBRARY CORNER

Qi Gong presentation

Please join us on Saturday, March 6 at 1:00 p.m. in the Meeting Room of the Library, for an introduction to Qi Gong by Lin Lin Choy.

Lin Lin Choy, formerly a professional ballerina, has been practicing Tai Chi and Qi Gong since the 70's. She has studied intensively in China and the Far East and has been a teacher in England and the United States. She currently teaches at Jade Forest in Cohasset.

Qi Gong is a Chinese self-healing art that combines movement and meditation. Together with natural breathing and focus, these exercises will improve balance, increase suppleness, strengthen bones, joints and tendons and promote general good health. Suitable for all ages, Qi Gong is particularly beneficial for those of middle age and seniors.

Stephanie Roberts' exhibit "Patterns and Pinhole" will be on display at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Cohasset from March 1 through April 30. The public is invited to a reception for the artist that will be held at the library on March 7 from 5 to 7 p.m.

The exhibit will feature woven mixed media works and sepia toned pinhole photographs. The woven cyanotype mixed media pieces are first printed from pinhole photography, cut into strips and woven together. Patterns are cut within them as well as painted and sewn. The photographic images reflect a memory or place and the patterning is a metaphor for the cycles in life.

The sepia toned pinhole photographs were taken on a trip to San Miguel, Mexico this past October-November during their holidays "All Saints Day" and "The Day of the Dead." Festive gravesites and Ruins in Pozos will be featured. Stephanie has exhibited nationally and regionally and has won many awards and honors, including a residency at the Vermont Studio Center. Her work is included in public and private collections.

TO PLACE A HOLD from home, start at our website www.cohassetlibrary.org. Go to CATALOG and search for the item you want. Click on HOLD. Enter your user ID from your library card (no spaces), your PIN (OCLN) and specify PICKUP LOCATION as Cohasset. Press HOLD. We will notify you when the book is available.

NoveList database

What should I read next? Do you have a favorite fiction author or favorite book and would like more suggestions of similar books to read? The library's new database, NoveList will help you and your children (grades K-8), find the types of books you enjoy reading. As well as finding books to read, users can learn more about books and authors through Author Readalikes, Feature Articles, Book Discussion Guides, and Book Talks.

NoveList is available from home and in the library from our website: www.cohassetlibrary.org. For help using NoveList or for more information, please see the Reference Librarian.

Homebound delivery

If you love to read but are unable to come to the library due to an illness or disability, we are very pleased to announce a new home delivery service. For those interested, a volunteer from the Friends of the Cohasset Library will visit you at your residence to discuss your reading preferences and take your requests for library materials. Selections will be delivered to you and picked up and returned to the library on a regular schedule. If you, or anyone you know, might be interested in our program, please telephone the library and speak to Judy Simons at 781 383-1348.

POLITICAL NOTES

$3M Logan flight path noise study

Congressman Bill Delahunt, lauding the diligence and perseverance of South Shore activists, has announced an unprecedented commitment of federal and state resources to a $3 million study of noise associated with flight paths to and from Logan Airport.

Delahunt attributed the developments to the spirit of collaboration and consensus among local residents, the Massachusetts Port Authority and the Federal Aviation Administration.

That thought was echoed by Ralph Dormitzer, who with Sandra Kunz, co-chairs the Logan Community Advisory Committee, a citizens group that has worked tirelessly to help reduce Logan noise. "We would like to thank the people who have worked persistently for over two years to design and fund this study and look forward to outcomes that result in significant relief from aircraft noise," Dormitzer said.

The noise study is a requirement of a 2002 legal order by Jane Garvey, who was then Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration. That decision authorized the construction of a new runway, 14/32, at Logan International Airport, but specified several mitigation measures to lessen the impact of aircraft noise on communities in the greater Boston area. The noise study in one of the more important mitigation steps, as it will address adverse noise impacts with the goal of diverting flight patterns from communities and redirecting them over Boston Harbor.

The study will consider noise generated by aircraft takeoffs, overflights and landings. The first phase of the study will consider procedures which can be implemented rapidly with safety and efficiency and do not have significant environmental impact. A second phase will further consider those procedures which have merit buy are deemed to have significant environmental impact.

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' votes on three roll calls from the week of February 23-27. There were no roll calls in the Senate last week.

MEDICAL BOARD DISCIPLINARY HEARINGS (H 4538)

House 155-0, gave near final approval to a bill allowing a victim, family member or other representative to attend and submit an impact statement at the disciplinary hearing of the doctor who is the subject of the proceeding involving the victim. The measure does not allow the victims or their representatives to actively participate in the proceeding. Another provision allows them to be represented at the proceeding by an attorney at their own expense. Supporters said the bill, known as "Taylor's Law," is named after Taylor McCormack, a 13-month old girl who died while awaiting surgery in October 2000 at Children's Hospital. They noted that doctors testified at the closed hearing but members of Taylor's family were not allowed to present their side of the story and express their feelings on the matter. They argued that patients and their families should not be victimized a second time by being prohibited from testifying. The Senate has approved a different version of the proposal and the House version now goes to the Senate for consideration. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against the bill). Y

$99,925 FOR ALCOHOL AND DRUG ADDICTION RECOVERY PROGRAM (H 4330)

House 135-20, (Senate has not yet voted) overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a provision earmarking $99,925 for Latinas y Ninos— a Boston-based residential treatment program primarily for Latino women recovering from alcohol and drug addiction. The funds would come from a $33.2 million Department of Public Health (DPH) budget item that provides for the expending of funds for Latinas y Ninos but does not specify a dollar amount. Override supporters said this would restore most of the $100,000 that was cut from this program's budget during this year's state budget-cutting fiscal crisis. They argued that this worthwhile program, including a 32-bed facility for 20 women and 12 children, is the first of its kind in the state to address the bilingual and bicultural needs of Latino women in recovery and help single women and mothers with children by allowing children to live with their mother at the facility. Override opponents said the state is facing budget cuts and up to a $2 billion deficit in the fiscal 2005 budget and should wait a few weeks to see the House Ways and Means Committee's proposed fiscal 2005 budget package before spending every surplus dollar available. In his veto message, Gov. Romney said he vetoed the earmarking because it unnecessarily earmarks the use of funds at the DPH. (A "Yea vote is for earmarking $99,925 for Latinas y Ninos. A "Nay" vote is against the earmarking). Y

VERY SMALL FIRMS ADVISORY COUNCIL (H 4328)

House 144-9, (Senate has not yet voted) overrode Gov. Romney's veto of the creation of a small business and very small firms advisory council to evaluate the current state system of delivering assistance to small businesses and to make recommendations to improve it. The measure defines a very small firm as one with fewer than 20 employees that is less able to tap traditional sources of business consulting, assistance and finance. Override supporters said this no-cost project would help guide these very small businesses through the bureaucratic maze and assist them in leveraging federal funds, private sector support and other grants and loans. They noted that firms with fewer than 20 employees create 90 percent of the state's jobs. Override opponents said the idea may be a good one but argued that this goal can be accomplished with existing agencies and personnel. In his veto message, Gov. Romney said he voted the proposal because there is no corresponding funding provided to establish the council. (A "Yea" vote is for the creation of a small business and very small firms advisory council. A "Nay" vote is against it). Y

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

SENIORS' PROPERTY TAX RELIEF- The Taxation Committee approved legislation proposing tax relief for senior citizens. The most controversial provision allows cities and towns to exempt qualified low-income senior citizens 65 and older from paying additional taxes resulting from Proposition 2 1/2 overrides. The exemption applies to homes valued under $750,000 owned by single seniors whose annual income is less than $43,000 and senior couples with an income less than $64,000. Supporters said this provision would help struggling low-income elderly homeowners on fixed incomes remain in their homes. They also acknowledged that it would also help cities and towns achieve Proposition 2 1/2 property tax overrides by discouraging seniors' opposition to tax hikes for which they would not have to pay. Opponents said there are better ways to provide tax relief for seniors and warned that hardworking families and the unemployed would unfairly be forced to shoulder the burden of these new taxes. Gov. Romney announced that he would oppose any provision that tinkers with Proposition 2 1/2. The package also makes a change in the state's current so-called senior circuit breaker law that gives up to a maximum $810 state tax rebate to qualified low-income seniors whose property tax bills exceed ten percent of their annual income. The change would qualify seniors who meet low-income guidelines and own a home valued at less than $750,000, rather than the current $432,000 standard. Other provisions include raising from $750 to $1000 the amount of property tax credit seniors can earn by doing volunteer work for their city or town; allowing communities to reduce the current eight percent interest rate seniors now pay if they qualify for a property tax deferral program and creating a program to inform seniors of tax breaks for which they qualify.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Would an independent study of the Cohasset Police Department be beneficial?

SELECTMAN/ Ralph Dormitzer

My answer to the Mariner's question is yes. The towns of Hingham and Leominster commissioned similar studies when faced with difficult problems. Cohasset could benefit from a similar study. In addition to examining the internal processes and morale in the police department, any consideration of the operation of the police department should take into account the views of the people of Cohasset about the kind of police enforcement they want. Ultimately the department will have to bridge the significant gap between people who want strong enforcement and those who don't. The selectmen can play a role by creating a forum for discussion of the issue and by seeking consensus.

The town has a history of tough-love enforcement. Hector Pelletier, chief from 1927 to 1967, would administer justice to a juvenile speeder by reading him the "riot act" and taking his license. Randy Feola, chief from 1967 to 1980, kept control with "a little brown book" which he used to record infractions. Life has gotten more complex since then, however. Teenagers have more occasion to break the law. It is more difficult for two working parents or single-parent households to supervise their children. Drug use is a new since the '60s, and people are more litigious.

Recently the Boston Globe published remarks by Kathleen O'Toole, Boston's new Police Commissioner. Ms. O'Toole said, "My choice is to be as transparent as possible, to get as much information out there as possible, to the media and to the general public." In addition she said, "I want people who have principles, who have high integrity, who are team players, who don't let their egos get in the way of the job, and who have demonstrated a great work ethic."

In addition to a study, Cohasset would benefit from a commitment to these ideals.

SELECTMAN/ Rob Spofford

I support the commissioning of an independent third party review of the police department. I think most people will agree that the recent public hearings have demonstrated that our Police Department and town would benefit from an outside review. A police department that reflects current best practices in community law enforcement is a value to all of us.

In my business, I often recommend and utilize this type of third party review for both private and public Board of Director clients. These reviews can be a useful tool if managed properly. I can apply my business experience to ensure that we hire the right agency at the right price to conduct the right kind of review. I have also found that these reviews can quickly get out of hand or be of little value when there is a specific agenda or desired outcome by the commissioning party. This must be avoided.

I will be sure that the parameters of the review are clearly articulated. Among the questions that must be asked are: What is the purpose and scope of the review? How will the findings be articulated to both those inside and outside the department? What governing body will have responsibility for implementation of recommendations? Timetables and milestones need to be set and a procedure must be in place for making any indicated changes so that the report, once paid for, does not sit on a shelf gathering dust.

My deliberative and decisive approach has served my clients and civic endeavors well. As Selectman this consistent approach will ensure that Cohasset taxpayers obtain the best possible review for their money.

SELECTMAN/ Louis S. Harvey

The evidence of the Quigley/McLean hearings made it abundantly clear that our police department is in chaos. Radically differing views of what constitutes appropriate practices created conflict. So does the in-fighting, low morale, officers threatening to quit. Visible side effects are that the police have abandoned the valued school initiatives of the Police Academy and PALS program. A $25,000 independent study is critically needed to address these problems that already cost $168,000.

Nonetheless these are not the most serious problems. The police department and certain officers in particular have been excessive in their law enforcement practices. Yet instead of taking routine disciplinary steps, the Town charged two officers with criminal behavior. The open wound caused by this action cannot be healed by a study. Many residents of the Town feel abused by the police. We need an understanding, a code of conduct, which has the support of both the Town's residents and its police.

These past experiences disqualify current leadership from overseeing an independent study. Instead, the Advisory Board should take control, including selecting experts to conduct the study, monitoring progress and releasing the results.

This study should include an assessment of the appropriate size for our police force. We currently have 18 police officers that made between 10 and 15 arrests per month. Since Sergeant Quigley and Officer McLean were put on leave last October, the number has dropped to under 5 per month. Do we have too many police or too few? What would be danger of a downsized police force? Are there any benefits to a larger force? Should we have more teachers and fewer cops? The study must also recommend the structural and procedural changes necessary to achieve a right-sized, functional and community-friendly police force.

SELECTMAN/ Merle Brown

No! I see no need to spend money on something like this. We have a very small Police Department and I feel very strongly that we can solve the problems without spending more of the town's money on a study that is not needed.

The article submitted by the citizens is, from what I understand, not binding if it should pass. The Selectmen are the only ones that can make this decision.

Are teachers' salaries the problem with the school budget?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Scott O'Grady

If it sounds like this week's question posits a zero-sum game between teachers and taxpayers, that only reflects the reality of our current property-tax based school funding structure. Teachers are underpaid because regressive property taxes can only be raised at the expense of lower and fixed income families, for whom rate increases create real financial hardships. The school committee's task is to negotiate a compromise between these competing interests. On the one side, teachers are right to press for salaries that reflect their professional status and increasing contributions to our schools. On the other side, local families and seniors are right to expect that property tax rates remain under control. Both sides are right, and both sides' personal family budgets are at stake in the negotiation.

The school committee's position in this compromise is defined by Prop. 2-1/2. To augment 2-1/2, Cohasset taxpayers have demonstrated their willingness to allow regular overrides every three years, which eases the 2-1/2 percent straitjacket enough to more realistically track inflation and cost of living. This is the best we can afford to do. No large gains in teacher pay are possible, but Prop. 2-1/2 is not to blame for this, nor are the taxpayers. The problem is structural, and there is no relief on the horizon.

We need to scrutinize every dollar not directed to teachers and classrooms. Turn off the lights. Fire the business manager. Discontinue the outside custodial contract. Investigate energy options. Employ volunteer activity aides. Hire only .5 superintendent. Teachers' salaries are not the problem. But teacher salaries are the largest item in the budget, and the school committee needs to recognize that increases in the budget are structurally limited to what the poorest family in Cohasset can afford to pay.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Pat Martin

The "problem" with the teacher's contract, which is moving into its third year of a three-year contract, is that it currently seems out of whack within the town's present fiscal realities. This incongruity was not the case, however, when it was negotiated and approved at Town Meeting two years ago. At that time the contract fit well within the percentage increases being given in prior teachers' contracts if not actually less in some areas. The "problem" now for many is there is no realistic way of going back in time so to speak to make the accommodations for inflation and cost increases that no one could possibly have foreseen. However, in facing the challenges of funding the contract within this year's budget constraints, the teacher's union and school committee recently sat down to examine areas that might possibly realize cost savings such as restructuring health plan offerings. They will continue to meet with this goal in mind over the next several months. While recognizing this budget pressure it should be noted, however, that the present teachers contract is lower in percentages in many cases than surrounding towns and some current union contracts on the town side.

Negotiating the next teachers contract will require seasoned skill from someone experienced in negotiating with Cohasset's teachers and the MTA specifically. It will be a significant challenge in the next negotiations in order to create a contract that is both affordable to the taxpayers and sensitive to what is required or mandated of teachers. If re-elected, I will be able to bring more than six years of experience negotiating in both good times and bad to the process. It is that exact perspective that will be necessary to achieve what is needed on both sides of the table.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Adrienne MacCarthy

In order to answer the question of the week "Are the teacher salaries the problem with the school budget?" I needed to look into how we pay our teachers in relation to our neighboring communities of Hull, Scituate, Norwell and Hingham. Based on the results of my research, my concise answer to the question is no, Cohasset teacher salaries are not the problem with the school budget. According to Massachusetts Department of Education figures for the fiscal year 2002, Cohasset teachers were paid an average salary of $45,977. During this same period, our neighboring communities reported the following average salaries: Hull - $43,756; Scituate - $51,898; Norwell - $54,551; and Hingham - $54,999. Out of the five communities, Cohasset reports the second lowest average teacher salary and is close to 20 percent below that of Hingham. Cohasset's average teacher salary even falls below the state's average teacher salary of $49,242.

Now with these salary comparisons in mind, we as a community need to ask ourselves, would we accept below average performance of our children on the state wide MCAS tests? The obvious answer is of course is no. Look at our MCAS results, the colleges attended by our graduates, their achievements once in college, and one has to realize our schools and the teachers who teach in them have been doing an excellent job educating our children. It is my opinion that our teachers, administrators and school system are truly an asset for the town. I believe that we can meet the challenges of the current budget issues if we work together as a community to look for solutions that maintain this asset.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE / Jamie Williams

Our children's education and their best interests should be at the heart of the budgeting process. The greatest investment we can make toward developing and furthering our children's education is our teachers.

Presently, the investment in our teachers comprises the largest portion of our $11,942,050 FY 2004-2005 school budget. And the largest component of this budget warrants thorough examination. The size of this component is the result of the last contract negotiation, when a 4.6 percent salary increase was awarded to the teachers in this, the final year of the contract. Considering Proposition -21/2 laws, this 4.6 percent increase automatically invokes an override, unless $250,783 (2.1percent) is raised or cut from somewhere else.

While I agree that teachers deserve good salaries, it is appropriate to expect more value for the salary investment. I was dismayed at the Union's unwillingness to partner with the town when the Deer Hill Principal asked teachers for 10 minutes to assist in the arrival and dismissal of students. In response, a grievance was filed which resulted in the Principal having to single-handedly escort 370 students to and from buses while our children have lost nearly an hour of academic time every week.

My experience in union negotiations will change the way we build a contract and avoid such situations while we partner with our teachers. Economic times have changed and all sides at the negotiating table must face this fact. A vote for me will initiate a policy of future planning and budgeting that prioritizes continuous improvement in student performance while delivering value for the entire community, including teachers, families and taxpayers.

What guarantees can you provide that the new Cohasset Master Plan won't just sit on the shelf and collect dust?

PLANNING BOARD/ Joe Nedrow

ED = Q+A — the formula for an effective decision (ED) takes an equal amount of quality (Q) plus acceptance (A). Often, more effort is expended to developing plans, regulations and programs for others, without devoting the same efforts in developing strategies to gain the acceptance and support of those who are impacted by these plans and regulations.

Most issues brought before town meeting have the quality(Q) side of the equation. Negative votes and lack of implementation occur when the acceptance (A) side of the equation is not given the same priority and effort as the quality side.

In terms of today's question, I can only guarantee my cognizance of the importance of acceptance and promote the education, explanation, and perhaps modification of plans and regulations to gain acceptance of Cohasset citizens. When the acceptance side of the equation is given the same effort as the quality side there will be very few plans gathering dust.

PLANNING BOARD/ Stuart Ivimey

My record as Chairman of the Community Preservation Committee clearly demonstrates a commitment to following the vision statement provided in the Master Plan. The Master Plan addresses the concern that Cohasset's natural resources, open space, and overall community character are threatened by increased development. The vision statement promotes the preservation of a beautiful residential community, whose citizens enjoy a high quality of life. The Master Plan will guide my actions on the Planning Board.

During my tenure as Chairman, the CPC followed the Master Plan's recommendations that the town adhered to "Smart Growth" development practices; reuse existing structures; and promote a vibrant downtown area. The CPC received overwhelming support at the March 2003 Annual Town Meeting to fund the Cohasset Historical Society's plan to convert the old Paul Pratt Library into low income senior housing. The conversion provides housing for our senior citizens and preserves the town's character by maintaining public access to a treasured landmark.

During the 2002 Special Town Meeting, the citizens unanimously approved the acquisition of the "Barnes Wildlife Sanctuary", which preserved 35 acres of critical environmental habitat adjacent to Wheelwright Park. This project demonstrated my commitment to preserve the town's environmental assets and proved that with effective leadership, major town projects are achievable without burdening the tax base.

The CPC also funded the Historical Society's renovation of the Wilson House/ Maritime Museum, located in the village. These projects demonstrate my commitment to preserving the historic character of the town.

At the upcoming town meeting, the CPC will recommend funding additional improvements for our senior citizens at the Elm Street condominiums.

As a member of the Planning Board, I will continue improving Cohasset. As part of these duties, I will frequently consult the Master plan because it is an excellent document and an invaluable resource.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Pat Martin

Editor's note: The Mariner made some typographical errors and omissions in typesetting Pat Martin's response to last week's Question of the Week. Mrs. Martin's corrected response to the question "Where do you stand on the need for a Prop. 2-1/2 override to help balance the fiscal year 2005 budget" is as follows::

When the citizens of Cohasset stand in the voting box on April 3 to decide whether this override should be passed, they will truly be deciding the future of our school system and the level of education it will provide to our children in years to come. This community decision comes at a difficult time for most of us. Although the economy is supposedly improving, many are struggling with increased costs of living. The school budget is not unlike many personal financial situations of less money coming in and more money being required.

Over the past two years, the schools have received significantly less in state aid while the costs of providing an education and operating its facilities have increased. This, coupled with increasing enrollment and new SPED services required, has the school committee legitimately requesting this override. The School Committee has already made $460,774 in reductions for 2005. This is on top of reductions that were made last year.

Declaring a need for improved fiscal management or reductions in areas already examined can only be made by someone not fully facing the facts which are these. The School Committee can cut no more without significantly affecting the quality of education we provide. And should the override fail, it is likely we will need to make an additional $400,000 in cuts. This is without even considering the possibility of hinted further reductions in state aid again this year.

This is the decision the community will need to make. It is that simple and that scary. Knowing that an override failure will mean the loss of team sports and class sizes of 28 or more children. I will support the override and consider it an investment in both the future of my children and the town of Cohasset.

Email us at: MFord@cnc.com

Next week's questions:

For the Planning Board: Many residents are concerned about "mansionization" in town yet the Planning Board will ask Town Meeting to indefinitely postpone the Large House Site Plan Review article. Where do you stand on that article?

For Selectmen: With so little affordable housing for working families in town, is Cohasset in danger of becoming a haven just for the rich and therefore, losing all economic diversity?

For the School Committee: If the override doesn't pass, the School Committee says class sizes are going to jump. How can you convince the baby-boomers that big class sizes are a bad thing for education when they grew up with large classes themselves?

Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by 5 p.m., Monday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. Items may also be dropped off at Cohasset News on Brook Street. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Monday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fundraisers and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

Duffy provides a wealth of health knowledge

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Walking into middle school teacher Maureen Duffy's classroom is the easy part for students. It's walking out and having the courage to use what she taught them that poses the challenge.

— TEACHERS WITH CLASS —

As the health education teacher for middle school students, which currently includes grades seven and eight, Duffy covers not only health issues such as being prepared to administer first aid and CPR during an emergency, and how to maintain relationships, but the topics associated with peer pressure, like tobacco, drugs and alcohol, sexuality and diseases.

"There is so much to discuss," she said, adding at an age where students are constantly changing, it is very important to help provide guidance in making good choices.

Duffy has groups of students for one quarter of a semester in the seventh grade and one quarter in eighth. She said her seventh grade students spend a good amount of time discussing relationships and how to get along. They participate in group work and have discussions on acceptable behavior and decision making. Groups are rotated frequently to allow all students to participate with others in the class.

"I always tell the students this is a safe place to discuss what they need to discuss and they must at all times be respectful," she said.

In eighth grade, students continue learning about relationships, but the lessons are modified to include discussion about hate crimes, harassment, and bullying. Students are also given drug education and are taught about sexuality and diseases such as HIV and AIDS. Eighth graders also spend some time working with nutrition, which allows them to do some cooking during class time. As a former home economics teacher, Duffy has much experience directing students in the kitchen.

After graduating from Rivier College in New Hampshire, Duffy began teaching home economics at Scituate High School. When she and her husband began having children, she took time off to stay at home with them. When the youngest of her four children went off to kindergarten, she began teaching again, and went on to earn both her certificate of teaching from Framingham State and her master's degree in health from than all other workers in the nation these past few years?

Speaking as someone who has supported every override in my 10 years in this town, including all three questions when we had the three-tier option a few years ago, it seems to me that the time may have come for the taxpayers to put the brakes on our out-of-control school spending. Two recent charts in the Boston Globe showed that we already pay the eighth highest dollar figure in taxes out of all 350 communities in the state (that's right, 8 out of 350) and that 11 percent of our homeowners must spend 50 percent or more of their annual income toward their mortgage or rent, ranking us in the top third in the South Shore in that category.

Absent some cooperation from the teachers' union, it unfortunately may be that the only way for the taxpayers to send a message to our School Committee and teachers union that, "Enough is enough," will be to reject the proposed $400,000 override. We have lavished huge investments in our schools and have been very generous in recent years to our teachers, both in terms of pay raises and adding another step for long-serving teachers. But it is becoming more clear every year that the more money we give to the School Committee, the more they spend it —and then some — which is a trend which has to be brought to a halt sooner, rather than later.

The problem is not Cohasset's teachers

TO THE EDITOR:

Regarding Cohasset's teachers, let's get one thing straight. They are not overpaid. By any measure, relative to their peers in other South Shore districts, Cohasset teacher salaries are at or below the median. Here is the ranking for starting salaries for 2003-2004 (Step 1, Bachelors, from each town's salary schedule):

1.	Norwell	$37,232
2.	Marshfield	34,841
3.	Weymouth	33,897
4.	Duxbury	33897
5.	Hanover	32,687
6.	Cohasset	32,492
7.	Hingham	32,001
8.	Scituate	31,516

Here is the ranking for the highest salary obtainable for 2003-2004 (Top step, Doctorate, from each town's salary schedule):

1.	Norwell	$76,698
2.	Hingham	72,477
3.	Hanover	72,152
4.	Cohasset	71,187
5.	Scituate	70,384
6.	Duxbury	69,875
7.	Marshfield	65,824
8.	Weymouth	65,420

Perhaps the most meaningful statistic is the average teacher salary for the entire district. Here is the ranking, using the most recent data from the Mass. Department of Education:

1.	Norwell	$54,978
2.	Scituate	53,163
3.	Duxbury	52,584
4.	Hingham	52,012
5.	Hanover	51,269
6.	Weymouth	49,731
7.	Cohasset	49,397

I would also add that the Cohasset teachers have consistently worked with the Administration and School Committee to implement educational initiatives such as block scheduling, the Middle School, to mainstream special education students into their classrooms, and to address budgetary issues which have resulted in reductions in aides, supplies, and professional development.

Why does Cohasset have one of the top-rated school districts in the Commonwealth, despite below-median teacher salaries? Why do quality teachers come to Cohasset when they could make several thousand dollars more in a neighboring district? Because Cohasset parents and the Cohasset community support quality education.

Let's continue to do so.

FROM DUFFY, PAGE 12

Cambridge College in Boston.

In addition to her role as a health educator, Duffy has been advising the middle school yearbook staff — an activity she began for the students roughly six years ago. "It's their book and they do the work," Duffy said, but she is always there to lend a helping hand. At the end of September, interested students gather to form the yearbook staff for that year. The group starts by meeting two times a month in the fall, and students are given their assignments. Everyone is given a set of pages they are responsible for, and are required to cover various school events, including sports, academic events, and productions, to ensure the yearbook has variety.

Duffy has two digital cameras for the students to use, and she downloads their photos to a computer for them. From there, the students are responsible for doing all cropping and editing of their photos, and they will make the ultimate decision as to what photos make it in the yearbook. While currently the pages are arranged manually, Duffy hopes as soon as next year the yearbook will be assembled on the computer.

Around Christmas, the group begins meeting weekly, and during the last two weeks of production, which the students are currently experiencing; they meet every day. The pages are sent off to be printed and will return to be proofread by students in mid-April. If an event has happened in the meantime, photos will be rearranged to update the pages.

"We try to update up to the last minute," she said.

Duffy not only advises students, she advises fellow teachers. As part of the mentoring program at the middle-high school, Duffy took a first-year teacher under her wing last year and made herself available to answer questions and provide guidance. While Duffy has been a mentor in the school for a number of years, the program only recently become state mandated.

"I give advice on how to run things, how to apply for field trips, and how to order supplies. You go through the training so you know how to handle different situations," she said. The schools match up mentors with new teachers in the same department, and the two set goals they would like to achieve during the course of the year. Duffy said even though the program is only required for first-year teachers, she has maintained her mentor relationship into this year as well.

For the past nine years, Duffy has also been an advisor to the Student Council. While she was the only advisor for a number of years at the high school level, she is now co-advisor of the middle school Student Council with math teacher Jonathan Fortin.

"We try to hold one activity a month," Duffy said, whether it be a dance or getting students involved in a cause such as Toys for Tots or the food pantry. Because fundraising to help pay for various class activities is a big part of what the Student Council does, Duffy makes sure each new seventh grade class starts off their school year on the right foot by electing Student Council representatives by the third week of school, beginning a magazine drive shortly thereafter.

"The kids really bond because they're working toward a common goal," she said.

When not in school, Duffy can be seen helping students on the golf course. Working part time at Widow's Walk golf course in Scituate, Duffy has been able to set up a six-week instructional course for middle school students. She, along with Kathy Womersley and an assistant pro, taught between 20 and 25 students the basics of golf last spring.

"Just this morning, the kids began asking me when we get to go back," she said, and Duffy is planning to hit the course again once the weather warms up.

"I always wanted to work with kids," Duffy said, and it shows in the amount of time she dedicates to teaching, not just in the classroom, but outside as well. "Everything I end up teaching I really enjoy."

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

CAMP JOBS CAN BE A POWERFUL RESUME-BUILDER!

With Spring Break approaching and college students arriving home, March is great time to think about summer work. Over a million college students will be working at camps this summer. In increasing numbers, college students are recognizing that camp jobs enhance their marketability to future employers.

More than half a million college students will find their way from campus to camp this summer to fill positions at approximately 12,000 day and resident camps.

A camp job can prepare young adults for many challenges in life, including how to budget time and money, how to deal with all types of people, and how to become a stronger leader. Business executives often note that experience as a camp counselor translates into excellent management and personnel skills. Regardless of the college major, camp experiences allow students to learn skills that will enhance job marketability. Working at summer camp can help students develop skills in relationship-building, risk management, decision-making, prioritizing, negotiating, leadership and group development and problem-solving-all very valuable skills in today's job market.

There is a camp and a position that fits every personality. Camp directors are starting to look now for people with a variety of ability levels and backgrounds. And, unlike so many jobs today, most camp positions for college students do not require a lot of prior camp experience.

Camp positions vary by camp but generally fall into four categories.

• Counselors interact personally with campers and lead them through activities. At some camps, counselors are activity instructors as well as cabin counselors. At other camps these duties are separated. Activity instructors teach specific activities, such as arts and crafts, music, drama, radio/TV, computers, rock climbing, nature studies and more.

• Specialty Staff hold special certifications and/or have specialized training to teach or lead particular activity areas. Certifications in aquatics, horseback riding, wilderness leadership & safety, archery and the like are especially desirable to camps. Specialty staff may also serve as camp counselors or administrative staff.

• Administrative Staff lead the camp and various camp activity and support areas. These positions include the director(s), assistant director(s), and program director(s) of the camp as well as those in charge of the waterfront, horseback riding, kitchen/dining facilities, maintenance, business office and the health center.

• Additional positions include food service personnel, cooks, building and grounds keepers, drivers, and office assistants.

Some students worry that a camp job won't be as financially rewarding as an office job. However, salaries for counselors or comparable positions generally range from $1,000 to $3,000 for the camp season and up to $4,000 for persons who are certified or trained for skilled positions. Since most resident camps provide room and board, students will not incur these added expenses.

College credit can sometimes be obtained from working at camp. Check with your college advisor to see if you qualify.

Job-seekers can check out internet camp job Web sites such as the one at www.acacamps.org/jobs/search.html <http://www.acacamps.org/jobs/search.html> or many others. Camp staff recruitment fairs, which are often held on college campuses, are a great opportunity to meet with camp professionals. Also check with college placement offices and local community newspapers.

Poor shooting costs Skippers in season ending loss to Millis

By Mark Goodman
CORRESPONDENT

A team's record or tournament seed doesn't always tell the whole story.

It can be legitimately argued that Cohasset, after finishing 10-11 with a schedule laden with tournament teams in both Div. 3 and Div. 4, was better than the 16th best team in Div. 4 South. They had already beaten a number of teams in the same tournament.

It is an even safer bet that Millis is better than its 17-seed would show, as a majority of their 8-12 record came against six Div. 3 tournament teams.

The Mohawks strength showed last Wednesday, as they defeated the home Skippers 50-38 in the opening round, ending Cohasset's season.

It was a tough way to go out for the Skippers, who were riding high after ending the season with three straight wins to get into the tourney.

It was clear right from the get-go of this one, however, that the Skippers were in for a challenge. As head coach Ron Ford said before the game, Millis boasts some size, led by 6-4 center Dan Pearl and 6-2 forward Frank Dick. And another 6-4 center, junior Steve Micucci, came off the bench for the Mohawks.

The first half was a defensive struggle, as neither team broke 20 points going into the locker room. The Skippers made just two of their first 14 shots, but stayed in the game with some good defense. Big men Dan Tarpey and Sean Connolly were

Banged up CHS skaters put on ice by Bourne in second round shutout

Ben Virga was a lot like that fabled Dutch boy who put his finger in the dike. Sure enough, the hole just kept bigger and bigger for the Cohasset High hockey coach, and the available means he had for plugging up that hole kept dwindling.

The Skippers were clearly a long shot heading into their second round playoff match-up with defending state champ Bourne, Tuesday night at the Bridgewater Ice Arena, and that was the pervasive feeling even before senior Rob Carpenter, the team's leading scorer, was rendered largely ineffective by a partially separated shoulder.

Still, the seventh seeded Skippers (12-7-3) trailed second seeded Bourne (19-3-2) by just one goal through two periods, the unveiling of a new neutral zone trap by the Cohasset skaters clearly crossing up the high flying Canalmen in the early going. However, when a second big hole plugger was washed away by a wave of bad fortune, there wasn't a whole lot Virga had left to stem the tide. Indeed, the loss of hard working senior captain Mike Rasmussen to a broken wrist late in the second period seemed to blow open the floodgates.

Bourne senior captain Jason Mazzola scored a pair of goals just 14 seconds apart to start the second period, essentially washing away the Skippers season. The Canalmen would wind up sailing off with a 4-0 win and a berth in the Div. 3 South semifinal game Friday night versus Bishop Stang on their home Gallo Arena ice.

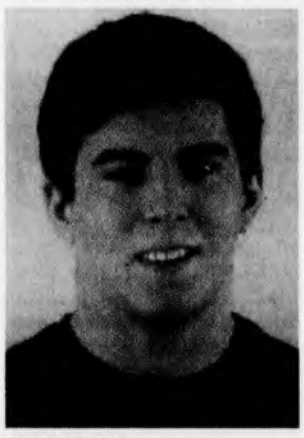
Not a bad encore



Three Cohasset state champs qualify for New England Wrestling Championships

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

It is amazing to think that some might actually view this as a let-down.

Indeed, that fact is perhaps the best measure of just how momentous an event the weekend before last's three state championship tally was for the Cohasset High wrestling program.

For there is certainly nothing wrong with those same three Skipper grapplers who took state Div. 3 titles on Feb. 21 taking a second and two fourths at this past weekend's All-State championships at Salem High, especially when you considerall three showings come with invites to this weekend's New England wrestling championships in New Haven, Connecticut.

Phil Strazzulla

"I'm absolutely thrilled with the way Phil, Joey and Matt wrestled on Saturday," asserted veteran Cohasset High coach Torin Sweeney. "They all wrestled well."

Senior captain Phil Strazzulla placed second in the 145-pound division, while juniors Joe Kehoe and Matt Baroudi took fourth at 140 and 215 pounds, respectively, to give Sweeney his most New England qualifiers since 1993.

"I'll be interested to see how all three of those guys do," said Sweeney. "So often at New England's, or really at any of the 'big' events, it really comes down to seedings. Matt and Joe will probably get a tough first draws because of where they finished. But you never know how things are going to work out. At this level, the difference between winning and losing is usually pretty small."

With just the top four finishers from each divisional championships wrestling, Strazzulla drew a first round bye and then beat Putnam's Gilberto Diaz, 10-7, to advance to the semifinals, a match that was not as close as the score might indicate.

Strazzulla then wrestled a defensive masterpiece in the semifinals to top Dracut's Jared Laganas, 3-0, riding a second period takedown and third period escape into the championship bout with defending All-State champ Tony Pallaria, of Central Catholic.

Pallaria would make it two All-State titles in a row, but not before the Cohasset captain pushed him to the edge. Strazzulla trailed 4-2 through two periods and gave up a quick escape to open the third to see that deficit grow to three.

Too Rough a Ride for Lady Skippers

Hoopsters no match for unbeaten Harwich in second round ouster

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

The Lady Skippers basketball team ran into a season ending brick wall at Harwich on Saturday, losing by a 70-49 score. Going into this playoff game, the Harwich Rough Riders had notched 27 straight wins, including two lopsided victories against our home team.

At no time in the game did Cohasset take the lead.

"We moved the ball well and ran our unyielding defense perfectly," noted co-captain Danielle Pinkus. "Harwich just seemed to be a better team."

Now for some better news. League leading scorer Casey Anderson drilled an eye-popping 19 points. Ashley Faber followed closely with a highly-respectable 16 points but also got into some foul trouble along the way.

Coach John Levangie harbored no regrets about the loss, noting: "In my view, the girls had the most intensity of any game this year. Harwich had trouble penetrating into our 1-2-2 zone. Unfortunately, Harwich made up for it with their relentless outside shooting."

Despite the loss, this team can walk away with a great sense of accomplishment. Basketball coach John Levangie and his Lady Skippers treated us to a phenomenal 14-6 regular season record. The last time Cohasset High saw a girls basketball record the likes of this was 1988.

This season's journey inspired us all. The team came out like ganghusters with four straight wins. Then came the thorny part of their season when they suffered most of their losses. Rather than fold under the string of disappointments, the Lady Skippers toughened their game to finish the regular season with a solid 14-6 record.

Then they entered the single-elimination Div. 4 South Sectional tourney. In their first postseason playoff game in 16 years, the Skippers clocked their opponents, the South Shore Christian Academy. The loss to Harwich followed a few days later.

When asked how he motivated his players throughout the season, Coach Levangie responded: "These players displayed more intensity and self-motivation than any coach could have asked for."

The Lady Skippers learned a lot from this veteran coach. He emphasized the "triple- threat" of shooting, passing and penetrating. He also stressed the importance of maintaining an aggressive attitude and following through on play executions.

Senior Ashley Faber had more good things to say about the season. "Frankly, before the season started, I didn't have much hope. That feeling quickly changed. Now, I'm sad the season has ended."

Faber hopes to pursue her basketball in college next year, pos-

Durkin and Guiney show well at state gymnastics championships

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

For Norwell-Cohasset gymnasts Nancy Durkin and Jen Guiney, this year's state individual championships were, first and foremost, about experience.

Neither high school junior, Durkin from Cohasset or Guiney from Norwell, placed in their events going up against the creme of the Massachusetts gymnastics crop at Beverly High this past Saturday. It is hoped, however, by coach Kara Connerty, that both gymnasts will use that experience as motivation

Girls travel basketball report

The girls travel basketball teams for grades 5-6-7-8 hosted Hanover Sunday at the Cohasset High gym with mixed results.

The fifth graders, feeling the twin effects of a four week layoff (their last game was February 1) and an aggressive Hanover defense, dropped a 16-6 decision to the visitors. Though the Blue and White trailed by only a 6-4 margin at the half, they were unable to mount a sustained offensive attack after the intermission. Hanover hit a couple of long shots to pull away midway through the half from which Cohasset never recovered. The only Cohasset players who managed to tingle the twine were Carly Haggerty, Emma Musto, and Kate French, as the Fledgling Fifthers dropped to 6-2 on the season.

The sixth grade team similarly ran into an aggressive Hanover defense and ended up on the short end of a hard-fought 16-15 decision, the first loss of the year for the Super Sixers. Thanks to some long-range shooting by Erin Fontaine (six points on the game) and a tenacious man-to-man defense of their own, Cohasset stayed close at 10-8 after the first 20 minutes.

Both teams picked up the tempo even further on defense after the intermission, limiting scoring chances on both sides. With the Blue and White trailing 14-13, Meredith Kelly sank a clutch free throw to tie the score late in the game. Cohasset then had the ball with 40 seconds to play, but a Hanover steal of the inbound pass and subsequent long jump shot gave the visitors a 16-14 lead. Cohasset assaulted the basket with a furious flurry of shots and offensive rebounds in the waning moments, but could manage only a solitary free throw to leave the final score at 16-15.

In addition to Fontaine's six points effort, other point scorers for Cohasset, who now are 7-1 on the year, were Sam Crough, who sank a three pointer, Isabelle Franklin with four points, and Kelly with two points. The Super Sixers will have to wait for another day to avenge last year's loss in the playoff semifinals to Hanover.

The seventh grade girls also had a tough time with their Hanover counterparts, but managed to pull away in the final part of the second half for a 32-20 triumph to remain undefeated at 8-0.

Gabriella Flibotte led the way for the Seventh Wonders with a 12 point effort with Carly Salerno also hitting for double digits with 10 points. However, it was the "money shot" by Liz Tetreault which broke a tense, 20-20 deadlock which set the Blue and White on the road to victory.

The eighth grade team kept its playoff chances alive with a 27-23 win over Hanover.

All of the teams have two games on tap this weekend, Saturday evening at Weymouth and Sunday afternoon at home against Marshfield.

heading into next season.

"Nancy and Jen are very good gymnasts in our league," said Connerty, who directed the Nor-Cohs to a perfect 10-0 season this season that brought with it a South Shore League championship and a spot in the South Sectional team championships two weeks ago. "But the gymnasts we saw at Beverly High were just incredible. This experience was an eye opener."

It's not that Durkin or Guiney did not perform well. Durkin qualified to compete at state's in three events, and scored solid marks of 8.3 on the uneven bars, 8.2 on floor and 7.9 on vault. Guiney notched an 8.15 on vault.

"Both girls performed very well," said Connerty. "I'm proud of both of them."

Norwell junior Samantha Rosen missed out of qualifying on both floor and vault by one-tenth of a point on her average scores in those events.

The Nor-Cohs appear to be in good shape to defend their League title next winter, as they lose only one of 20 roster members to graduation, that being Cohasset senior Shelly Carter, a team captain.

Canalmen scuttle Skippers

"We almost pulled it off there," noted Virga at game's end. "Even though Robbie (Carpenter) really couldn't do much out there, we were doing a good job with the trap, but that power play goal Bourne got was a killer and then to lose Mike (Rasmussen) a few minutes after that was just another big blow. I give our guys credit, though. They battled to the end."

The referred to power play goal was delivered by Kyle Kruse and finally put Bourne on the board 3:07 into the second period, 50 seconds after a questionable tripping call against Cohasset junior captain Ted Straughn. Chasing a dump-in pass behind the Bourne net, Straughn slashed the stick up by the hands of the Bourne player who charged to the puck just ahead of him, causing it to become entangled in his skates, thereby tripping him up.

"That was not a good call in my opinion, and it wound up hurting us," said Virga, "Of course, we'd gotten away with one or two that might have been called for penalties, so I guess I can't complain."

Bourne carried a shot advantage of 20-5 through two periods, but Cohasset sophomore goalie Stefan Parnell (29 saves) stopped everything he saw other than Kruse's man-up tally on a wrister from the left circle.

Some aggressive forechecking to start the third period would pay of for the Canalmen, as Bourne junior defenseman Kyle Taylor made a nice poke check just behind the Cohasset blue line, where Matt Gilbert picked it up and slid it quickly into Mazzula as he rushed into the left circle all alone. Mazzula was able to skate in on Parnell, get him down with a fake to the shortside and then roof it over his left shoulder just inside the crossbar to make it a 2-0 game 3:14 into the third.

Mazzula won the ensuing face-off, and charged the Cohasset zone with linemates Gilbert and Ryan Kent. Kent won the race for a dump-in to the right corner and then slid a centering feed to Mazzulla in the mid slot for a quick wrister that this time got over Parnell's right shoulder.

Kruse added his second power play goal of the game with 4:59 to play as he deflected home a left point slapper by Kent to knock home the final nail in Cohasset's coffin.

"There's no shame in losing to a team like Bourne," asserted Virga, whose team defeated Blue Hills in round one of the Div. 3 playoffs, 3-1, on Saturday at Bourne's Gallo Arena. "To be honest, I'd be shocked if they didn't win the South Sectional championship again. I think they're going to win at least a few more games. We just had the misfortune of getting them in our bracket early."

That said, it was not surprising to hear the coach bestow nothing but praise on those of his troops who were left standing at game's end, in particular his veterans.

Crandon Leahy, Mike Devine, Rob Carpenter, Ted Straughn, John Durkin, those guys showed what leadership and hard work are all about tonight," said Virga. "Brandon Smith, Tim Pilczak, Conor Holway, those guys played their butts off, and Stefan was big in goal. We gave it all we had."

The problem, of course, was a matter of depth. 17 of the Skippers 24 players this season were freshman or sophomores. Two of the team's three seniors were largely non-factors in this final game, Rasmussen being lost to the broken wrist and the gutsy Carpenter (arguably the most talented offensive player in the South Shore League this winter) a mere shadow of himself as he steered away from all possible contact and lacked the strength in his shoulder to shoot or even get off a hard pass.

The third senior team member, tri-captain Mike Devine, echoed his coach's sentiments a few moments after the final buzzer had sounded on his fine high school career.

"Bourne just kept throwing three good lines at us, and we didn't have the depth to keep up, especially with Rob being hurt and after Mike got knocked out," said the two time Mariner All-Scholastic defenseman. "We were exhausted at the end, but we never stopped going hard. That says a lot about this team."

Rasmussen was the offensive hero of the opening round 3-1 win over Blue Hills on Saturday at Gallo Arena.

The big and hard working centerman set up the game's first goal 2:32 in when he won a race into the right corner for a dump-in and made a pretty backhand feed to linemate Mark Bouchard in the low slot for a quick one-timer.

After a nice hustle goal by Joe Durkin made it 2-0 late in the first period, Rasmussen delivered a backbreaker to Blue Hills 48 seconds into the second when he charged up the left boards, circled out on goal while using his long reach to fend off his checker and then slipped the puck around the Warriors netminder.

Parnell stopped 18 of 19 shots, including a couple of legitimate testers in the third period.

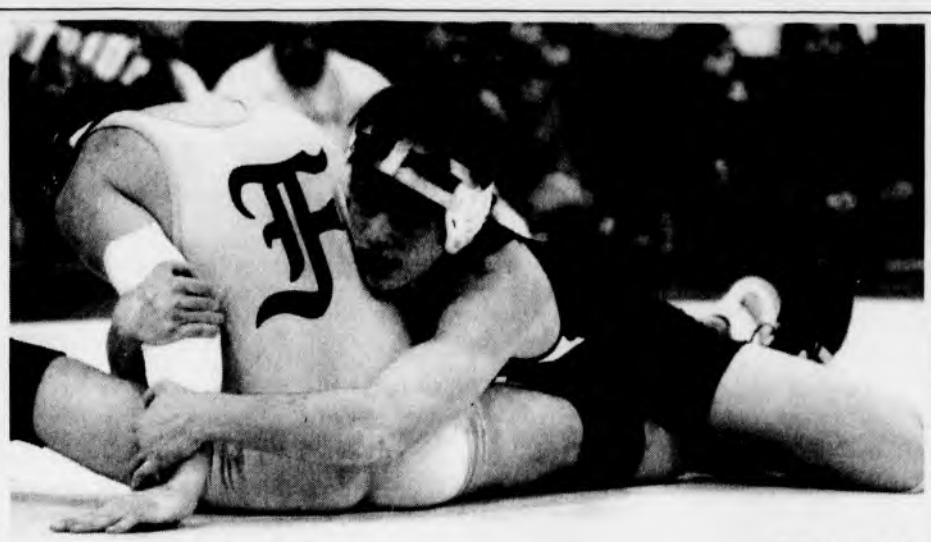
However, he got that point back an escape of his own less than 30 seconds later, at which point Pallaria went into his stall game to run out the clock.

"I really believe Phil is no worse than the second best wrestler in the state at this division," said Sweeney, who to support that assertion pointed to the fact both Diaz and Laganas won their consolation matches to take fifth and third, respectively. "I think he could do very well at New England's. It would be a great way for him to end a great career."

Kehoe also earned a first round bye, as did all of the state champs, and then lost to Greater Lowell's Matt Fuller in an 8-6 heartbreaker. The CHS junior showed a lot wrestling back after a four-point first period takedown, but simply ran out of time at the end.

In order to qualify for New England's, Kehoe was then faced with the challenge of having to win two consolation matches in a row. He won three—topping Mt. Greylock's Jeff Brodeure, 4-1, Gateway's Dan Plumadore, 6-1, and finally Somerset's Ed Michno in an overtime thriller.



Neither Kehoe nor Michno scored in the regulation six minutes, but Kehoe scored a takedown with just 10 seconds left in the OT period, rolling over on top of Michno after very nearly being taken down himself.

Kehoe then lost to Chelmsford's Bruce Rich, 12-4, in the bout for third place, forcing him to settle for fourth.

Baroudi earned his second straight bid at New England's following almost precisely the same course as Kehoe.

After his bye, Baroudi lost a controversial overtime match to Leominister's Sean Griffin, 2-0.

Baroudi kept his New England hopes alive by pulling out a 4-3 double overtime win over Haverhill's Pat Menzi, as he held on to managed an escape in the second OT period to earn the final point.

Cohasset's Joey Kehoe (right) placed a solid fourth at the All-State wrestling championships on Saturday to advance to New England's this weekend in New Haven, Conn.

And Baroudi's New England tourney clinching win over Westfield's Matt Gaylord was just as dramatic, as he broke a 3-3 tie with an overtime pin.

The battle to advance to the third-fourth place bracket was a rematch of the previous week's state championship bout between Baroudi and Southwick's Kyle Davidson, won by Baroudi with an overtime takedown. This one was even more dramatic, as Baroudi had to hang on to Davidson for the entire 30 seconds in the double overtime period to notch the deciding point.

Tewksbury's Chris Bryne took third place with his 7-2 win over Baroudi, just his fourth loss on the season and the first that wasn't decided in either overtime or by one point.

The Cohasset travelling wrestling show will leave town Friday morning, with the athletes needing to get to New Haven by early afternoon. The wrestlers will spend Friday night in a hotel, assuming they qualify for the second day of action.

"It should be a good time," concluded Sweeney. "The kids will have to miss another day of school, but I'm sure they'll get over that."

sibly at Connecticut College.

Coach Levangie encouraged a balance between performance and positive mental outlook. He cited Courtney Caron, Caitlin Gontarz, Ellen Tarpey, and Jen Dinger for their ability to motivate their teammates.

In terms of performance Coach Levangie felt Casey Anderson, Ashley Faber, Jen Buckley, Danielle Pinkus, Lisa Musto, and Nicole Whitney led the way.

Besides his players, Coach Levangie gave strong praise to the supportive parents and to his three assistant coaches-- Dave Gianferante, Jack Levangie, and Kay Long. The players received extraordinary personal attention and it paid off.

Fast forwarding to next winter, Coach Levangie hopes to return to Cohasset. Departing seniors include Gontarz, Caron, Faber, Pinkus and Buckley. Archrival Harwich will lose eight players to graduation. Stay tuned for the future match ups between these two teams.

Coach Levangie remains quite optimistic about next year. He has seen tremendous improvement in Johanna Hamilton, Chelsea Grossman, Mia Lieb-Lappen, and Katie James. They will all return next seasonl. Some names have also surfaced from the JV squad like Lara Novak and Lacey Richardson.

In the off season, they set their sights on outside shooting and rebounding skills. They will need all of their skills, especially when they square off against Carver, Harwich and Abington.

Congratulations on an impressive season.

CHS skiers close season in style

February 25th was a beautiful day at Mount Wachusett for the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association State Alpine Championships. Over 300 racers from across the state participated in the all day event, which included Giant Slalom and Slalom races. This is the culmination of the race season for most teams and the camaraderie and festive atmosphere made for a great event.

Representing Cohasset High School were Senior Co-Captains Andrew Busk and Jessie Guild and Sophomores Kathryn Whorisky and Prescott Busk.

Fourth year coach Jack Dane did a wonderful job of encouraging and overseeing the four racers competing on different courses.

Each of the Cohasset racers was able to place in at least one of their two races which is no easy feat on a course they had never skied before. Individual race results and times can be found at www.ihigh.com.

Sophomore ski team members Marissa Evans and Michelle Lemaire joined the parents in cheering the Cohasset racers on.

The team has a strong backbone of underclassman who will try to fill the void left by Andrew and Jessie as they move on to college.

We would like to extend an invitation for applicants! Cohasset Swim Center is accepting applications for Lifeguards for the 2004 summer season. All applicants must be 16 years of age and hold current Lifeguard/CPR/First Aid certifications. Letters of interest should be sent to Attn: Darleen Koetsch, Cohasset Swim Center, P.O. Box 132, Cohasset, MA 02025 or e-mail cohassetswimcenter@comcast.net. Anyone interested in employment and enrolled or planning to enroll in a Lifeguard and/or WSI are encouraged to apply. Employment will depend on successful completion of the course.

Coastal Stars Youth Hockey sign-ups

The Coastal Stars Youth Hockey organization will be registering players from Marshfield and Cohasset for the 2004/2005 season on the following two dates:

Saturday, March 6th-St. Christines Parish Lower Hall, Marshfield from 12:00pm–4:00pm.

Saturday, March 13th-St. Anthony's Parish Center, Cohasset from 12:00 pm – 4:00 pm.

The 2004/2005 Fee will be $625 if paid in full at registration. Parents should have child's hockey shirt size and desired shirt number. Registration for any new players that are 8 years old and younger will be announced at a future date. For more information see www.coastalstars.com.

CYBSA signups for players/coaches through March 6

The Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association will hold its annual registration for the upcoming baseball and softball season from now through March 6, 2004. Parents/guardians have two options for registration: CYBSA will hold a registration on Saturday, March 6, 2004, from 9:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m., outside both the Osgood and High School gymnasiums.

In the alternative, parents/guardians may register children by mail, provided that mailed registrations are postmarked no later than March 6, 2004. Registration forms are available by contacting Nancy Froio on (781) 383-1897. Forms will be available via e-mail. Registrations that are received or postmarked after March 6, 2004 will be subject to a per player $25 late registration fee. Your cooperation in registering players in a timely manner is greatly appreciated, as it allows the CYBSA to establish rosters and order uniforms so that we are ready for opening day.

This registration is for boys and girls aged 5 to 12 as of July 31, 2004.

A copy of the child's birth certificate must accompany a new player's registration forms.

The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the major league baseball (ages 10 to 12) and softball divisions (ages 11 and 12) will be $100. The registration fee for boys and girls participating in the minor league divisions for baseball (ages 7-11) and softball (ages 7-10) divisions will be $85. The registration fee for the farm league instructional division (ages 5-6) will be $65.

Please be advised that children assigned to Major League teams are still required to register.

In addition, due to recent the child protection program instituted by Little League governing organization, all adults interested in coaching, managing or volunteering in any way, are required to register at this same time and supply a photocopy of a government issued identification. Individuals not complying with this requirement will not be allowed to participate in the CYBSA program.

Questions regarding either player or coach registration may be directed to Liam O'Connell on (781) 383-9538 or Nancy Froio on (781)-383-1897.

Boston Bruins Alums vs. Coastal Stars coaches

The Boston Bruins Alumni Team will be playing the Coastal Stars Youth Hockey Coaches at Hobomock Arena in Pembroke on Sunday March 14th at 3:15 p.m. The Proceeds from the benefit game will go to support the Ace Bailey Children's Fund and Coastal Stars Youth Hockey. The Ace Bailey Children's Fund was established in memory of former Bruin Garnet "Ace" Bailey, who was aboard United flight 175 on 09/11/01. The proceeds raised by the fund go directly to improve the hospital environment for sick patients at The Floating Hospital for Children. A limited number of tickets will be available in advance and the day of the game. Ticket prices are $8 for adults and $5 for children. Please contact Bill Quackenbush at 781-319-1929 for tickets. There will be Bruins merchandise, photo opportunities and even more excitement on the ice.

Coastal Stars Youth Hockey

Mite C3

The Stars Mites C-3 team completed a perfect, undefeated Yankee League season at 21-0-0 with a decisive 9-1 win over the Eagles 1 Mites team. The season included a Cranberry Cup championship, during February school vacation, where the team went a perfect 6-0-0 over the week long tournament to take home the top prize. The success of the hockey club can be summed up in the phrase "team effort". Most games saw scoring contributed by all three forward lines and the defensemen, in fact 14 of the team's 16 players ended the regular season with multiple goal games. This was a very impressive stat to a team which stressed defense and strong positional play. All the team's players saw action at multiple positions, in goal, across the forward lines and on defense which was considered an "honor to play" on this club. The hockey team enters the Yankee League playoffs as the top seed from the Mites South Division. This weeks Coastal Stars win versus the Eagles came as the result of another solid team effort. A strong goaltending performance was turned in by Cranberry Cup MVP net minder Max Hemingway making many saves against some quality Eagles scoring opportunities. With several of the team's members scratched due to illness borrowed player Jeremy Archibald scored the games first goal and finished the contest with a "hat trick". Stars center Robert Gargano also "lit the lamp" three times as he collected a "hat trick" with first and third period tallies. Other Coastal Stars goal scorers included Garrett Leahy, Matthew Tautkus and James Daley. Stars wingers Jeffrey Powers and Andrew Tautkus along with defenseman Declan Leahy aided the scoring effort each contributing a pair of assists. Line mates Ryan Melia and Curtis Golden buzzed around the Eagles offensive zone all game only to be denied on several scoring chances with great saves from the opposing net minder. The game featured another strong defensive outing led by defensemen, Bryan Bowman, Sam Topham, Hugh Hersey and Jake Denton who broke up many Eagles rushes from mid-ice. Great goaltending, strong positional play, balanced scoring from all lines and a stingy defense should propel the team far into the Yankee League playoffs.

Mite C4

The Coastal Stars Mite C-4 team had a busy week, participating in the Cranberry Cup Tournament at Hobomock Arena in addition to its regular season games. The Tournament was a great success, as the C-4's went 4-0 in four games of round robin play. The Stars dispatched a gritty Seahawks team 5-0 in the opening tilt, as Jake Burchill backstopped the shutout with some sensational saves and Eric Weinstein almost single-handedly shut down the Seahawks offense with his stellar defensive play. Jeff Nagle and Tommy O'Brien led the charge offensively, with both notching pretty goals. After cruising to a win over Plymouth and getting by a tough Weymouth team 6-5, the Stars faced a difficult fourth game in the round robin against Braintree. Braintree attempted to capitalize on the speed of their forwards by positioning them outside their own zone for potential breakaways, but the Stars defense corps quickly identified the strategy and shut them down in their tracks. Mats Nelson, Liam McHugh, Ryan Cresta, Christopher Lund and Eric Weinstein did a spectacular job smothering the Braintree forwards, giving them little room to skate and frustrating them at every turn. The line of Michael Lund, Sam Rice and Tommy O'Brien contributed hugely on offense, moving the puck well down low in the zone, and springing many odd-man rushes. The line of Zack Coggins, Ryan McGovern and Jeff Nagle also had a big game, potting three goals in the tilt, which ultimately ended in a 7-2 Stars win, a score that was a little more lopsided than the actual play, which was quite even throughout the game. The Stars moved on the semi-finals where they notched a 5-1 win over another Seahawks team, setting the stage for an all Coastal Stars tournament finale against the Mite C-1's. This game was tight from wire to wire as every player on both teams brought their "A-game" to the rink. The tension was palpable and the pace of play furious with the C-3's ultimately prevailing by a 4-1 margin. It was a fitting ending to a great tournament, and the Coastal Stars should take great pride in their performance and showing in the tourney.

Mite A

The Mite A Coastal Stars pulled out a comeback, 4-3 win against Canton in a thriller that was in doubt until the final buzzer. The Stars jumped out front when Colin Whelan broke up a Canton rush inside the Stars' blue line. Andrew Geddes skated the puck down the right side and fired it past the Canton goaltender with 6:48 left in the first period. Canton knotted the score just before the 5:00 minute mark when Connor Maher made the save on a Canton break, but Canton banged the rebound home. Canton took the lead with 1:40 left on a point-blank shot from out front. Canton extended its lead with a power play tally at 8:25 of the second period. The Stars pulled within one when Will DeCoste flew coast-to-coast and found the five-hole with 3:30 left in the second. DeCoste's goal seemed to light a fire under the Stars. Colin Whelan made a rush that was saved. Jake McDonough's rush down the left side to the front of the net was also saved. Terrence Doonan and Ken Parnell dug ferociously for the rebound until the whistle blew. Jeremy Duchini hustled back to break up a couple of Canton rushes. The Stars picked up a penalty with 13:40 left. But Will DeCoste took the face-off from his own end, found daylight through center ice, and raced past the Canton defense for a shorthanded coast DeCoste that tied the score with 12:57 left. Frank Lemieux put the Stars ahead when Tommy Dixon and Chris Cohen broke up a play at center ice. Lemieux carried the puck down the left side and fired it into the right corner with 8:44 left. Canton came back hard, but Maher was his routinely sensational self, and the Stars' defense stiffened. The Stars picked up another penalty with 7:36 left. Kevin McDougall, Jared McCrystal, Will Golden, Brian Smith, Jonathan Spitz, Terrence Doonan, Ken Parnell, and DeCoste combined to kill the penalty. Canton pulled its goaltender with 1:00 left, but the Stars withstood the extra skater and left town with the win.

Squirt A

The Stars Squirt A Hockey team found out what can happen when they play a strong puck possession hockey game. For three periods the Stars cycled the puck down low and worked patiently for their scoring opportunities, which were plentiful. The first coming just 27 seconds into the contest as Alex Evans (2 assists) set up Ryan Donovan for the first of his 2 goals. Jeff Durkin then sent Connor McLean in on a breakaway on a nifty pass up the middle. Jeff was looking to dump the puck in deep as the Stars were trying to get fresh legs on the ice, but saw Connor breaking down the right side and slid it over to him before heading to the bench and Connor scored the first of his 3 goals with a beautiful finish. On the next shift Jeff Durkin put the Stars up 3-0 as he finished his own rebound after John Collins and Alex Evans traded passes behind the net giving Durkin time to get open in front. Will Schorle showed once again that he is one of the best two way defenseman at the Squirt level as he took care of business in the defensive end while adding to the offensive attack, scoring 2 goals and assisting on Mclean's second goal by making a touch backhand pass that sent Connor in alone for his second breakaway goal. Brian Scott also showed some offense (1 assist) making one spectacular rush out of his own end and raced down the left side and nearly beat the Hanover netminder with a hard shot to the five hole. The defensive four, Entwistle, Cull, Schorle and Scott are really making good decisions when it comes to getting involved in the offense. The Stars limited Hanover to just a handful of scoring chances on goaltender Kevin Kelly by protecting the puck all over the ice and not turning it over. The team has a good understanding of how important puck possession is and saw the positive results that come from it in this solid team effort.

Boys off target

able to limit Millis' inside game, while guards Chris Bilodeau, John Andrade and Trevor Brady were quick to close out on Mohawks shooters.

Cohasset appeared to build some momentum at the 6:40 mark of the first half, when Bilodeau drove down the right side of the lane, made the basket and drew the foul. The three-point play gave the Skippers a 13-11 lead.

The home team would score only three points the rest of the half, however, as Millis played some stifling defense of its own. The Mohawks held Cohasset to 6-for-31 shooting in the half. The Skippers did their part by holding Millis to 8-for-26 shooting.

The visitors had the lead at the half, 19-16.

Unfortunately for Cohasset, the shooting trend continued for them in the second half. They made just nine out of 34 shots, including 2-for-12 on threes.

The Skippers appeared as though they would be able to take the ball inside after Pearl picked up his fourth foul with 13:27 left. Millis held a 22-20 advantage at that point. Pearl had just five points and five rebounds, mainly due to foul trouble.

Instead, it was Millis that stepped up and made some shots. Senior guard Tom Rae was especially troublesome for Cohasset, making four treyss in the second half, all of them daggers that silenced the Skippers crowd.

Cohasset simply could not buy a basket for most of the second half. The Skippers were able to force turnovers leading to fast breaks, and showed some good ball movement for open shots in the half-court set. Nothing was falling, however, and the Mohawks' lead grew to as much as 14 with 6:14 to go.

Cohasset made a late scramble to get back in the game, as sophomore guard Trevor Brady hit a couple of 3-pointers and Connolly got three baskets down low. It wasn't enough, however, as Millis had an answer each time, either with a Rae 3s or a basket from Dick down low.

Connolly led the skippers with 11 points and also pulled down seven rebounds. Brady had eight, while Andrade has six and Bilodeau five. Bilodeau also had seven rebounds and four assists.

Rae led all scorers with 18 points, and Dick had 10 points and 13 rebounds.

CEA volunteer is being sought

Cohasset Elder Affairs is looking for a volunteer to assist one (or more) days a week as an Office Receptionist/Office Assistant. Currently, there is an opening on Thursday mornings from 9 a.m. to noon as well as other time frames. Call Martha Horsefield, Volunteer Coordinator, at 781-383-9112.

Springtime House tour

"Opening Doors for Resurrection Youth Ministry" Resurrection Parish of Hingham would like to welcome you to its first annual House Tour & Boutique featuring Springtime Table Settings on Saturday, April 4, from noon to 4 p.m.

The goal of this important undertaking is to raise funds to send middle and high school-age students away this summer for a week of volunteer work. This year there will be more than 70 students traveling to Quincy, Worcester, San Francisco, Calif., and Gallup, N.M., to spend a week serving meals in soup kitchens, stocking food pantries, delivering meals to the homebound, visiting the sick and elderly, and doing home and building renovations.

Local shops, florists, decorators, and homeowners have worked together to create an exciting variety of table setting ideas in both the kitchens and the dining rooms of these South Hingham homes. Reflecting themes both casual and elegant, you'll enjoy seeing a French Fete celebration, a Kentucky Derby party, Breakfast with the Easter Bunny, Alice in Wonderland's High Tea, and a Springtime Renewal of Friendship gathering, to name a few. High school students planning to go on these trips will be staffing the homes on the Tour.

The Boutique, open from noon to 5 p.m., on Sunday, April 4, has 20 venders offering a superb variety of gift items for sale, such as handmade jewelry, knitted scarves, custom pottery, handbags, hand painted furniture and note cards. It will be located in Read Hall, the lower level of the Resurrection Church, adjacent to Notre Dame Academy, at 1057 Main Street in Hingham. Ten percent of the proceeds will benefit Youth Ministry. The Boutique will also have a Bake Sale, sponsored by Middle School students and a "Relay for Life" table with Luminarias available for a donation to the American Cancer Society.

Advanced tickets will be available for purchase for $20, beginning March 13, and can be purchased at any of the following locations. Resurrection Rectory, Treasures in the Square, Corson's Glass House, La Petit Maison, Olden's Pharmacy in Weymouth, Village Gardens in Norwell, the Hingham Public Library, and Noble's Camera Shop in Queen Anne Plaza in Norwell. Tickets for the House Tour will only be available at the Boutique on the day of the Tour and will cost $25.

Call the Resurrection Rectory at 781-749-3577 with any questions you may have about the House Tour and Boutique.

Spring Rec. Programs

Watch local news media for registration notices for a variety of Pre-K through grade 6 after school recreation programs, as well as April, school vacation Baseball clinics, Wrestling clinic and Safe boating course for children and adults. Details for these programs will be released soon. Call 781-383-4109 for more information.

Hadassah hosts Purim Celebration

The South Coastal Chapter of Hadassah invites the public to a Purim Celebration. "Vashti's Tea" will be held on Sunday, March 7 at 4 p.m. at 35 Franklin Rodgers Road. Rabbi Shira Joseph of Congregation Sha'aray Shalom in Hingham will lead a discussion on: "Rebels, Romantics and Redeemers: The Women of Purim." The cost of the event is $18 per person. Hadassah members are encouraged to bring a friend to "Vashti's Tea" which promises to be fun and educational while also raising funds for Hadassah.

Hadassah is the largest women's group and the largest Zionist membership organization in the United States. Five main threads run through Hadassah's many programs and projects: health, Jewish growth and continuity, partnerships with Israel, social action and advocacy, and life skills.

For more information or to reserve a seat at "Vashti's Tea", please call (781) 749-6237 by March 1.

Cohasset girls play von Trapp children in 'Sound of Music'

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The hills are about to come alive at the Company Theatre in Norwell, as cast and crew prepare for their upcoming show, "The Sound of Music." With lines memorized and final touches being made to costumes in preparation for dress rehearsals, Cohasset residents Emily Baumgarten, 9 and Rebecca Dickinson, 12 are beginning to feel the butterflies in their stomachs.

Of the seven von Trapp children, Emily and Rebecca were chosen to play the roles of Marta and Brigitta, which is quite an honor considering more than 100 children auditioned to be a part of the von Trapp brood.

"The room was packed. You could barely move," said Rebecca, recalling what it was like auditioning.

However, the two Deer Hill students may have had an advantage even before they walked through the door, as both have previous experience with the show and the roles they auditioned for.

"We did 'The Sound of Music' at the Cohasset Dramatic Club," said Emily, adding she and Rebecca held the same roles in the Cohasset show as they do in the Company Theatre production. "It was a different version," Emily said of her former script, adding while many lines were almost the same, there were some new lines that needed to be memorized.

While "The Sound of Music" is the first Company Theatre production for Emily, Rebecca was a cast member in the theater's productions of "Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory," and "A Christmas Carol." Because both girls share the same dream of one day making a career out of their talents, this play will surely not be the last for either.

"I want to be on Broadway someday," said Emily, to which Rebecca chimed in and said on Broadway, you have to be able to sing, act, and dance, which both girls will do in "The Sound of Music."

But of all three areas of talent, the girls say in "The Sound of Music," the singing aspect is the most difficult. "You need to get your harmonies down," said Rebecca, which has required much hard work not only individually, but with the other actors.

Fortunately, "All the children have great voices," said Emily, which makes the harmonies blend together very well.

When the curtain goes up, both girls said they will be "extremely nervous," not only because of the pressure to sing the right notes in harmony, but because they have a slew of lines that must be remembered. Rebecca said it's very important to remember lines and cues, because "If you miss a line, it throws the timing off completely."

Aside from what the audience sees on stage, problems can arise behind the scenes, as many costume changes are necessary throughout the show.

"We have our sailor costume, lonely goat costume, play clothes, and party outfits," said Rebecca, adding sometimes costume changes must be done on the side of the stage. Emily said because costumes need to be changed so quickly, the girls wear leotards underneath to speed the process along. Neither girl has seen all her costumes just yet, but with dress rehearsal beginning soon, they won't have to wait much longer.

Aside from being on stage, Rebecca said one of the best aspects of being in the show is being able to meet new people. "You become best friends and by the end of the show, they feel like family," she said. Emily agreed and said "We'll be sad once it's over."

Emily Baumgarten and Rebecca Dickinson will play Marta and Brigitta von Trapp in the Company Theatre's production of "The Sound of Music."

When not on stage, Emily said she enjoys playing soccer and tennis, as well as participating in Girl Scouts. She also takes ballet lessons at the Boston Ballet school, right next to the Company Theatre. Emily takes figure skating lessons as well, and enters competitions. "I just won second place last weekend," she said.

Rebecca takes dance lessons, and is currently enrolled in a jazz class at a studio in Hingham. She enjoys playing sports, including soccer, tennis and swimming. Rebecca also likes hanging out with her friends and playing on the computer, as well as talking on the phone.

"The Sound of Music," tells the tale of Maria, a woman on the path to becoming a nun, leaves the confines of the abbey to discover her true calling, and becomes the governess for the von Trapp family's seven children. The widowed Captain von Trapp is a naval officer who disciplines his children as if they were military soldiers, and the children in turn act obedient under his watch, but have turned many governesses away with their antics. Maria wins the children over with her kindness and teaches them how to sing.

In addition to Emily and Rebecca, there are three other Cohasset residents lending their talents to the production. Peter Dupre will play the role of Captain von Trapp, his wife, Lori Dupre will play the role of a nun and Rebecca's father Reed Dickinson will play the role of Frans the butler.

"The Sound of Music" will open its curtains on Friday, March 12 and will run until Sunday, April 4. For more information or to purchase tickets, please call the Company Theater at (781) 871-2787 or visit their web site at http://www.companytheatre.com. Tickets are priced at $23 for Wednesday (7:30pm) and Sunday shows (3:00pm); and $25 for Thursday (7:30pm), Friday (8:00pm) and Saturday shows (8:00pm). Tickets are also available at the box-office, located at 30 Accord Park Drive in Norwell.

If you want to get to know a rug, rub its back.

DOES IT FEEL TOO SMOOTH, TOO STIFF? IT'S PROBABLY A MACHINE-MADE RUG.

SOME EXQUISITE RUGS HAVE AS MANY AS 800 KNOTS PER INCH.

MOST RUGS ARE MADE OF WOOL. MORE ELABORATE DESIGNS ARE OFTEN WOVEN FROM SILK. WE HAVE SOME THAT COMBINE WOOL AND SILK.

WE HAVE THE WIDEST SELECTION AND BEST VALUE OF ANYONE IN NEW ENGLAND, LIKE THIS RUG FROM THE MAHAL COLLECTION BY SAMAD (M-101 RED/RED).

If it feels a little too smooth, if you can't feel the knots, if it feels a little stiff, then it's probably a machine-made rug. There's nothing wrong with a rug made by a machine as long as you aren't paying like it was a rug made by hand. The same design executed by a machine should cost a third of what a hand-made costs. Hand-knotted rugs are guaranteed to out-live you. A machine-made rug has the life expectancy of five to ten years. Many people buy hand-made rugs for a living room, dining room, or entrance hall. They put the hand-mades where there's a lot of traffic. They put the machine-mades where there's less traffic. That's pretty much the rule.

If you're really serious, measure an inch (the tip of your index finger in length) and count the number of knots. More knots per inch are another measure of quality. There are some amazingly elaborate works of art that have as many as 800 knots per inch. (We have some in our store.)

A simpler design might have around 80 knots per inch. The knottier rugs are often made of silk. The simpler ones are generally made of wool. We have some outstanding rugs that are a combination of wool and silk, basically the best of both worlds. At our store, Dover Rug, we can show you everything from an investment grade rug to a beautiful broadloom carpet. We have the widest selection and the best value of anyone in New England. Plus, on our hand-made rugs, we offer a lifetime (That's lifetime) exchange policy.

So, another way to make sure you're getting what you paid when you buy a rug is to turn the corner and look for our label.

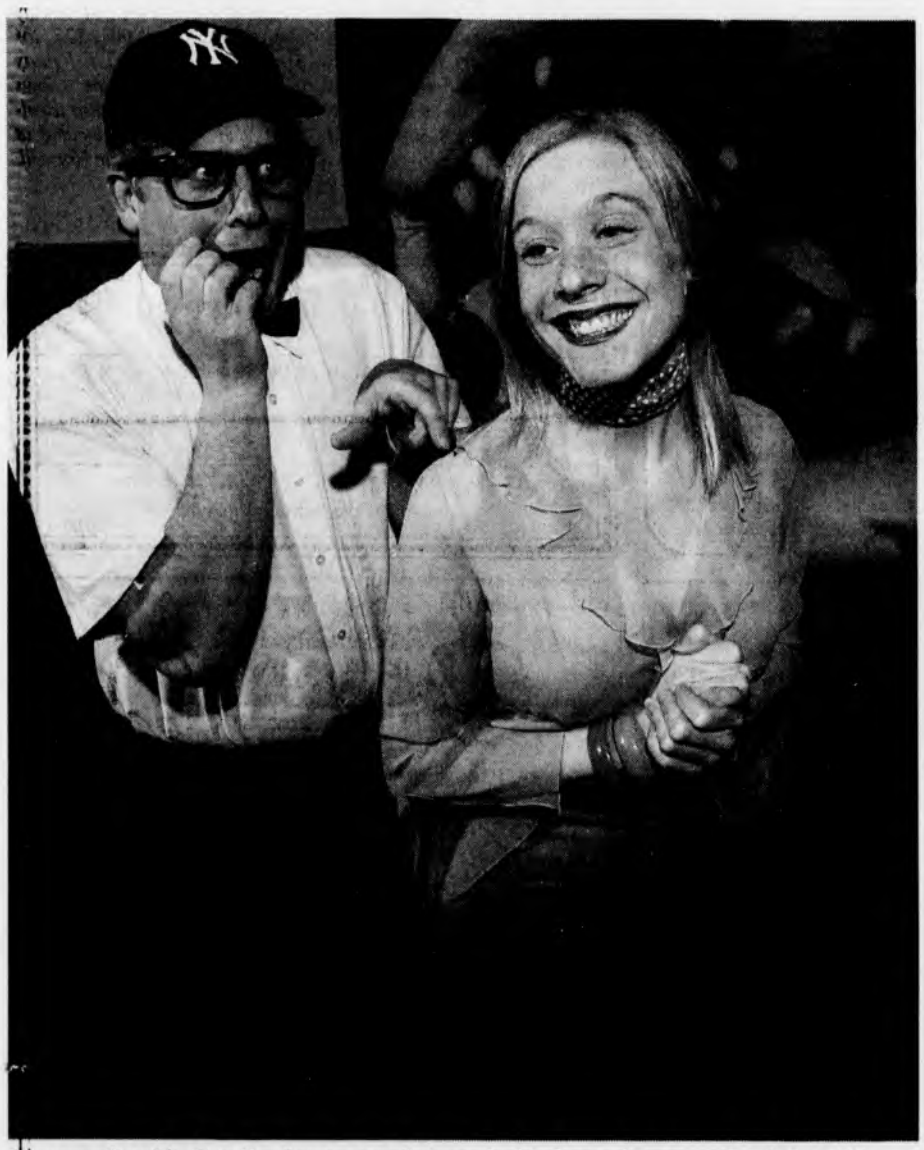
At right: Chris Hetherington is the voice and Gary Ritts is the puppeteer for Audrey II in CDC's "Little Shop of Horrors." They are pictured here with the "little" Audrey II.

'Little Shop of Horrors' will make you laugh!

Curtain rises on CDC show



The Cohasset Dramatic Club presents "Little Shop of Horrors," a musical by Alan Menken and Howard Ashman (the same team which also created Disney's "Beauty and the Beast," and "Aladdin").

The plot revolves around Seymour Krelborn, a lovable nerd, who makes a Faustian deal with "a strange and interesting new plant", only to learn the high price he must pay.

The show is full of laughs and toe-tapping musical numbers and is a great way to spend an evening Parental guidance is suggested due to language and implied/comic book style violence.

All shows are presented at the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium. Show times are Friday and Saturday nights (Marcy 5, 6, 12 & 13) at 8 p.m., and Sunday afternoons (March 7 & 14) at 2 p.m.. Tickets are $12 and are available by calling 781-544-0304, or you can get them at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset or at the door.

Seymour, played by Eric Henderson, secretly longs for his flower shop co-worker Audrey (Ali Ritts) as his famous plant Audrey II, is ready to bite.

Shop owner Mr. Musnick (Mark Chason) gets all excited when the Audrey II makes his flower store famous. The alien plant is named by its caretaker Seymour for his girlfriend.

Do You Know The Three Big Lies
Of Medicaid Qualification?

Lie #1: If you need a nursing home, Medicaid will take your house.
(They can't, and they don't want to.)

Lie #2: If you transfer assets you have to wait 36 months to qualify.
(There is no such rule.)

Lie #3: You have to give your assets away to protect them.
(You don't have to give up control of your assets to protect them.)

Central air conditioning
for homes with hot water or steam radiator heat.

If a home doesn't have forced air heat, installing ductwork for central air conditioning can mean major remodeling and expense. But a Unique Indoor Comfort® system doesn't require large metal ductwork, or major remodeling.

Cool air is delivered through small 2" flexible tubing that can easily be weaved through walls and ceilings, around studs and other obstacles. All that's visible are small, round outlets in every room. What's more, Unique Indoor Comfort® offers Lennox high efficiency air conditioning.

Proven in thousands of homes, easy to install Unique Indoor Comfort® is the central air conditioning solution for the older home.

WORSHIP NOTES

United Day Of Prayer at Glastonbury Abbey

Each year Fr. Thomas Keating and Contemplative Outreach designate a day for people throughout the world to gather together for prayer, silence, and sharing. Fr. Keating has prepared a special video presentation for people attending these sessions, and there will be opportunity for discussion after the video.

This year the South Shore and Cape conference will be held at the Glastonbury Abbey Conference Center in Hingham on Mar. 20 from 9:30-3p.m. In addition to the video by Fr. Thomas, there will be several sessions of centering prayer, a walking meditation, and the opportunity to attend noon mass at Glastonbury Abbey.

It is not necessary to belong to a Centering Prayer group to attend this day, but familiarity and practice with centering prayer would be helpful. This day provides an opportunity for the global community of Contemplative Outreach to bond in silence. Morning coffee and lunch are included in the $35 fee for the day.

Please call Rosemary Edwards at 781-749-5377 or Ed McDermott at 781-925-2707 to reserve a place or to answer questions about this program.

Buddhist Meditation

A Buddhist meditation group meets at the Old Ship Parish House, 107 Main St., Hingham at 7 a.m. Wednesdays, and at 7 p.m. on the second and fourth Sundays.

Mother and son tour with "Oliver!"

The musical "Oliver!," adapted from Charles Dickens novel "Oliver Twist," tells the story of an orphaned boy who escapes to London from a bleak workhouse.

As Snake Man, Mattapoisett's Koby Williamson plays one of the apprentice pickpockets in the Fagin-led gang that takes Oliver under its wing. Williamson's own story could not be more different from his character. A sixth-grader at Old Hammondtown School in Mattapoisett, Koby is one of one only two New Englanders in the national tour of the musical — which plays at Boston's Wang Theatre through Sunday — with the other being his mother. Christine Williamson, an instrument teacher in the Mattapoisett school system, plays clarinet in the show's orchestra. With its familiar plot and a score by Lionel Bart that features songs "Who Will Buy?," "Food, Glorious Food," and "As Long As He Needs Me," "Oliver!" was first presented in London in 1960 and on Broadway three years later where it won several Tony Awards.

Cameron Mackintosh's new staging of "Oliver!" will be at the Wang Theatre, 270 Tremont Street, Boston, through Sunday. For tickets and information, call 1-800-447-7400 or visit www.telecharge.com.

EXTENDED-WEAR HEARING INSTRUMENTS

First, there were extended-wear contact lenses. Now, extended-wear hearing instruments may be in our future. In fact, the FDA recently provided clearance for the first extended-wear hearing instrument to treat all hearing-impaired patients except those with profound losses. The InSound XT is worn invisibly and continuously (without removal) deep inside the ear canal for up to four months. The extended-wear device is custom-fitted and inserted in a three-minute, non-surgical procedure requiring no anesthesia. It is placed close to the eardrum, which helps to improve high-frequency amplification and minimize feedback. Upon battery depletion, the old device is removed and discarded and a new one is inserted. The extended-wear device is expected to be more widely available over the next year.

Keeping pace with the fast-growing technology of today's hearing industry is an important part of our business at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER. Our experienced staff uses specialized equipment to pinpoint and evaluate your hearing impairment. We then match the most appropriate hearing instrument with your individual needs. Call us today at 781-337-1144 for an appointment for a free hearing test, or just stop by 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth.

P.S. The InSound XT meets the challenge of extended wear with micro-miniaturization and an ultra-low power chip that requires less than 10% of the energy of conventional hearing instruments.

Cook Estate plan on docket tonight

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Members of the Cook Estate advisory committee held their last meeting Monday, and hoped to provide enough information to allow the Board of Selectmen to make a final decision Tuesday. However, it seems the group did its job so well, that consultants Drew Leff and Dave Fulton have requested more time to review information compiled, in order to follow up on questions and pursue a few more references.

"We've been wrangling with a few issues," said Leff, adding by taking an additional two days, it will not affect the overall schedule for the project. "I realize we're on a tight time schedule, but we still have some questions," he said.

Some of the questions remaining after discussions with the committee, were the likelihood the developers would be able to get permits from the Planning Board within the town's timetable, without any redesign, and the financial stability for each company. Because none of the proposals provided financial

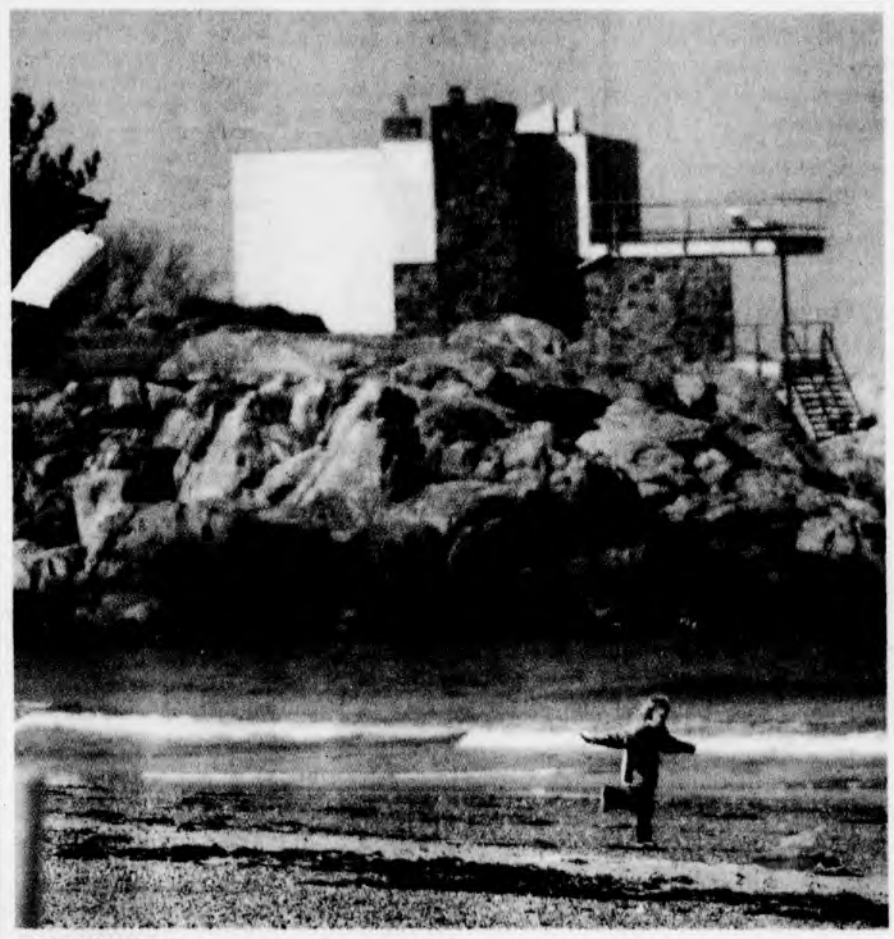
Gays upset with Garrett Bradley

Don't agree with his stance to put marriage on ballot



By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

It may have been one night when state Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, wished he'd been a Republican.

Gay rights activists tend not to waste their energy on Republicans, whom they think would automatically oppose same-sex marriage.

But they say they expected more from the two-term Democrat, who was under fire Monday night from an emotional crowd of about 200 concerned citizens that invited him to the

Monumental plans to remember vets

At this time next year, the scenery could be changing at the Veterans Memorial Park on Cohasset harbor, thanks to the efforts of the Veterans Memorial Committee. Members have been formulating plans which would add monuments honoring Cohasset residents who served in both the Korean and Vietnam wars, which will be placed next to the Civil War and World War II honor roll walls which currently stand.

The new memorial will be made out of the same stone as the existing monuments and will have the same gray granite plaques, but will be smaller in height so as not to interfere with the view of the harbor. Currently, Glenn Pratt, member of the

DA says Quigley did nothing wrong in series of incidents

Conducted investigation at chief's request

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The chief law enforcement office in the county has stated Sgt. William Quigley has done nothing wrong in a series of police stops and arrests Police Chief Robert Jackson has asked the District Attorney's office to investigate.

In a Feb. 24 letter to Chief Jackson, First Assistant District Attorney Dennis Mahoney stated "there is nothing in the material that by itself suggests that Sgt. Quigley has been involved in a pattern of improper police behavior that may be depriving citizens of constitutionally protected rights and has been filing false police reports."

The DA's office investigated 14 separate incidents that Jackson brought to its attention. The Cohasset Police Department hand delivered to District Attorney William R. Keating's Quincy office on Feb. 9 a package of police reports, fact sheets and narratives on the incidents.

Quigley, who was placed on paid administrative leave Oct. 20, is facing charges from the town of inappropriate activity in three arrests and one booking procedure. He is also accused of drinking on duty following a training exercise last May at the Scituate Rod & Gun Club. The charges were covered during the first three, day-long sessions of the police disciplinary hearing at Town Hall, when the town presented its case. The hearing is scheduled to resume Monday when Quigley and Officer James McLean, who is also on paid administrative leave for alleged abuse of police power and drinking on duty, are expected to present their defense.

"What is left to discuss? With all due respect to Mr. Haddad, he is not in a better position to make a determination than the DA has already done."
— Doug Louison, attorney

Both officers, who deny any wrongdoing, want to get back to work.

On Jan. 12, about two weeks before the officers' disciplinary hearing on the town's charges began, Jackson wrote to the DA's office asking for an investigation into Quigley's police conduct, according to correspondence obtained through a public records request. The officers learned of the town's charges on Jan. 13.

Quigley's arrest of the chief's son and two other men outside the Legion hall last Oct. 11 was not included in Jackson's request for an investigation, although the other two arrests and the booking procedure the town is alleging Quigley mishandled were.

In the letter to the DA, Jackson stated, he had "suspicions that Sgt. William Quigley was making arrests before developing probable cause and then was tailoring his reports to cover arrests."

It's not the first investigation the town has asked for. The town hired a private investigator who examined Quigley's arrest reports for the past three years. He also looked into Quigley's background and past employment. Quigley, who has been a full-time Cohasset Police Officer since 1995, has named both Jackson and Town Manager Mark Haddad in a civil suit for invasion of privacy and interfering with his employment as a police officer.

Haddad and Jackson have declined to comment on the police issue, as has Town

Cohasset names its new superintendent

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

After what has been a very busy time for members of the School Committee, there is now one less item on its to-do list, as the group unanimously voted to offer retiring Supt. Edward Malvey's position to current Middleborough superintendent Denise Walsh.

Making the decision one week ahead of schedule, the board couldn't be happier with its decision and can't wait to begin working with the district's newest addition.

"So much of what makes a good appointment is the match," said School Committee Vice Chairman Chartis Tebbetts, adding Walsh has both the skills and a real passion for the issues Cohasset wants to address. Member Pat Martin agreed and said "I would say she is an excellent fit for what we're looking for."

School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn called Walsh from his cell phone during the School Committee meeting, minutes after the committee chose to appoint her to the position. Flynn said he was a little worried at the beginning of the conversation as Walsh told him after a week of hearing nothing from Cohasset, it gave her time to seriously reflect on whether Cohasset was the right place for her to be. Flynn said she then told him she was very happy with the decision she made and that, "She's agreed very gleefully to come to Cohasset."

Theatre group to visit Deer Hill

Deer Hill has been awarded a grant from the Anti-Defamation League's No Place for Hate Program, which will be used to present "Doin' the Right Thing", a play that explores the cruel effects and consequences of teasing, bullying, and harassment. The play is being presented on Thursday, March 18 by an educational theater group, and all Deer Hill students and their parents are invited to attend.

The play is 30 minutes long, followed by a 30 minute group discussion led by the actors. Show times are from 8:50-9:50 for grade five, from 10:15-11:15 a.m. for grade four, and from 1-2 p.m. for grade six.

"Doin the Right Thing," was developed and produced by Deana's Fund, an organization dedicated to the prevention of violence. Last year the program was presented to the sixth grade, and very positive feedback was given by students, parents, and teachers.

With some help from the Cohasset Diversity Committee, funding will be provided by both an Anti-Defamation League "No Place for Hate" grant and matching funds from the PSO as well as funds from the town's Project Safeguard Committee.

For more information, please contact Betsy McGrath, Deer Hill's School Adjustment Counselor, at (781) 383-6115.

Wadsworth back on Historical Commission

After taking some time off, David Wadsworth has been appointed back on the Historical Commission. In a letter to Town Manager Mark Haddad, Wadsworth stated, "At the suggestion of the Chairman of the Cohasset Historical Commission, Noel A. Ripley, and with the encouragement of Commission members, I would like to apply for re-appointment to the Commission. I believe that I can assist the Commission in fulfilling its task as a part of the ongoing project of preserving the history of our town, and am willing to serve the Commission in that capacity."

Construction update

Construction is almost complete at the middle-high school, as canopies are being installed both in the front of the building over the main entrance, and by the superintendent's office. "The community area itself is coming together, and we hope to move meetings there in a few weeks," said Supt. Edward Malvey. Malvey said already he has held meetings in the small conference room which has been completed, and hopes the larger conference room can serve as the new meeting place for School Committee meetings very soon. Furniture for the larger conference room was received last week, but Malvey said the room will need to be outfitted with new cameras and microphones before it will be fit to hold meetings.

Streetscape meeting

The consultants from the Waterfield Design Group will hold an information meeting Wednesday, March 17, at 5 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall. All Village merchants and residents are invited to attend the meeting, which will discuss construction phasing for the upcoming streetscape and infrastructure project.

Changing fees for streetscape project

Town Manager Mark Haddad said an additional $55,200 will need to be paid by the town to the Waterfield Design Group in order to get the approved contract amounts in line with the work the company has both done and will need to do in order to finish the design portion of the Village Streetscape Project. The additional fees are the result of the group's being asked to go back to the drawing board a number of times to finalize plans. Even with the additional cost, "We are still within our overall budget," said Haddad. In addition to the $55,200, a letter from Craig Miller the town said it will need to pay an additional $3,400 for bid phase services, and printing costs for construction bid documents can be estimated at roughly $700, depending on how many contractors pull plans for the job when it is advertised.

Planning Board to be represented by counsel

The Board of Selectmen has agreed to appoint private counsel to represent the Planning Board during the appeal of its decision to grant Cedarmere a special permit. Abutters to the proposed development have filed an appeal of the Planning Board's decision, based mainly on the fact that the Sewer Commission denied the project a connection to the town's sewer lines. Because the Sewer Commission's decision is being appealed by Cedarmere, and the Sewer Commission is being represented by Town Counsel in that matter, the Planning Board thought it would be best to avoid a potential conflict of interest, and hire independent counsel to represent it. Town Manager Mark Haddad said he spoke with attorney Richard Henderson and he has agreed to represent the Planning Board at a discounted rate of $150 per hour.

Deer Hill gym dedication set

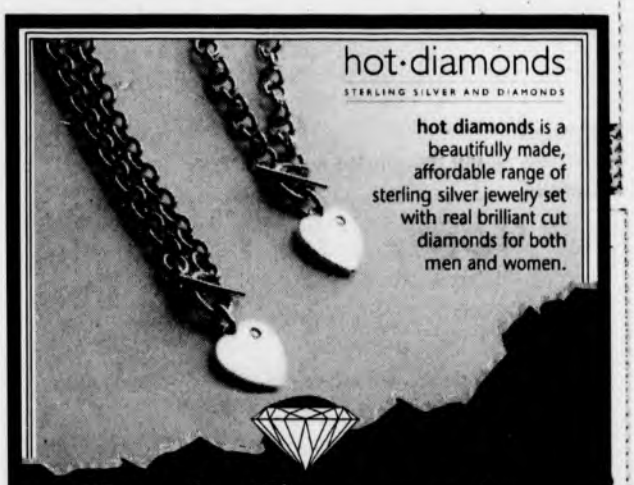
Supt. Edward Malvey presented the School Committee with a letter he received from the Dennis Kuntz Memorial Fund Committee, which asks if it would be possible to name the brand new gymnasium at Deer Hill School in his honor. Kuntz was a physical education teacher in Cohasset from 1964-1994, and his memorial fund would like to purchase an engraved plaque, to be mounted at the entrance to the gym, which would be paid for with funds from an account set up in his memory. The School Committee said it has had similar requests before, and will take it under advisement. The School Committee asks that if any community members have any thoughts on the renaming of the gymnasium, to please contact any members of the board.

Technology better at Registry of Deeds

Register William P. O'Donnell, D-Norwood, reported the Registry has completed implementation of upgraded technology for document processing, record management, and public research access. Backlogs and waiting times have been significantly reduced. The Registry has also added a customer service center, expanded real estate closing areas at the Registry, and adopted improved data security and disaster recovery plans.

Internet services have been greatly enhanced, O'Donnell stated, with redesign of the Registry website, www.norfolkdeeds.org, and introduction of Internet accessible online land record and title research.

"Online research has proven a significant benefit," O'Donnell stated, "reducing the need for customers to travel to the Registry and allowing them to obtain research information outside of regular business hours."



The Registry of Deeds is the principal office for real property records in Norfolk County. The Registry receives and records hundreds of thousands of documents each year and is a basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate and accessible land record information. For further information regarding the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds please call 781-461-6122 or visit the Registry website, www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Task force floated to create community-police dialog

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police overtime may not be the only police issue to be discussed on the floor of Town Meeting.

A citizens petition asking for a task force to start a dialog between the police department and residents at no cost to the town got a warm response from the advisory committee last week.

The reworked citizens petition bears little resemblance to what is printed in the Town Warrant. The group decided to change the wording considerably, dropping the request for an "investigation of the police investigation," and opting to work toward a "code of conduct" to improve relations and understanding among police and the citizens they are sworn to protect.

The proponents were also agreeable to eliminating their request for $10,000 to hire a facilitator at the suggestion of the advisory committee, leaving open the option of returning to the fall Town Meeting if it is later determined the money is needed.

"Our view is the situation today is dramatically different than at the time when we filed the Citizens Petition," said Lou Harvey, spokesman for the group.

Harvey said the community and police need to talk to one another so both sides understand the type of police department that is expected.

"There's been a breakdown in communication," he said. "We're not here to affix blame but to create a dialog."

"There's been a breakdown in communication. We're not here to affix blame but to create a dialog."
— Lou Harvey, proponent

Advisory committee chairman Susan Kent suggested the proponents have handouts at Town Meeting explaining the request. She said the request presented to the committee was too vague and wasn't ready for "prime time."

"You have to ask for something and not just take the temperature of what the town thinks," she said.

Advisory committee member Roger Hill said there were two factions within the police department.

"They have to get on the same page or this won't work," he said. "There's a lot of old school and a lot of new school and that's where the problem lies.

"When someone is pulled over, they don't know which cop is behind that darkened window."

There was some discussion about how police handle incidents. Some advisory committee members suggested a code of conduct is more a management problem at the police department and Town Hall than something the community can address.

But Harvey said the police and community need to buy into the same set of rules so they understand one another. He explained police have a lot of discretion before an arrest is made.

Advisory committee member Pat Waters said he thought if the community supported the establishment of a task force then the selectmen would be on board.

But Selectman Merle Brown explained selectmen can't be forced to conduct a study of the police department. However, he said he had no problem with educating the town about how the police department runs. But Brown said any new policies have to pass muster with the police union.

"The union runs the system not management," he said. Brown said, for example, the union filed a grievance when the chief wanted to put a detective back in uniform to cut down on overtime. [Town Meeting voters will be asked to appropriate $60,000 to cover an overtime shortfall for the police department].

But Harvey said creating a dialog could open the door for change.

"The most important aspect of this proposal is to create a dialog among the parties," he said. "More people need to understand what the police are facing and visa versa."

Wigmore Pierson, another proponent of the article, said the situation at the police department will only get worse unless steps are taken.

"It's important to make an attempt to try a dialog and discussion rather than sit back and do nothing," he said.

Vote on police article is deferred

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Board of Selectmen has deferred making decisions on eight Warrant articles, in an effort to allow sponsors of the articles to come before the board and give a presentation. However, Article 6, which deals with the Citizen's Petition regarding the police investigation, was almost voted against, even before the proponents had a chance to present the article.

The original article proposed allocating $10,000 to hire independent counsel for the purpose of investigating the alleged misconduct, identify potential abuse of power, fraud, or deceit that may have taken place at the police department. However, the article has since changed and does not currently include allocating any funds and focuses on creating a dialog and not asking for an investigation.

"We do not recommend the article as it stands right now," said Selectman Merle Brown, adding he has no reason to have the citizen's group in to give a presentation. "We know what it is, and it's $10,000 we don't have," he said.

However, Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris said she had heard the group had changed the article and had come before the advisory committee with a new version, and she would like to get an opinion from Town Counsel regarding the legality of the article before making any recommendation.

Selectman Tom Callahan made a motion to vote the board not recommend the article and Brown seconded. However, Selectman Fred Koed said if the board was going to wait for everyone else to present their articles, "Why are we treating them differently?"

Callahan asked why the citizens haven't come before the board before, and Town Manager Mark Haddad said he hadn't scheduled it yet. McMorris, Koed, and Selectman Michael Sullivan opposed taking a vote on the article at this time, and the vote has been deferred for now. Haddad said he will make an appointment with the proponents for them to come before the board with their article.

Counsel.

But the officers' attorney Douglas Louison says the DA's letter vindicates Quigley and the town should call off the hearing.

"In light of the correspondence, if the matter continues to go forward it smacks of bias and bad faith against Quigley," Louison said.

He noted Chief Jackson made incorrect assumptions about Quigley's handling of arrests and "handed arrest reports" to a private investigator and Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris, which led to the charges being brought forward. Louison described the investigator and McMorris as "non-qualified" to judge Quigley's handling of police matters.

The Cohasset Police Department hand delivered to District Attorney William R. Keating's Quincy office on Feb. 9 a package of police reports, fact sheets and narratives on the incidents.

"Quigley has been vindicated by someone who is knowledgeable," Louison said.

"What is left to discuss?" he asked. "With all due respect to Mr. Haddad, he is not in a better position to make a determination than the DA has already done."

Louison said he was also troubled that despite requesting all related documents on the police matter, the correspondence with the DA was not provided by the Town and had to be obtained through a public records request. He said when the hearing resumes, he plans to ask Jackson to testify about the correspondence with the DA.

Local powwow on Greenbush grade crossings is conducted

Pursuant to the Army Corps Hearing of Feb. 11 regarding four-quadrant gates along the proposed Greenbush Line corridor, delegates from the Town of Cohasset met with delegates from the MBTA and railroad administrators March 3 at three grade crossings in Cohasset. These include: Beechwood Street, Pleasant Street and King Street. The conclusion of the Army Corps Hearing was to follow up the Town's request for four-quadrant gates by putting together diagnostic teams to examine these crossings in greater detail and this request resulted in the March 3 site walk.

The Town of Cohasset was represented by: Fire Chief Roger Lincoln. Police Chief Bob Jackson, Carl Sestito of the Cohasset Department of Public Works and Cliff Carlson P. E., traffic engineer consultant to the town with Waterfield Design Group Inc. and Kristina Patterson, the Cohasset-Greenbush Ombudsman.

The MBTA was represented by an independent traffic consultant from Vanasse Hangen Brustlin Inc. of Watertown, Derek P. Weldon Senior Railway Signal Engineer with the MBTA and Dan Breen Chief Engineer of Railroad Operations.

Although no decisions were made, many new questions were raised and some new solutions were put forth.

Also in attendance were members of the Army Corps of Engineers, Federal Railroad Administration and Project Conservator, Epsilon Associates.

A delegate, Eric Flemming, Deputy Program Manger for the Greenbush Project from the MBTA explained how the train was approaching and leaving at each road crossing and Patterson, the Cohasset-Greenbush Ombudsman, presented the town's case for four-quadrant gates at these locations. Following this, the members of the diagnostic team, attending group and abutters discussed the potential problems of safety access for fire and ambulance created by the current crossing designs and posed possible solutions. Other hazards discussed included, aesthetic and wetland impacts in historical and otherwise sensitive districts, general traffic and safety considerations and potential impacts to abutting residences.

Although no decisions were made, many new questions were raised and some new solutions were put forth.

The diagnostic teams for each town planned to meet at the MBTA offices in Weymouth. At this time, the diagnostic teams will reach a consensus with regards to the crossing treatments that will be constructed for Beechwood Street, Pleasant Street and King Street in Cohasset.

information, Fulton felt it was important to look into their past records. In light of that, he requested and had received some confidential financial documents from the companies, which he, Leff, and selectmen wished to review.

The RFP advisory committee is made up of citizens — appointed by selectmen, and can only make a recommendation to the board. However, if members have their way, selectmen will vote either in favor of the Blackrock/Northwest Cohasset LLC development, or the Northland Residential Corporation's The Village at Deer Hill. While the group as a whole said the four finalists all had positive qualities, these were the two that seemed to best meet Cohasset's expectations.

Members of the committee came up with a set of comparison sheets rating how well each development met the criteria it would like to see. Out of a possible 100 points, Northland had a total of 83, Blackrock/Northwest had a total of 77, Abbott Real Estate had a total of 73, and Baran/Keen totaled 72.

One of the most important aspects of the proposals, were the qualifications of the developer and the development team. Northland has many years of experience permitting projects in environmentally sensitive areas, which is extremely important for the Cook Estate project, as it is flanked by wetlands. The company has completed many projects comparable to what it has proposed for the Cook site, which shows it can manage a project of magnitude.

"We've had such good proposals, that's why it's been so hard."
— Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris

Northland has already built The Villages at Brookside, a senior housing community in Bourne, which many advisory committee members visited. However, Martha Horsefield said during her site visit, she did not see the same accommodations made for wheelchairs as she had seen when visiting a Blackrock development.

Blackrock spearheaded the Black Rock Country Club development in Hingham, which Horsefield and other committee members visited and liked. "The quality of Blackrock is very good," said Horsefield, adding she was most impressed with the fact that the doorways were all 36 inches wide, which allows plenty of room to accommodate for wheelchairs.

Northwest, which would work with Blackrock on the Cook development, has permitted and managed many comparable projects as well. However, while both Blackrock and Northwest have experience on their own, this would be the first time the two companies would work together.

Ava Heggie, who is on the RFP advisory committee as well as an abutter to the Cook property said she wanted to like the Abbott project which has plans to build the farthest away from her property, but in the end, she would prefer it if the town went with Northland. While she also liked the Blackrock proposal, she thinks the company "has too much going on right now," as it is still in the process of construction at the Country Club, and there is no way of knowing how that process will unfold.

However, many committee members think because Blackrock is owned by a Cohasset resident, there would be more of an incentive for the company to deliver a quality project. "Because he is a Cohasset man, there would be a sense of pride, and he would be more likely to make sure no mistakes are made," said Roger Pompeo.

On the other hand, Northland would work with the South Shore Housing Partnership in managing the affordable units after construction, which is an organization Selectmen Merle Brown said the town has worked with before. He said he was very impressed with its maintenance schedule because, "It shows they're not waiting until the building falls down," before repairs are made, he said.

The two developments are very comparable in terms of home price, which makes the decision even more difficult. Blackrock would offer sale prices of between $545,000-$650,000 and rentals between $1,200-$1,600 a month, with possible condo fees of $313 a month. Northland said its sale prices would be between $550,000-$650,000 and rentals would be between $1,000-$1250 a month, with condo fees of $280 a month.

Voters at last fall's Special Town Meeting approved packaging a 9-acre town-owned parcel behind Stop & Shop with the adjacent 22-acre Cook Estate, to build senior housing that would include affordable units. The town will conduct simultaneous closings, meaning no town money will be spent on the Cook Estate, valued at $4.5 million. Depending on which developer is selected, the town stands to make from $100,000 to $750,000 on the sale of the town-owned land.

"We've had such good proposals, that's why it's been so hard," said Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris.

The Board of Selectmen will meet tonight at 7 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall. Selectmen Tom Callahan will not be able to attend the meeting and will therefore not cast a vote.

Sharing memories about Herb Towle

Friends and relatives of Herbert Towle are cordially invited to share his memories on Saturday March 20 from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Lightkeeper's Residence, Government Island at Border Street.

Garage dance

There will be a dance at the Garage on Friday, April 2, from 7 to 10 p.m. Everyone from Grades 6 and over is welcome. There will be a door charge of $5 per person. Snacks and refreshments will be sold as well.

Cohasset names its new superintendent

been looking for a candidate with strong budgetary skills, and Walsh's past experience has proven she has exactly that. She counts among her achievements preparing and monitoring a $25 million annual school budget, and leading contract negotiations with six collective bargaining units. She has also coordinated and managed state and federal grants, and organized a town-wide economic summit, she said. Walsh also has experience with renovations, another plus for Cohasset, as she previously designed a school building assistance approved renovation project for an early childhood education center.

"Cohasset has spent the last six years on a plan to reorganize and restore our buildings. We have a brand new ship and we're ready for a new captain to bring us in a new direction," said Martin, adding Walsh is the person the Committee feels is best suited to take over at the helm.

Five candidates were interviewed by the School Committee, which had previously been sifted through by a superintendent screening committee comprised of two School Committee members, two school administrators, three teachers, three parents, one community member, and one student representative. There were 31 total résumés received. The search committee chose Walsh as their favorite candidate as well.

Walsh was the last of the five candidates to be interviewed for the position, and member Mark DeGiacomo said he knew who he would vote for even before the interview was completed. "All five were very good choices," DeGiacomo said, but added halfway into Walsh's interview, "I slipped Pat (Martin) a note that said, 'She's the one'."

Walsh has served as the superintendent in Middleborough since 2000. Prior to that, she served as assistant superintendent for the Silver Lake Regional School District in Kingston. From 1992-1997, she served as the principal of Dedham High School. She was also assistant principal at Hingham High School from 1986-1992, and worked as a teacher, department chair, and assistant principal at Sacred Heart High School in Weymouth from 1979 to 1986.

Middleborough Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh has been offered the superintendent's position in Cohasset.

Walsh is affiliated with many professional organizations, including the American Association of School Administrators, the New England Association of School Superintendents, the Massachusetts Association of School Superintendents, and the New England Association of Schools and Colleges.

Walsh received her bachelor's degree in psychology and history as well as a master's degree in education and certificate of advanced graduate study in school administration from Bridgewater State College. She received her doctoral degree from the University of Massachusetts in 2003.

While all committee members are confident Walsh will be a terrific addition to the Cohasset school system, "It'll be a tough act to follow. There's a very big set of shoes she'll need to step into," said Martin, as Malvey will surely be missed. Walsh will come on board in Cohasset July 1, pending successful contract negotiations.

Pearce completes winter mountaineering expedition

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Doug Pearce recently completed an eight-day mountaineering expedition.

MOUNTAINEERING EXPEDITION

Gould Academy junior Doug Pearce, son of Peter and Ansley Pearce of Cohasset, recently completed an eight-day winter mountaineering expedition in the White Mountains of Maine and New Hampshire as a part of the school's Junior Four Point program.

In groups of eight or nine students, members of Gould's junior class traveled by snowshoe, slept in snow shelters that they built and received extensive instruction in outdoor skills from experienced faculty members as they followed a route through the winter woods, far from the nearest road. The trip also included a 24-hour "solo" experience, during which students spent time away from the group (but were monitored by the faculty). During the last three days of the trip, the students assumed responsibility for directing their group, and were required to navigate, cook, set up shelters and find their way to the designated pick-up location on time.

The Four Point Program allows Gould students to spend a week pursuing an intensive experiential education opportunity outside of the classroom. Each year in early March, each of the four classes embarks on a different adventure as part of this unique program. The program is based in the belief of Gould's faculty and administration that such experiential learning opportunities are not merely accessories to education, but rather, vital components.

'LITTLE SHOP' ON STAGE

The Cohasset Dramatic Club proudly presents "Little Shop of Horrors," a musical by Alan Menken and Howard Ashman (the same team which also created Disney's "Beauty and the Beast," and "Aladdin"). Join us as Seymour Krelborn, a lovable nerd, makes a Faustian deal with "a strange and interesting new plant", only to learn the high price he must pay.) This show is full of laughs and toe-tapping musical numbers and is a great way to spend an evening Parental guidance is suggested due to language and implied/comic book style violence.

All shows are presented at the Cohasset Town Hall auditorium. Show times are Friday and Saturday nights (March 12 &13) at 8 p.m., and Sunday afternoons (March 14) at 2 p.m. Tickets are $12 and are available by calling 781-544-0304, or you can get them at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset or at the door.

COMMENDED STUDENT

Sophomore student, Isabelle Bertolami of 95 South Main St., earned a place on the commended student list at Tabor Academy in Marion. Great work Isabelle, keep it up.

HALL OF FAME

Kim (Barba) Canney was recently selected for induction to the Braintree High School Athletic Hall of Fame. Kim who moved to Cohasset in 1988 grew up in Braintree and was a three-sport athletic star. During her senior year Kim was captain of the volleyball, girls basketball and girls track teams. Kim continued her athletic career at Assumption College where she was twice named MVP of the volleyball team. Currently the Osgood School PSO President, Kim will be honored at an induction ceremony at Braintree High School on May 2 where her plaque will be unveiled and permanently displayed at the high school gymnasium. Kim's children, Julia 9, Evan 6 and her husband Paul are extremely proud of their Hall of Famer as well they should be. This is a wonderful honor Kim, congratulations..

ATTENTION GIRL SCOUTS!

On Sunday April 4, the Cohasset Girl Scouts will sponsor their Mother & Daughter event: the Champions on Ice show at the Fleet Center in Boston. The show begins at 4 p.m., but buses will leave the Deer Hill School promptly at 2:15 p.m. and will return at approximately 7:30 p.m.. For more information, the Girl Scouts should contact their leaders. Permission slips have already been distributed and need to be returned to Laure Becker Kimla (with the $25 per person fee) no later than Monday, March 15. Limited tickets available, don't miss out!

ST. PAT'S DAY PARTY

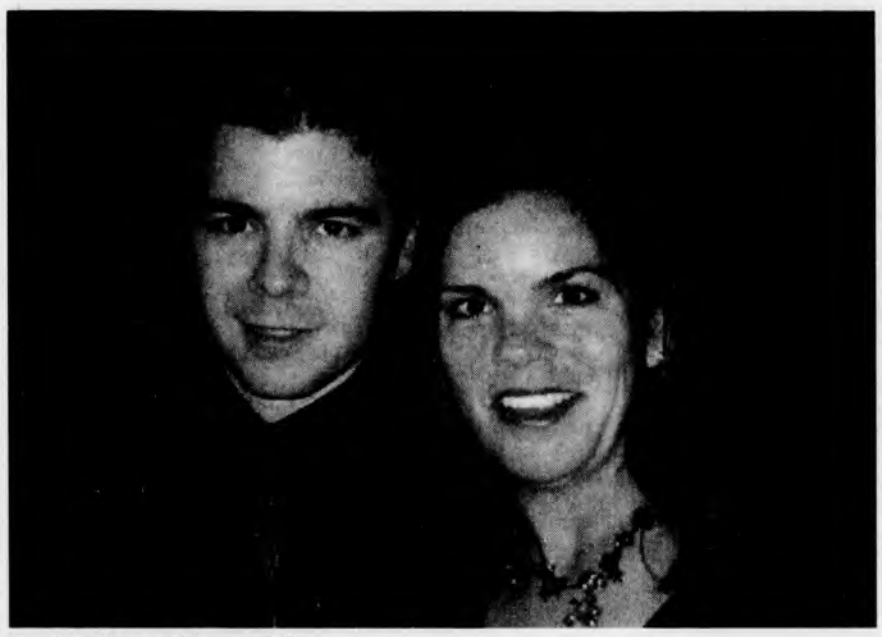
On Saturday, March 20, St. Paul School will hold its second annual St. Patrick's Day Party from 7:30 to 11:30 p.m. This year the event will be held at the Hingham Community Center. The food will be prepared by Just Food Catering Chef Andrew Curley. Music will be by D.J. Sean O'Toole, Irish step dancers, a bagpipe player and singing led by Scott Wahle. Tickets are $20 per person when purchased in advance and $25 at the door the night of the event. See you there!

ART SCHOLARSHIPS

The South Shore Art Center announces the 2004 Art Scholarship Competition for South Shore seniors attending public, private, or parochial schools who will graduate in 2004. Students who have been accepted by a school of fine arts or an accredited institution of higher learning which includes a fine arts curriculum are eligible to apply. The purpose of the awards is to encourage local students to further their art education. Three scholarships will be presented: one for $200, one for $500 and one for $1,000. And an additional $500 scholarship for an art center member who is returning to a field of visual art after an interruption. Portfolios and applications must be submitted on May 5, 9-9; May 6, 9 a.m.-9 p.m., May 7, 10 a.m.-4 p.m.; May 8, 10 a.m.-4 p.m.; and May 9, 12-4 p.m.. Under no circumstances will portfolios be accepted after 4 p.m. on May 9. A panel of artists/educators will review the portfolios and applicants will be notified promptly by mail. Award money will be paid directly to the winners' schools to be applied toward tuition costs.

Awards will be presented during the awards ceremony at the South Shore Art Center Arts Festival on Cohasset Common, June 18. For more information please call the Art Center at 781-383-2787 or e-mail Heather Collins hcollins@ssac.org. with any questions.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY EVENT



As part of its spring lecture series, the Cohasset Historical Society welcomes Penny Myles who will talk about "A Cohasset Woman at Sea: The Story of Drucilla Snow Percival." Penny will tell the story of this courageous 19th century woman who shunned the safety of shore, took her two small children and went with her sea captain husband on his voyages. The program will begin at 7:30 p.m., on Wednesday, March 17, at the Historical Society headquarters in the Pratt Building, 100 South Main St.. All programs are open to the public as well as Society members. There is no charge and light refreshment will be served.

DEAN'S LIST

Cornell University School of Architecture, Art and Planning has named Caitlin E. Stansell to the dean's list for the Fall 2003 semester. Caitlin is a fourth-year student in the College of Architecture and is currently spending a semester studying in Rome, Italy. Congratulations, Caitlin.

That is all for this week. All news and information should be to me no later than Mondays at noon.

'Walkie Talkies' get off on the right foot with new tops

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Almost one year ago, the Council on Elder Affairs teamed up with the Board of Health to begin a walking club for senior citizens, and participation has been growing steadily since then. The group, led by Joe McElroy, gathers at Cohasset Middle High School each week to get some exercise and keep each other motivated, making it a real team effort. But in order to truly feel like part of a team, members needed "matching uniforms," and a bright idea from Ronnie Goodwin of Goodwin Graphics has made that possible.

"He said he wanted to do something for the group and it never occurred to me to make sweatshirts. It was the nicest thing in the world," said McElroy, and Goodwin said he was happy to be a part of the effort.

"I read about Joe in the Mariner and thought it was a great thing. I thought something should be done to encourage it," said Goodwin, adding he recently began his own regimen to get back into shape, and knows how beneficial exercise is. "Walking around a track isn't too glamorous," he added, but maybe by wearing their new team sweatshirts, it will help give another incentive to keep moving.

McElroy is familiar with the discipline it takes to start the habit of regular exercise, as it was at his doctor's request that he began participating in the walking club in the first place. After showing much interest in becoming involved with the walking club, McElroy was offered the position of team leader. Since then, he has been walking down a healthier path of life, while guiding others to do the same, much to the delight of the Board of Health.

"The National Institute of Health used to say you should walk two miles a day, now they've increased it to three miles a day," said Chairman of the Board of Health Steve Bobo. He added, walking is one of the easiest ways to get aerobic exercise and it's something almost everyone can do because of its low impact. "It's a pastime that doesn't hurt your body very much," he said.

"It's a pastime that doesn't hurt your body very much."
— Steve Bobo, Walkie Talkie

Because it is such a low impact activity, it can be done by a wide variety of people. "I am amazed at the diversity of people that walk in Joe's group," said Bobo.

McElroy said currently he has members that range in age up to 87 years old, and two of his regular participants are blind. Because of the many ranges of ability, walking courses are always hazard free.

"Some people walk the track and some people walk inside," he said, adding it depends on the weather and where people feel like walking. Because the group is very flexible, participants can even choose when they would like to participate.

The group meets every Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 3 p.m. at the middle high school, but McElroy said there's no reason the group couldn't walk on Tuesday and Thursday as well. He said the group is very flexible and doesn't take attendance, and those who wish to participate can come as often as every day, or one day a week if they choose.

Members of the "Walkie Talkies" senior citizen walking group, sport their new sweatshirts, donated by Goodwin Graphics. The four in the front are: Carol Barrett, Rosalie Kowalski, Steve Bobo and Virginia Smith. In the back are, Herman Woermer, Jerry Barrett, Kent Smith, Ron Goodwin, David O'Connell and Joe McElroy.

Goodwin said he printed up roughly 36 sweatshirts for the group, which McElroy said should be more than enough — for now. Currently, there are around 20 names on the total list, and because not everyone walks three times a week, there are usually around 10 walkers participating daily. However, with the warm weather just around the corner, he hopes to gain even more participants. While the group meets all winter long, walking the halls of the renovated middle-high school, some people prefer getting outside in the fresh air, which McElroy hopes will boost participation even more.

The sweatshirts donated by Goodwin are navy blue with a white "Walkie Talkie's" emblem on the front. Goodwin said he chose the blue and white because they are the high school's colors as well. The group adopted their name because not only do they get out and get active, there is a social aspect as well, because they talk while they walk.

For more information on the walking club, please contact Joe McElroy at (781) 383-0505.

Veterans Memorial Committee, said he has a list of 168 names to be placed on the Korean War wall and a list is being compiled for the Vietnam wall, which has roughly 200 names thus far. He expects the total count will be around 350 names.

"This war never seems to get the same status," as other wars, said Pratt, adding the Vietnam memorial will be the first time everyone who served in the war has had their name posted in Cohasset.

Because the Vietnam war spanned almost 15 years, many soldiers would put in their time and come home, Pratt said. Due to the heavy rotation of soldiers, Pratt said it has been difficult to compile a reliable set of names. Over the course of the next year, Pratt and the committee will be working diligently and looking for community support to ensure all names are included.

But the project cannot move forward without funding, and Pratt said the committee has already begun thinking of fundraising effort for the coming year. Members of the committee include Pratt, Police Chief Bob Jackson, Commander of the VFW Ralph Perroncello, Commander of the Sons of the Legion Tom Wigmore, David Hassan, Peter Wood, Tom Keating and Brian Keating.

"We will raise a big portion from private donations," said Pratt, adding residents will be able to contribute to the cause by purchasing granite paving bricks which will make up a memorial walkway on the site. He expects that even with extensive fundraising efforts, the committee will have to come before the annual Town Meeting next spring to help make up the difference.

Veterans Memorial Committee member David Hassan compiled this rendering of what the proposed memorial site will look like with the addition of the two new monuments, paying tribute to all who served in the Korean and Vietnam wars.

Pratt said the committee will be also be contacting local groups who might be interested in becoming involved with the project, such as the Rotary Club, Senior Center, and different veterans groups. But even with the anticipated support it will receive, the project will still require Town Meeting approval.

"We need to go to Town Meeting and get the authority to build it, even though it will belong to the town once it is complete," Pratt said. Before that happens, he said various town boards will be contacted to make sure everyone has had the opportunity to provide input on the project and is in agreement about what it will entail.

While the memorial is being planned, the committee has much to keep itself busy as various other projects are currently being worked on around town. Curbing is being installed for Allen Keating Square, located on Summer Street, much like was done at Peter Cogill Square. "Because of the traffic pattern and cars cutting corners," Pratt said, it became necessary to install curbs.

In addition, the new Allen A. Buffum Corner, which was voted on at the fall Special Town Meeting and is located at the intersection of Beechwood and South Main streets, is getting a new sign. Pratt said what is unusual about the memorial site is that Buffum's parents, "Just so happened to live in the house on that corner for 55 years."

But Allen A. Buffum Corner isn't the only memorial in town which will receive a new sign. There are six other World War II memorial sites around town which will all have their signs replaced as well.

Norman Todd Park, located on Beechwood Street, is being spruced up to look more like it did when it was first dedicated in1948. Originally, the park had flowers and plantings and was beautifully landscaped, Pratt said. Over the years, it has been neglected and the committee has plans to "restore it back to the way it was," said Pratt. Already, some overgrown bushes have been removed and planting will begin once the weather warms up.

With all the work being done around town, the committee will also be getting its own web site up and running. Pratt estimates by June of this year, www.cohassetveteransmemorial.com will be ready for a cyber audience. He said many people have been working together very diligently to provide the most information as is possible on the site. By clicking on a soldier's name listed on the page's Honor Roll, site visitors will be able to receive a profile and military information.

The Veterans Memorial Committee currently has around 200 names compiled of those who served during Vietnam, but it expects the total number is closer to 350. The committee needs help to be sure no one is missed and asks that residents contact Glenn Pratt either via e-mail at gpratt@suburbancompanies.com or by mail at Cohasset Veteran's Memorial Committee c/o Glenn Pratt, 482 King Street, Cohasset, MA 02025 if they know of names that have been missed.. In addition to the list currently in progress, the committee would like to add the names of all who served in the Merchant Marine and the Public Health Service.

Alzheimer's support meets on March 24

Attorney Brian Barreira will address the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore on Wednesday. March 24, at 7:30 p.m. at the Hingham Senior Center, 224 Central St., Hingham. His topic will be "Elder Law: What You Need to Know," new state and federal legislation that will affect financial planning for long-term nursing home or in-home care as well as the financial health of the well spouse. It will include information or wills, durable power of attorney, health care proxy and what Medicare and Medicaid do or do not cover. You will hear of issues and problems that can be avoided or reduced by adequate planning. A question and answer session will follow Barreira's presentation. Mr. Berreira specializes in estate planning, probate and elder law with offices in Plymouth and Hingham and is certified elder law attorney.

For more information, call Ruth Scully at 781-740-2426 or JoAnn Mitchell at 781-749-5417 (eve,)

This meeting is free and open to the public. In the event of inclement weather, meeting cancellations will be aired on WJDA 1300 AM.

Proposed land acquisition rich in ecological resources

At Town Meeting, voters will be asked to support the acquisition of the Brass Kettle Brook Conservation area. This area begins several hundred feet from Lily Pond and joins Whitney Thayer Woods, owned and managed by The Trustees of Reservations.

"Acquiring this area is extremely important to protect Lily Pond from the nutrient loading that comes from development," said Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt. "We have tried to protect Lily Pond by limiting uses in the watershed, but now we realize the best way to minimize further degradation to Lily Pond is to keep the land undeveloped."

He noted that the property would be acquired from several sources of funding, including the Community Preservation Fund, the Water Department, the Cohasset Conservation Trust, and The Trustees of Reservations, and would not require any money raised from general taxation.

The Trustees of Reservations has also offered to help the town to manage the property, including clearing existing hiking trails that will connect the Water Department land all the way to the top of Turkey Hill in Hingham. The Trustees also offered to do carry out a preliminary ecological assessment of the animal and plant species and important habitats found in this area.

The following are excerpts from the draft ecological assessment, prepared by J. Andrew Walsh, Southeast Regional Ecologist for the Trustees of Reservations:

"The proposed Brass Kettle Brook Conservation Area is part of a large, forested matrix of mostly open space. The ecological values associated with large, unfragmented forest landscapes, particularly in the context of the rapidly developing South Shore region, cannot be overstated. The interior forest habitat located on the property and its natural surroundings support many important native wildlife species, some of which are rare or declining in abundance. Area-sensitive species (e.g., some Neotropical migrant birds) and species sensitive to disturbance (e.g., vernal pool wildlife) are afforded much needed refuge in large forested landscapes such as that provided by the property and its natural surroundings. Unfragmented forestlands also provide fewer opportunities for invasive (mostly non-native) plants and wildlife to encroach, favoring native plant and wildlife populations. In general, very few non-native plants were observed on the property."

The Natural Heritage Program has identified nearly the entire property as viable rare species habitat (i.e., core habitat). A small section of the property near King Street is classified as "supporting natural landscape", which are naturally vegetated areas that buffer core habitat.

Several high quality plant community types occur on the property including hemlock-pine forest, several patches of mature white pine, and extensive red maple swamp bordering Brass Kettle Brook. The area includes roughly 1300 ft. of Brass Kettle Brook and its associated riparian corridor. At least one vernal pool (a priority natural community) probably occurs on the property, with others probably located within wetlands elsewhere on the site.

In addition to supporting important habitat values, the proposed Brass Kettle Brook Conservation Area provides numerous other free "ecosystem services", most importantly drinking water supply protection for Cohasset residents. The property significantly contributed to the protection of Lily pond, which along with the Aaron River Reservoir is the sole source of drinking water for more than 7,000 residents of the Town of Cohasset.

The proposed Brass Kettle Brook Conservation Area, in its current natural vegetated state, serves as an important buffer to nearby protected open space (Whitney and Thayer Woods, Wompatuck State Park, Charlie Pape Reservation). The property also connects adjacent protected open space, allowing wildlife (and plant) species to disperse and other natural ecosystem process to occur across a large landscape.

Therefore, conversion of the existing, naturally vegetated state of the proposed Brass Kettle Brook Conservation Area will not only compromise many of the property's most important values (e.g., interior forest habitat), but will damage the ecological fabric of surrounding protected open space. In addition, Lily Pond, the existing drinking water supply for many Cohasset residents risks further degradation if the naturally vegetated character of the property is altered (by potential development)."

Friends of the Brass Kettle Brook Conservation Area are meeting every Sunday afternoon at 4p.m. at the First Parish House to save this land from development, and welcome anyone who is interested to join them. Also donations to help purchase these 70 acres are being accepted by the Cohasset Conservation Trust, P.O. Box 314, Cohasset. Donations are fully tax-deductible. Please note that the donation is for BKBC. For more information, please call Debbie Cook 383-6313 or Glenn Pratt 383-0048.

CPC sets stage for large King Street land purchase

Town Meeting to have final say

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The Community Preservation Committee took a big step toward buying some 72 acres off King Street this week with a recommendation to spend $800,000 toward the purchase.

Town Meeting will have the final say on the proposal March 2 when the complex land purchase will be explained to the voters.

Glenn Pratt, a proponent, explained $1.4 million is needed to buy the land that includes 9.6 acres known as the James property which has frontage on King Street, and if sold to a builder could open up the rest of the land to development.

A purchase and sale has been signed for $850,000 for the James parcel; the rest of the money will be used to buy nine other parcels mostly old "wood lots" that have eight different owners.

The purpose of buying the land which is being called the Brass Kettle Conservation Area is to protect it from development and maintain it as open space, which would also help protect the water supply.

The Water Commission is chipping in $400,000 because of the land's proximity to Lily Pond, the town's drinking water supply. Cohasset Land Trust will provide another $100,000 and the Trustees of Reservations will contribute $50,000. The trustees have promised another $50,000 to help maintain the property that includes walking trails.

The Trustees will also hold a conservation restriction on the property. The land abuts Whitney and Thayer Woods, which the Trustees owns and manages.

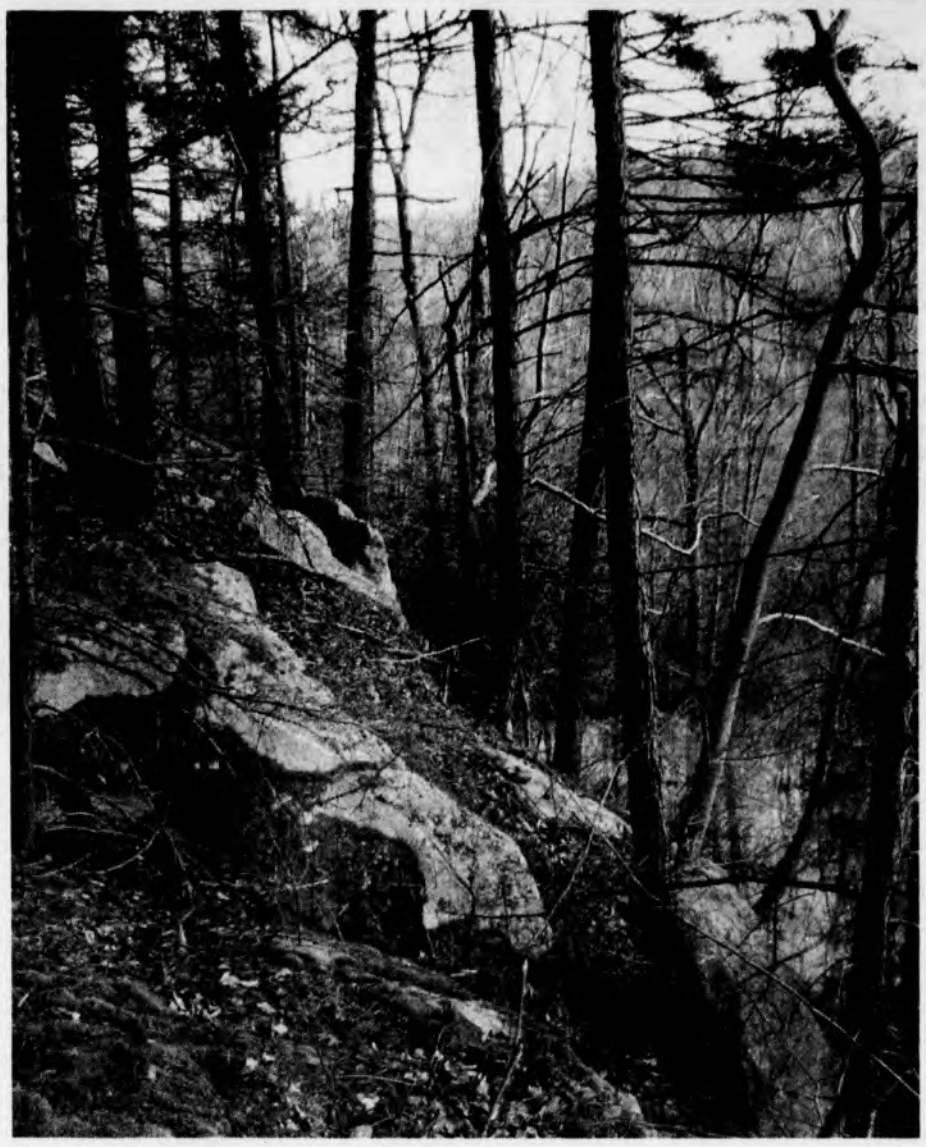
The CPC will recommend borrowing $400,000 and spending $400,000 cash for the property. The debt service will be paid for out of the Community Preservation Fund until the bond is paid off.

The proponents had asked for $900,000 but the CPC thought $800,000 was what the fund could afford to contribute. The proponents may have to raise another $100,000 privately.

Debbie Cook said the land could support upwards of 30 homes – an eventuality the proponents don't want to see come to fruition.

"We're not trying to buy land just for land's sake but to protect the water supply," she explained. "Every survey we've done, the first thing people have said is to protect the water supply…they'd be ticked if we let this go by and let development in there."

CPC member Al Moore said he had no argument with the merits of the project but was concerned about the cost and depleting the community preservation fund.



Pratt explained that apart from the James property, the other landowners were going to agree on a price per acre that would be the same for all. The landowners have formed a sub-committee to come up with a figure.

CPC member Jim Dedes said the property was important because of its "connectivity" to other tracts of open space such as Wompatuck State Park and Thayer & Whitney Woods.

The CPC makes recommendations to Town Meeting, where voters have the final say on whether to fund a particular project using money from the Community Preservation Fund.

Money from the Community Preservation Fund can be spent in three specific areas: open space, affordable housing, and historic preservation. Each year, the Community Preservation Committee must spend or bank 10 percent of its annual revenue on each of those areas.

Money for the fund comes from a 1.5 percent real estate tax surcharge and state matching funds. The town adopted the Community Preservation Act in 2001.

Church closings not the answer

If corporations can be downsized, why not Catholic churches? What comes to mind is a quote from the British philosopher Alfred North Whitehead:
"The corporation hath no soul."

Eighteen Catholic churches on the South Shore, including St. Frances Xavier Cabrini in Scituate and Albert the Great Church in East Weymouth, are under consideration for closure. In Braintree, the scenarios are mind-boggling. Rather than close any of the three churches — St. Clare, St. Thomas More, and St. Francis of Assisi — the recommendation is to combine them in one parish. But, if one church must be closed, though, it should be either St. Clare or St. Thomas More. But if two churches are ordered to shut down, all three should close so that they can be brought together to form one parish in a newly constructed facility.

Each church building is filled with souls, parishioners who are blessed with a very special bond, that of their church family. Closing a church, or merging churches, disrupts this sense of family, with the tragic potential that more vulnerable parishioners such as the elderly may be cut adrift.

We understand the Boston Archdiocese is making a dollars decision, but this decision may lack sense.

The fate of the churches will be in the hands of Archbishop Sean O'Malley, who is expected to announce his decision in May. Last December, the cash-strapped Archdiocese of Boston directed 82 geographical clusters — each made up of four or five churches — to chose which church in their cluster should be considered for closing as Archbishop O'Malley reconfigures the archdiocese to accommodate demographic shifts and make better use of limited money and priests.

Short term, consolidating parishes to compensate for the dwindling number of priests and dwindling pile offering envelopes in the collection plate will subdue the crisis in the Archdiocese.

However, the crisis will again emerge if the underlying problems facing the Catholic Church in Boston are not remedied.

The Rev. Ronald Coyne, pastor of St. Albert the Great Church, firmly believes his church is not addressing the real issues.

"The real questions are, 'Why are people not going to church,' and 'Why are people not becoming priests.' Until we deal with these questions, the archdiocese will continue to close Catholic churches," the Rev. Coyne said.

Do we have the answers to these questions? Surely not. These problems go well beyond the scope of one editorial.

Yet disrupting church ties can only exacerbate these problems.

Perhaps the energy of the church hierarchy should be channeled into reestablishing the trust of the people.

We admire the spirit of the parishioners who are facing the closure or merging of beloved church homes.

The Rev. Coyne has affirmed that he and his parishioners will abide by the decision to be announced by Archbishop Sean O'Malley in about two months.

The voice in Braintree is similar. The Rev. Paul Sughrue, pastor of St. Claire Church, spoke about the upcoming reconfiguration in a March 5 interview with the Forum.

"This is really the ecclesiastical equivalent of corporate downsizing," he said. "It's a very difficult procedure, but the proposal we have presented represents the best we could come up with. We have an obligation, if the archdiocese can't sustain 357 parishes, to make decisions that are objective in order to make parishes smaller yet stronger. Naturally, from my perspective at this time, I think that it would make sense to keep all three of our vibrant churches going for the time being. I believe that they could survive just as they are, but I don't have the bigger picture of the archdiocese's situation in mind."

The process of parish closure is just beginning and is a lengthy one. The release of the cluster configurations is just the first step in a seven-step evaluation.

Now that parishes have done their work, their recommendations will be sent to regional vicars, who will add their comments and sent the information to regional bishops. Next, the bishops will send the material to the Archdiocese's Central Committee, which is composed of laity and priests.

After the Central Committee has made its comments, the information will be forwarded to Archbishop O'Malley for a first reading.

The material will then be sent to the Presbyterial Council for its comments before it goes back to the Archbishop for a final decision.

It is a lengthy and thoughtful process.

For those who might like to attend, the Hingham area Voice of the Faithful will meet Tuesday, March 16, to hear the Rev. James Rafferty, pastor of St. Paul Church, make a presentation on the process being employed throughout the Boston Archdiocese to evaluate all parishes regarding the possibility of reducing the number of operating Catholic churches.

Rafferty will also review the present status of this process. The meeting will be held at St. Paul's School hall at 7:30 p.m. and is open to all.

The Hingham affiliate of Voice of the Faithful is one of nearly 200 affiliates throughout the United States and was established in the summer of 2002. It serves Catholic parishes in Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and Norwell.

Objects to approach on education funding

TO THE EDITOR:

I want to express my appreciation to Rick Flynn for his insider's view of the school budget process. As concerned citizens, we do rely on our town committees to convey the processes behind their decisions in accessible forums like the Mariner.

Still, I find myself increasingly unhappy with the generally accepted approach to education funding and overrides in Cohasset. After each new bit of information I read, I have the sneaking and uncomfortable feeling that I'm once again being "guilted" into paying more taxes to cover a shortfall in planning by the School Committee, the Town Manager, and the Selectmen.

My professional life focused on education. I have a Masters in Special Education and spent years teaching special education in North Carolina and in the Peace Corps. Further, education is the focus of my everyday life. For the past five years I have put aside my teaching career to focus fully on raising our 3 (soon to be 4!) children and to guide them through their early childhood education. My husband, Gabriel, and I moved to Cohasset not just for the peaceful setting but also because of the very high quality of the schools. My top priority is to ensure the best possible education for my children and to allow them all of the opportunities for which Gabriel and I have been so grateful.

I feel like I speak for many parents of Cohasset when I say that we'd all ideally like the schools to have all the money they need — even all the money they want. And I understand that every once in a while the budgeting process won't anticipate perfectly, potentially making an override necessary. However, it's the sustained trend of overrides that worries me. Rick Flynn points out that only 4 of the 8 overrides in the past 10 years have been operational. Isn't 4 too many? People certainly move to Cohasset for the quality of the schools, but this doesn't mean that they don't care about the level or uncertainty of their taxes. They simply don't think to ask about these things because other towns usually manage to stay within budget.

So then what is the solution, you say? Rick Flynn says that there isn't one — that the only responsible choice is an override. When do the overrides end? Do they end with the economic downturn, or when the economy improves do we find ourselves in the situation where school program funding has been disproportionately increased, or new buildings have been planned, and we're on the hook again? To me it's clear that we need to stop the trend of over-spending.

For these reasons, I won't support the override. As a parent and an educator, I wanted to speak out in support of young parents in Cohasset who support our schools but don't approve of this trend. Young parents feel the responsible vote is to vote no, yet they sense they will be wearing a badge of guilt if they dare to oppose the override. The way the override is presented, it's hard to say 'no' without seeming like you're saying 'no' to our schools and our children. We should not be feeling guilty for demanding a balanced budget; yet being told that there is no other way is unacceptable.

We all hope for an improving economy that will solve our funding problems; until then we'll need to find creative solutions. Have we examined all of our cost-cutting options? I am very troubled that we are facing these choices because of our expenditures on school buildings that we cannot afford to operate. However, I understand that these schools have already been built. My hope is that we can find other costs to eliminate that will not jeopardize the quality of our children's fundamental education. Last year several options were suggested involving outside programs and adult education courses that could pick up some of the slack in funding the operational costs for our new school facilities. Have we fully explored each and every one of these to see if they could provide us with some relief? I'm confident that most parents would rather pay a nominal fee for extracurricular activities than see critical teachers being fired because of a shortfall in financial planning. We need to be assured these ideas are addressed and taken into consideration by the School Committee, the Town Manager, or the Selectmen. We should not be left to feel guilty if we don't bail out these groups with the proposed override.

Once we've solved this year's problem, I'd propose that we refocus our priorities on the essential components of education. While I appreciate the increased comfort that our beautiful new facilities provide, as mentioned above, I am disturbed to see our town in the situation of cutting teachers and increasing class size beyond 25 in order to cover the costs of these facilities. Clearly the schools are already built and we are stuck with paying the operating costs. I would just hope that our future focus for educational priorities would be more purely on teaching.

In closing, I'd like to again say thanks to Rick Flynn for caring enough to lay out the School Committee's process in an accessible format — realistically we can't all make it to the Committee meetings, and we do rely on our elected officials to keep us informed. Yet as a concerned parent, a devoted Cohasset resident and an educator, I strongly object to the tax override. I'd request even more information regarding any and all ways that the School Committee could meet the needs of our children without inflicting yet another burden on Cohasset's taxpayers. We all love our schools, and we'd like to see creative thinking that takes away the need for the annual school-funding guilt trip.

Heartfelt thanks to all who helped

LETTER TO EDITOR:

On behalf of the Friends of the Lydia Vigneau Fund, we want the families and businesses of the South Shore to know that we consider ourselves the luckiest people in the world to live in the same community as you.

We are awestruck and continue to be overwhelmed by the generosity, support, and encouragement we received during the past three months as we planned and executed last Friday night's silent and live auction at the Red Lion Inn. The event drew 300 people and raised a remarkable $33,000 for Lydia Vigneau, a three-year-old girl from Hull who is undergoing intensive treatment for leukemia.

To everyone who played a role in the event — from the Red Lion Inn who graciously donated the barn, the food, and wait staff — to Scott Wahle of WBZ-TV 4 who single-handedly cajoled $7,200 from the audience during the live auction — to deejay Jay McLaughlin of Birdsnack Entertainment who provided fabulous music — to the businesses in Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, and Scituate who donated over 150 auction items — and to the teachers and parents of Sandcastles Nursery School who gave of themselves tirelessly, please accept our heartfelt gratitude.

Most importantly, please know that you have played a special role in improving the life of a special little girl and her family. As the ancient Chinese belief states: An invisible red thread connects those who are destined to meet, regardless of time, place, or circumstance. The thread may stretch or tangle, but will never break. May God bless you, thank you again.

Valentines Dance benefit a success

TO THE EDITOR:

The Valentines Fund would like to thank all who helped put together and all who attended the Second Annual Valentines Fund Dance on Feb.28 benefiting the homeless of the greater Boston area through Bread & Jams, Inc. This year we raised over $9,000 and that will assure the clients of the availability of the shelter's services for the next few crucial months.

I would like to especially thank the Atlantica and all its staff for donating their resources, expertise and great food. Also thanks to Goodwin Graphics, Roger Hill, David Hassan, Mark Delaney, Artists For Humanity' Hingham Lumber and so many others on what we gratefully acknowledge as a list too long to complete. The Joe Micarelli trio, the Pemberton Hill Players, and Shaken not Stirred kept the dance floor hopping.

We will again put the fun in funding for the homeless next year, and show that we can have a great party and extend compassion at the same time.

Individually we can't do much about affordable housing in Cohasset, but together we can make an enormous difference in the lives of the homeless around us. Thanks again for the collective effort.

Water, gardens and links to cancer

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Last Saturday, the Water Commission held a public meeting which was not well attended by the public, since I was the only outsider to attend. In their opening remarks, one of the Water Commissioners indicated that they were constantly receiving questions about cancer in relation to the quality of water in Cohasset. Doubtless, cancer groupings exist, but generally, there are just too many variables and too little data to put any credence to the statements used by the media to describe the reports of such events in our towns and cities. So, in my opinion, those who call the water department and complain of the taste of the water and link it to local cancer events are flailing at the wrong horse.

It would be far more appropriate to yell at your lawn care provider, since many of them introduce far more dangerous stuff onto your property than the Water Department does. For example, there are far fewer variables associated with the statistics from the Garden Club of America, which reports "the increase in pesticide use parallels the rise in cancer. The odds of getting breast cancer in 1968 were 1 in 20. In 1994, they were 1 in 8. The risk of canine malignant lymphoma doubles with four or more 2,4-D applications per year on a dog owner's lawn. Estrogenic pesticides are certain insecticides, herbicides and fungicides which interfere with the endocrine system. They can cause cancer and affect fertility. Chlorinated pesticides include fungicides, insecticides, and herbicides; they are neurotoxins that can cause cancer, liver and kidney defects, and birth defects."

Both the Board of Health and the Water commission regularly sample the condition of various elements of our environment. The water quality sampling done by the Water Department is extremely valuable to the Board of Health for planning and allocation of our resources to help fight threats to our health.

The water quality sampling done by the Water Department is extremely valuable to the Board of Health for planning and allocation of our resources to help fight threats to our health.

Four important documents outline the overall plan for ensuring the safety of Cohasset's environment: The Water Department's Surface Water Protection Plan, and the Sewer Department's Facilities Implementation Plan. Embodying elements of both plans are the Board of Health's Townwide Onsite Wastewater Plan and the Townwide Stormwater Management plan. The Board of Health has never had a sufficient budget to implement a more comprehensive form of its plans. Instead, we have cooperated with both the Sewer Department and the Water Department in implementing necessary provisions of their plans for those areas covered by their mandate. In the case of the Water Department, coverage is defined by the Lily Pond and Aaron River Watersheds, together with the Sohier Street and Elms Meadow well fields. The Sewer facilities plan covers the North Cohasset and the Central Sewer District. The rest of the Town is monitored on an 'as needed' basis unless State mandates require specific monitoring such as taking beach and harbor water quality samples. These measures together with specific inspection procedures which cover restaurants, schools, public housing, etc., also State mandated, cover most of the towns concerns.

Wastewater committee

With the potential for substantial growth of population in the Town, the Selectmen appointed a Wastewater Committee to advise on the Town's general wastewater needs. The idea is to find an equitable solution for future wastewater needs and ensure the continued protection of our water and other natural resources. The eventual goal of this committee is to coordinate the provisions of the Water Department's plans with those of the Sewer Commission and the Board of Health so it fits into the Town's Master Plan. As the work of this body goes on, we will be providing updates on its progress.

There is little question that with increased population densities and new chemical compounds entering our environment, the incidence of many ailments is increasing. Peanut allergies, rheumatoid arthritis and many others now reach levels undreamed of in previous decades. But there are also better solutions to these problems. It should be reassuring to know that many important parts of Town government are working collaboratively, to ensure the continued safety and health of our citizens.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Board of Health.

Another look at how Cohasset teachers' salaries measure up

COMMENTARY

ANDREW P. QUIGLEY

School Committeeman Rick Shea's letter to the editor (The problem is not Cohasset's teachers) proves the truth of the axiom that there are lies, damn lies, and statistics.

Mr. Shea incorrectly framed the principal issue facing the Cohasset schools and taxpayers when he wrote: "Let's get one thing straight: Cohasset teachers are not overpaid." That is not what the present debate regarding the school budget deficit is all about. No one is saying that our teachers are overpaid. Rather, what is at issue is the unsustainable rate of growth in the School Department payroll account which has been far exceeding the rate of inflation and which is the primary reason why we are cutting programs for our children, enlarging class size, and in need of a $400,000 override to avoid even more cuts.

Mr. Shea misleads us when he asserts that Cohasset has "below-median teacher salaries." He produced several charts, one of which purports to show that "the average teacher salary" in Cohasset for the current school year ranks seventh relative to other South Shore communities. Mr. Shea believes that the average salary chart is, "Perhaps the most meaningful statistic" when comparing school districts.

However, the average salary chart is actually the least meaningful of all of the charts he produced for this simple reason: Since the other charts he produced show that Cohasset's Step salaries are in line with everyone else's (and we are near the top at the highest Step, a Ph.D. with 13 years of experience), our lower average salary figure simply is a reflection of either (a) a lower percentage of teachers in our system with advanced degrees or (b) a greater number of younger teachers at this period of time in our system relative to other communities or (c) a combination of both. On an apples-to-apples, Step-to-Step comparison, the Cohasset school district is comparable to our neighbors. But if we have more teachers at Step 3, for example, than Community X, which has a higher percentage at Step 10, then obviously our average payroll costs will be lower. In short, Mr. Shea's analysis is an apples-to-oranges comparison and thus totally irrelevant.

Candidate Adrienne MacCarthy also relied on the "average teacher salary" chart for her assertion that for FY 2002, "Cohasset reported the second lowest average teacher salary and is close to 20 percent below Hingham's." Mrs. MacCarthy referred to a chart that is two years old. According to Mrs. MacCarthy, Hingham's average teacher salary in FY 2002 was $54,999. But according to Mr. Shea's figures for FY 2004, Hingham's average teacher salary is $52,012 — a decrease of almost $3000! Does this mean that Hingham is paying its teachers less today than two years ago? Of course not. What these numbers mean is that Hingham, as Cohasset, has seen a large number of older teachers who were at the top Step retire and be replaced with teachers at the entry salary Step, which of course reduces the mythical "average salary" figure.

The only truly relevant statistic when comparing teacher salaries among school districts is to look at the pay levels for the various Steps. Mr. Shea's other chart shows that Cohasset presently has a top salary level of $71,187, which ranks fourth in the area. Hingham, which is second on his chart, has a top salary level of $72,477. However, the statistics which Mr. Shea didn't include in his letter are these:

Hingham teachers will be getting a zero per cent pay raise this year and a 2 percent pay raise next year, while Cohasset's will be getting a 3 percent raise. Thus, Hingham's top salary Step will now become $73,926, while Cohasset's now will jump up to $73,322 which is virtually equal to Hingham's. Comparing apples-to-apples, it is obvious that Cohasset teachers are doing very well in relation to other communities.

The bottom line is that when the School Committee gave out a three-year contract with 3 percent-3.5 percent-3 percent raises (which are on top of the roughly 5-6 percent annual step increases which teachers receive as they move up the ladder), either (a) they failed to take into account the huge payroll increase which would occur by operation of the automatic step increases or (b) they were aware of the problem, but didn't bother to figure out where the money would come from to fund the increase in payroll for the current fiscal year. When the School Committee goes into negotiations for a new contract, it needs to be forward thinking and must analyze the projected payroll for future years before agreeing to pay raises, especially if those raises exceed the inflation rate by more than 50 percent.

I am not opposed to being asked to approve another Prop. 2-1/2 override. I have no anxiety about paying an extra $11.50 per month for the benefit of our children. (The $138 tax increase for the $400,000 override for the typical Cohasset homeowner, of which I am smack in the middle.) However, I do get upset when we are being asked to pay more, but now will be getting less (no middle school sports, larger class sizes, closed gymnasiums) because there apparently was no thought given to the full ramifications of these pay raises.

Andrew P. Quigley lives at 38 Jerusalem Road.

Put brakes on school budget

TO THE EDITOR:

I just finished reading Rick Shea's letter to the editor and his defense of the School Committee's overspending.

I have lived in Cohasset since 1968. My five children attended the Cohasset Schools, K-12. I don't think that the school budget has ever gone down in the years that I've lived in the Town. In fact school spending has almost always been excessive and they have always wanted more. Mr. Shea stated that the committee's budget had been closely reviewed by the Selectmen and the Advisory Committee. However, he never once mentioned the administration portion of the budget and the excess number of personnel managing the schools. The people of Cohasset must speak out and say enough. We were sold a bill of goods regarding the unrestricted and irresponsible spending to renovate our school buildings. Our budgets that are out of control must be reigned in. The Committee has allowed the superintendent to operate without tight controls.

We see budget problems on the State level due to overspending by the legislature and we have had it in our school budgets for years. The School Committee has to be made aware of the feelings of the tax payers that uncontrolled spending is not acceptable. The taxpayers of Cohasset have always supported the needs of the schools. The school committees have not closely monitored the spending. Years ago we approved $60,000 for new windows at the "old" Osgood School (now the library). The superintendent decided not to spend the money on windows and the issue of the windows became a part of the movement for a new school. Did the School Committee explain what had happened, I never heard an explanation, they just kept asking for more money.

We have to elect fiscally responsible people to serve the people and who will answer to the people. Our present committee's budgetary actions are a disgrace. We should attend Town Meeting and vote no on the school budget. We should also, if it comes to the ballot box, vote a resounding no to the override. Enough is enough and we must have responsible budgets in the future.

Ford reflects on the GOP campaign

TO THE EDITOR:

The race for Republican State Committeeman in the Plymouth-Norfolk District was my first time out of the gate, so to speak. Although I lost the election, I was proud to win the towns of Scituate and Marshfield.

I would like to congratulate the winner, John Cafferty. I also think Ronald Wheatley deserves applause for throwing his hat into the ring. The three-way race, along with the contest for Republican State Committeewoman, helped generate excitement in Republican circles in the March 2 primary election.

I feel my campaign was successful on several levels and without the support of many across the eight-town district that would not have been possible. I am grateful for all the encouragement, help, and votes I received.

Since the election, I've been gratified by the number of emails, notes and phone calls from people who connected with my message of tapping into the 2 million unenrolled voters in our state to grow the ranks of Republicans. I have a tremendous amount of energy and enthusiasm to increase the GOP base and restore a two-party system on Beacon Hill. I hope to stay involved with the Republican cause and look forward to working with John Cafferty and Polly Logan.

Remember: It's OK to be a Republican in Massachusetts! In fact the future of our great state depends on reinstating the two-party system here.

Magnanimous efforts are truly appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Recreation Commission would like to express its most sincere gratitude to Boston Form, Inc. and Tom Gruber for volunteer services printing its summer playground program brochure.

Via the donations of expertise, time and effort on our behalf we will be able to distribute our first playground program only, brochure via the March, 2004, tax bills.

Our many thanks go to Boston Form and Mr. Gruber for the magnanimous efforts on The Commission's behalf.

Artist exhibit

Stephanie Roberts' exhibit "Patterns and Pinhole" will be on display at the library through April 30

The exhibit features woven mixed media works and sepia toned pinhole photographs. The woven cyanotype mixed media pieces are first printed from pinhole photography, cut into strips and woven together. Patterns are cut within them as well as painted and sewn. The photographic images reflect a memory or place and the patterning is a metaphor for the cycles in life.

The sepia toned pinhole photographs were taken on a trip to San Miguel Mexico this past October-November during their holidays "All Saints Day" and "The Day of the Dead." Festive gravesites and Ruins in Pozos will be featured. Stephanie has exhibited nationally and regionally and has won many awards and honors, including a residency at the Vermont Studio Center. Her work is included in public and private collections.

O'Grady announces bid for school board

My name is Scott O'Grady, and I am pleased to announce my candidacy for School Committee. I am motivated to run at this time by my deep dissatisfaction with the current school committee's and school administration's approach to decision making. I worry that school committee members do not understand their relationship to the superintendent, and therefore do not adequately represent the community. I will bring to the school committee a respect for vigorous debate as a critical component of the decision making process. I will seek out and encourage divergent and creative approaches to problem solving. And I will fight relentlessly for openness and community input in the proceedings of the committee and the workings of the schools.

My goals are modest, and to an outside observer might seem like truisms. Debate, creativity, and openness are, in fact, the basis of any democratic process. Unfortunately, our school leadership during the tenure of Superintendent Malvey has been more authoritarian than democratic. The school committee has reinforced Malvey's hierarchical management style by discouraging debate and blocking community input. What results is an ironic situation – we propose to educate our children to become critical, responsible and innovative citizens of a democracy by subjecting them to the discipline of an authoritarian regime.

This has to stop. Everyone in the community has an important stake in the schools. Property owners fund the schools through their taxes, and their property values are directly impacted by the quality of the education provided. Parents of school age children commit that which is most precious to them to the care of the schools. School children find their futures shaped in countless ways by their daily experiences at school. These are the constituencies served by the school committee, and the voices to which the school committee must answer in shaping school policy. If you elect me to this position, you can be confident that I will represent the community to the best of my ability, putting the interests of our town, its residents, and its children ahead of the many groups competing for a share of the resources and attention that we invest in maintaining quality schools.

I am a ten-year resident of Cohasset. My philosophy education from the University of Notre Dame, and my years of experience as an outside sales representative, have trained me to be a skillful listener. My subsequent teacher training at Bridgewater State College, and experience as a High School English Teacher in Weymouth and Plymouth, have introduced me to the intricacies of Massachusetts' educational institutions. My three children, one in each of Cohasset's schools, ensure that my interest in the schools is more than academic. If you elect me to the school committee, you can count on me to listen, to understand, and to care about the many issues facing our schools and their impact on our residents and schoolchildren.

I will not raise or spend money on this campaign. If you have money to spend and are interested in our schools, I recommend that you make a contribution to the PSO. This organization funds quality educational experiences for our children, taking pressure off of our school budget for things like field trips and guest presentations.

I look forward to engaging in continuing conversation about the issues facing our schools, and I hope that concerned neighbors will contact me at ogradyscott@comcast.net.

Dormitzer-Harvey on government reforms

At receptions last weekend, selectman candidates Lou Harvey and Ralph Dormitzer criticized current town government and called for some specific reforms. Harvey said he wants to "re-empower" town boards. "I want a vote from the relevant town boards on matters brought before selectmen and I would request that the relevant boards 'advise and consent' to town hires."

Dormitzer wants to see some modifications to the Town Manager Act, now that the town has had several years to live with it. He also charged that the new school buildings are not "green"in that they are energy wasters and that their construction was not "environmentally friendly."

Upcoming receptions for Harvey and Dormitzer:

- March 12, 8-10 p.m., at the home of Lou Harvey, 465 King St. Hosted by Nancy Garrison.
- March 13, 4-6 p.m., at the home of Michael and Barbara Lombardy, 27 Wind Hill Road.
- March 18, 7-9 p.m., at the home of Marsha and Rich Silvia, 445 Beechwood St.

Meet Stuart Ivimey

Stuart Ivimey, candidate for Planning Board, invites all Cohasset residents to a St. Patrick's Day reception at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library (35 Ripley Road) from 6:30 – 8:30 p.m. on Wednesday, March 17. Everyone is invited to meet Ivimey, exchange ideas about Cohasset's future, and learn about his experience and commitment to the town.

Ivimey announced his candidacy in February after collecting 150 signatures on his nomination papers. "I collected the maximum number of signatures in less than a week." Ivimey said. "I was very encouraged by the enthusiastic support for my candidacy."

For more information about Ivimey's candidacy please call him at (781) 383-2604.

Spofford's message gets warm reception

Rob Spofford's message of positive and progressive management for Cohasset was enthusiastically received at a weekend reception hosted by Michelle and Rob Skolnick.

Spofford outlined his action plan for Cohasset, discussing his views on the best way to handle key issues facing the town.

"Campaign rhetoric should not make us feel like Cohasset is a bad place to live," Spofford said. "Instead, we need to recognize the assets we have here and strive to maintain and improve them."

Rob will meet with residents throughout March to discuss their thoughts on Cohasset's most pressing issues as well as future direction. Voters can meet Rob this coming weekend and week at following events:

- March 13, 7 p.m. hosted by Susan and Denny Meikleham, 178 S. Main St.
- March 14, 4-6 p.m. hosted by Pat MacDonald, 80 Wheelwright Farm
- March 18, 7:30 p.m. hosted by Susan and Chuck Jaffe, 10 Wood Way.

Williams welcomes voters to upcoming gatherings

Voters are welcomed to meet Jamie Williams at a coffee and evening reception. A coffee is scheduled for March 12, 9:30 a.m., hosted by Ann Czerkawski, 57 Old Coach Road. An evening reception is planned for March 14, 4-6 p.m., hosted by Paul & Maria Kennedy, 220 Jerusalem Road.

"I am passionate about providing our children with a high quality education which will give them the competitive edge to be successful in today's world," says Williams. "I am meeting so many people who share this same attitude and who want to hear about new ways we can achieve this goal. It's exciting to share my ideas with them."

For more information on gatherings, call Kellie Gaumer, 383-6343 or Christine Woodward, 383-2604. Visit the Committee to Elect Jamie Williams at www.votejamie.org.

Meet MacCarthy at several events

The Committee to Elect Adrienne MacCarthy, a candidate for School Committee, has scheduled several opportunities to meet and share your thoughts with MacCarthy. They are:

- Tuesday, March 16 at the home of Claudia and James McKeon, 30 Schofield Rd., from 1-3 p.m.
- Tuesday, March 23 at the home of Susan and John Donohue, 3 Ledgewood Drive, from 7-9 p.m.
- Thursday, March 25 at the home of Sarah and David Murphy, 90 Old Pasture Rd., from 7-9 p.m.

MacCarthy looks forward to sharing, with you, her knowledge about your public schools and to listen to your thoughts and ideas.

Meet Pat Martin at March 12 coffee

The Committee to Re-Elect Pat Martin to the Cohasset School Committee is announcing some of its upcoming opportunities for voters to meet Pat Martin and learn why supporting her means maintaining excellence in the schools. The Committee will have events throughout the next several weeks and encourages all to attend not just those with children in the schools.

According to Pat Martin "It is important for all citizens in Cohasset, not just parents, to understand why having schools noted for their outstanding achievement is significant to the entire community."

Groups that are interested in hearing about Pat Martin's work on the school committee and her goals for the future are asked to call Laura DeSisto, Hospitality Chair, at 781-383-6989 to schedule a time with Pat.

Hospitality Committee members Debbie Shadd, Alison Moscow, Suzanne Filbey, Judy St. Peter, Sherry Sturino, Mal McCunney and Laura DeSisto invite folks to come meet Pat and have coffee on Friday, March 12, at 10 a.m. at the home of Todd and Laura DeSisto at 50 Surrey Drive.

Commuter boat riders park free until March 31

From now until March 31, parking is free at the Hingham Shipyard for the Hingham Commuter Ferry passengers. The parking area can accommodate 1,500 cars.

Ferry operator, Boston Harbor Cruises invites area residents to take this opportunity to discover, or rediscover, the comfort, convenience and reliability of the Hingham Commuter Ferry.

Hingham Commuter Ferry service offers 21 daily departures from Hingham to Rowes Wharf in Boston. The fare is $6 each way. Monthly and 10-ride discount passes are available. Seniors and children 3-12 ride for half price.

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local senators' votes on five roll calls from the week of March 1-5. There were no roll calls in the House last week.

STRICTER DISCLOSURE OF TOBACO INGREDIENTS (S 2237) — NV

Senate 36-0, gave near final approval to and sent to the House a bill making changes in the current law requiring tobacco companies to disclose to the state the ingredients in their tobacco products. Provisions include requiring the companies to provide an annual report to the state disclosing the list of all added constituents in each brand of cigarettes, snuff or chewing tobacco and the identity and quantity of any known toxic constituents present in each brand. The disclosure information for cigarettes would include the constituents in the mainstream and second-hand smoke. The reports would become public records except for the portion that identifies added ingredients. The bill requires that portion to be protected as a trade secret. The Department of Public Health would review the reports and develop standards for manufacturers to reduce the risks associated with exposure to the ingredients. Supporters said the dangers of tobacco smoking are well known and noted that the bill would strengthen and expand current laws by forcing tobacco companies to disclose ingredients that they have refused to reveal for many years. They argued that the courts have struck down previous legislative attempts to force full disclosure and have sided with the companies' assertions that full disclosure is unconstitutional and would violate trade secrets. They noted that this new version of the bill meets these constitutional objections and would survive court challenges. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill).

$180,000 FOR CONCILIATION AND ARBITRATION (H 4330) — NV

Senate 34-3, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of an additional $180,000 for the operation of the Board of Conciliation and Arbitration. This funding would supplement $514,978 that the Legislature approved for the board in May. The board assists ig negotiating collective bargaining agreements and resolving labor disputes in the public and private sectors through fact-finding, mediation and arbitration. Override supporters said the additional funding is necessary for the continued operation of this board that otherwise will run out of money on May 1 and be forced to close. They noted that the prompt settlement of these disputes helps the economy by saving time, money and jobs. Override opponents said the $514,978 is sufficient to continue to operate this board. They argued that the state is facing up to a $2 billion deficit in the fiscal 2005 budget and should not be overriding the governor's fiscally responsible vetoes. (A "Yea" vote is for the additional $180,000. A "Nay" vote is against the additional $180,000).

$99,925 FOR ALCOHOL AND DRUG ADDICTION RECOVERY PROGRAM (H 4330) — NV

Senate 34-3, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a provision earmarking $99,925 for Latinas y Ninos— a Boston-based residential treatment program focused on Latino women recovering from alcohol and drug addiction. The funds would come from a $33.2 million Department of Public Health (DPH) budget item that provides for the expending of funds for Latinas y Ninos but does not specify a dollar amount. Override supporters said this unique program, including a 32-bed facility for 20 women and 12 children, is the first of its kind in the state to address the bilingual and bicultural needs of Latino women in recovery. They noted the override would restore a $100,000 budget cut for this worthwhile program that helps single women and mothers with children by allowing children to live with their mother at the facility. Override opponents acknowledged that the program may be a worthwhile one but said the Legislature is being irresponsible in continuing to override the governor's vetoes in light of an up to $2 billion fiscal 2005 budget deficit. They argued that these overrides are becoming a power play by Democrats to upstage a Republican governor. In his veto message, Gov. Romney said he vetoed the earmarking because it unnecessarily earmarks the use of funds at the DPH. (A "Yea vote is for earmarking $99,925 for Latinas y Ninos. A "Nay" vote is against the earmarking).

VERY SMALL FIRMS ADVISORY COUNCIL (H 4328) — NV

Senate 34-3, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of the creation of a small business and very small firms advisory council to evaluate the current state system of delivering assistance to small businesses and to make recommendations to improve it. The measure defines a very small firm as one with fewer than 20 employees that is less able to tap traditional sources of business consulting, assistance and finance. Override supporters said this project costs nothing and would help guide these job-creating small businesses through the state's bureaucratic jungle and assist them in leveraging federal funds, private sector support and other grants and loans. Override opponents said the governor knows business better than most people and is already accomplishing these goals through existing agencies and personnel. In his veto message, Gov. Romney said he vetoed the proposal because there is no corresponding funding provided to establish the council. (A "Yea" vote is for the creation of a small business and very small firms advisory council. A "Nay" vote is against it).

$3 MILLION FOR BROWNFIELDS INSURANCE (H 4328) — NV

Senate 35-2, overrode Gov. Romney's $3 million veto reduction (from $6 million to $3 million) in funding for the Brownfield Redevelopment Access to Capital Fund (BRAC). Brownfields are abandoned or underused commercial or industrial sites that are often contaminated and hazardous. A 1998 state program offers financial and other incentives to developers who are willing to take a risk in developing these sites. BRAC subsidizes environmental insurance for developers and lenders involved in the redevelopment of brownfields and protects them by reducing the risk of cost overruns, unanticipated environmental costs and unanticipated environmental liability. The additional funding would supplement $1 million that the Legislature approved for BRAC in May. Override supporters said the additional $3 million is necessary for BRAC to adequately subsidize this insurance that protects developers and lenders. They noted that many developers cannot afford this costly insurance on their own but discover that their loans are turned down by banks that will only provide the loans if the project is backed by this insurance. They argued that these projects stimulate the economy by developing underutilized sites, creating jobs and revitalizing surrounding communities. Override opponents said the program is a good one but argued that the state cannot continue to spend like a drunken sailor. They argued that it is time to stop overriding funding in this supplemental budget from last year and begin to focus on this year's fiscal 2005 budget that is facing up to a $2 billion deficit. In his veto message, Gov. Romney said that he reduced this funding by $3 million in order to preserve limited resources. (A "Yea" vote is for the additional $3 million. A "Nay" vote is against the additional $3 million).

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

With so little affordable housing for working families in town, is Cohasset in danger of becoming a haven just for the rich and therefore, losing all economic diversity?

SELECTMAN/ Merle Brown

While it is clear that affordable housing for working families is important, keeping our senior citizens in Town is just as important. As a Selectman, I have worked extremely hard to provide affordable housing alternatives for Cohasset. Working closely with the Planning Board and the Senior Housing Committee, we were able to develop a Senior Multi-Family Resident Overlay District bylaw that requires affordable housing for seniors. The board is about to award a bid to a developer to build at least 28 affordable housing units on the Cook property. It is initiatives like this that are important to retain Cohasset's economic diversity.

Another bylaw change that will help protect diversity is the Accessory Dwelling Special Permit Bylaw (i.e. In-law apartments). By allowing this type of use, the Town is able to provide residents with the ability to rent portions of their homes, bringing in additional income to remain in Town.

The Local Initiative Program through the Department of Housing and Community Development is another tool the Town cam use to promote affordable housing. This "friendly 40B" process is a way for the Town to develop affordable housing that has the full support of the Town. I will continue to work with the Board of Selectmen and the Planning Board to develop other bylaws and initiatives that create affordable housing so that Cohasset can retain its diversity.

SELECTMAN/ Louis S. Harvey

My unalterable goal in becoming Selectman is to preserve and protect the quality of life in Cohasset. This goal puts the education of our youth as the top priority that is followed closely by ensuring that citizens of our Town can live out their years without the undeserved stress of housing hardships.

The mere availability of affordable housing will not help the quality of life for our residents. If unrestricted, affordable housing will become a magnet that attracts new residents who will compete with our elderly population for a place to live and with our children for a place to learn. To date, the proposals for affordable housing have attracted far more newcomers into Cohasset than current resident seniors or working families.

The real threat to the elderly and working families is the perennially growing tax burden that forces us all to cut our personal expenses while our town government continues to spend on its own priorities.

The concern about becoming a haven for the rich is misplaced when associated with affordable housing. Economic diversity has existed in Cohasset from its early origins and continues today.

We must protect our senior citizens from being squeezed out of their lifelong homes into low-grade facilities. We must preserve the economic structure so that working families can continue to afford living in their town.

SELECTMAN/ Rob Spofford

The erosion of economic diversity is an issue that has concerned me for many years. Historically, Cohasset has been populated by families across the economic spectrum. This diversity attracted my wife's family to Cohasset three generations ago and has attracted many of our current citizens. It is one of the many characteristics that make Cohasset such an appealing place to live.

During the debate on the need for the new and refurbished schools I heard from many citizens concerned about their ability to remain in Cohasset in the face of rising real estate values and taxes. I took their comments and concerns to heart and under my leadership and initiative I brought together a broad spectrum of concerned citizens to explore the formation of a privately funded foundation that would provide financial support to help offset real estate taxes for any Cohasset resident that met certain criteria. I also researched a number of progressive programs currently utilized by various other cities and towns. Based on these early discussions, as Selectman I would propose creating a formal town committee to continue to pursue the kind of housing and tax relief initiatives that would sustain Cohasset's economic diversity. Also, having worked for years with our legislative leaders I feel well positioned to continue to work in promoting tax relief reform packages with Beacon Hill.

While such efforts offer much needed help they will not be a panacea. Only with a concerted commitment to fiscal restraint with regard to our operating budget will we be able to ensure the diversity of our community.

My demonstrated experience in prudently managing Cohasset's tax dollars along with my solution driven management style and deep rooted personal commitment to maintaining diversity within Cohasset will enable me to advance these initiatives for the benefit of us all.

SELECTMAN/ Ralph Dormitzer

Historically Cohasset has been hospitable to diverse groups of people, those who made their living in the town as well as those who commuted to work. And when they retired from work, they could afford to remain here. Today we are losing that economic and cultural diversity because working families and senior citizens can't afford to stay in their homes. Property taxes are making the town unaffordable.

The state mandated that we provide affordable housing via the 40B legislation and the town passed a Senior Overlay District bylaw in 2002 to accommodate senior citizens. These are alternatives for some.

However, if you are a family of two or three kids with a single-family home on a plot of land and can't afford the taxes and mortgage on the house you're living in, the Avalon 40B apartment complex is not going to be an attractive alternative. Going from owning to renting is a stretch, while giving up your land and the space for your kids is pretty unattractive. You're more likely to move to a town where the taxes are lower, housing costs are lower and you can own your home. Moreover, the senior overlay district housing doesn't help you since it is restricted to seniors over age 55.

The bottom line is that unless we get taxes under control, the town is going to lose its economic diversity.

If the override doesn't pass, the School Committee says class sizes are going to jump. How can you convince the baby-boomers that big class sizes are a bad thing for education when they grew up with large classes themselves?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Jamie Williams

Cohasset has done an excellent job keeping class sizes small. The student-teacher ratio has become a quantifiable measurement used to evaluate school districts nationwide. Any increase in this component should be viewed as erosion of our current educational standard, and will impact the community at large. The Cohasset Teachers' Association joins our community in recognizing "that class size is an important consideration in good education."

Small class size is essential in today's classrooms where "differentiated instruction" requires our teachers to educate students of all levels of achievement, learning styles and learning differences to their maximum level of competence. Consistent growth and achievement are required to attain current educational initiatives.

With the advent of MCAS, a new measurable dimension in student achievement was established. This state-imposed mandate was non-existent in the baby boomer school years. Today, it is a requirement for graduation and a measurement that defines the performance of a school district. Attaining high scores and state ranking are a priority. Cohasset has been fortunate to not only have the small class sizes necessary to meet this priority, but also the indispensable assistance of classroom aides to support teachers.

Small class sizes provide our children with a quality education often compared to that of private schools. It gives our students the competitive edge required to be successful in today's world. I cannot convince anyone that large class sizes are a good thing since I believe we must keep them small so that our children will benefit from the same quality education enjoyed by the class of 2004. We must continue to adapt to the changing world, while striving to become the standard by which other districts are measured. To accomplish this I feel it is imperative that we create a master plan, identify and measure quantifiable returns, and prioritize spending.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Pat Martin

Research conducted since the days of baby boomers being in the classroom has shown that the single most predictable measure of student success and achievement is low teacher to student class size ratios. These studies recommend and mount no greater than 22 to 1 for all grades except kindergarten where an 18 to 1 ratio is suggested for safety reasons. These studies take into account the current expectations, mandates, guidelines and frameworks placed upon today's classrooms and students by the state and federal government. One of these particular mandates passed in 1972 was the concept of inclusion put forward by Massachusetts law under chapter 766. This legislation required children with learning, physical, neurological and emotional disabilities to be mainstreamed into the classroom and moved out of their segregated spaces. The overall impact of this change meant teachers needed to instruct to a variety of learning needs. Coupled with advances in learning such as the research of Howard Gardener's Multiple Intelligence's suggested that many different approaches to instruction is necessary in order to ensure each child is taught according to his potential. The most effective way to provide this type of teaching is within a smaller classroom.

The one factor, probably most well known by baby boomers, requiring the need for smaller classrooms, is the expectation of accountability measured through MCAS testing where students, curriculum, classrooms and schools are measured and rated according to their performance. Cohasset has consistently done extremely well with MCAS's which has strengthened Cohasset's reputation for excellence in education. Given the fact that adhering to the research and following the practice of maintaining small class sizes has ultimately proven successful for Cohasset and its students, it is my belief that we must continue to keep class sizes small in order to ensure continued success.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Adrienne MacCarthy

Most of us would agree that times have changed both academically and socially since the school days of the "baby-boomer" generation. To use a phrase from these good old days, we have "come a long way baby" in the fields of science, medicine, technology and education. Progress made in these fields over the past 30 years has brought significant changes in our daily lives. Thirty years ago, we believed smoking was cool and sophisticated, polyester was the fabric of the future and the Japanese couldn't make a reliable car. Were we wrong? In hindsight, yes, but based on the information we had at the time, I would argue otherwise.

As for the field of Education, I remember class sizes approaching and in many cases exceeding 30 students were the norm, textbooks were shared, and classroom participation was limited to responding to the daily attendance roll call. The teachers did a commendable job considering, but we all know of a classmate that was "processed through" despite poor academic performance. In hindsight, this student may have had behavioral issues or some type of learning disability that went unnoticed.

The available research in the education field points to the fact that smaller classes equals a more effective educational experience for all. The smaller classroom size of today is an engaging environment using technology and hands on activities to bring the educational process to life. Our teachers today can and do give individual attention to their students and are better able to gauge their academic abilities and needs. Teachers today are also mandated to teach various abilities simultaneously.

Smaller class sizes are superior. I believe this is more a statement of fact than opinion. We have come a long way, and I see no advantage to rolling back the clock when we know better.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Scott O'Grady

Analyses of research on the effects of reducing class size on student achievement show measurable gains, but differing conclusions. One analysis points out that opinions split on party lines, "with Democrats generally favoring class size reductions and Republicans remaining hostile to them" (Biddle, Berliner 2002). This week's Question implies a generational divide on the issue. I propose that these divisions are largely artificial, a product of a superficial understanding of the larger issue of improving instruction and student achievement, and that the question of class size does not admit of a yes or no answer.

Lower student to teacher ratios in themselves do not guarantee improved achievement. We must take as our goal the maximization of individual instruction, because one on one is the only class size that unequivocally indicates academic success. To the extent that 20 to 1 helps to increase opportunities for teachers to engage students individually, it is an improvement over 30 to 1. Teachers use techniques such as team teaching and cooperative groups to help increase their one on one time with students. Our ongoing program of continuing teacher education addresses these instructional concerns and needs to be continually monitored for effectiveness. Structural changes, like block scheduling and reducing teachers' class loads, help to accommodate productive pedagogical techniques. Incorpo-rating specialists inclusively in the classroom changes ratios, as do pull-out programs for individual instruction.

This is not a for-it or against-it issue. Achievement advances connected to lower class size seem to require improved instruction. Some instructional techniques need to be supported by structural changes that may prove to be expensive. Smaller class size is a positive goal, but we must be careful to lay the groundwork for it to be successful, and not strip other effective programs to pay for it. The conversation must remain ongoing.

Many residents are concerned about "mansionization" in town yet the Planning Board will ask Town Meeting to indefinitely postpone the Large House Site Plan Review article. Where do you stand on that article?

PLANNING BOARD/ Stuart Ivimey

Concern over "mansionization" is well-founded. The Planning Board must recognize that building oversized homes on undersized lots is detrimental to Cohasset's character. We see examples where open space was stripped in order to make way for tightly packed groups of oversized houses. Also, modest size homes on small lots are being demolished in favor of unsightly oversized buildings. The Planning Board should endorse the Large House Site Plan Review ("By-Law") as a remedy to this modern-day problem. I saw mansionization destroy the character of two communities where I previously lived. We should not allow Cohasset to become the third.

The Planning Board improperly focuses on whether this type of development was a problem in the past; instead, its focus should concern Cohasset's future.

Mansionization is clearly one of the top concerns called out in the survey from the Master Plan — 75 percent of residents believe that we should limit house size relative to lot size. Current zoning laws actually allow homes of up to 16,000 square feet on the smallest lots in town without significant oversight. Developers consider Cohasset a "free-town", meaning a town with high property values, few regulations, and which allows construction of mansions almost on top of each other.

The By-Law provides general guidelines, based upon smart growth principles stressing development that is sympathetic to neighbors, community and the environment. The progressive nature of this bylaw encourages dialogue between developers and neighbors; maintains town character; and reduces litigation. The By-Law does not, as many believe, set forth an onerous list of rules that make it impossible to build large homes.

Leading community planners and towns have adopted this guidelines/process based approach for managing growth and resolving disputes. The town of Weston successfully implemented a similar by-law. The Planning Board must exercise leadership on this important issue.

PLANNING BOARD/ Joe Nedrow

I fully support the decision of the Planning Board to ask Town Meeting to indefinitely postpone the "Mansionization" article. I attended the public hearing on this article and observed the dialog between the proponents of the article and members of the Planning Board. It was obvious from the discussion, that the article as drafted, contained language that was ambiguous, subject to misunderstanding, misinterpretation and certainly potential litigation. Those members voting to postpone the article represent almost sixty years of combined experience as Cohasset Planning Board members. It's unfortunate these issues were not identified, discussed, and resolved during the drafting process. To promote passage of any article at Town Meeting without the input and concerns of other boards and committees is not only premature, but a disservice to all our citizens, more so, when the potential of litigation is almost certain. Additionally I am told the Zoning Board of Appeals (which I think represents even more years of combined experience than the Planning Board) have also recommended the article be indefinitely postponed. The current Bylaws, properly interpreted and enforced have the potential to adequately address the Mansionization issue.

I stand firmly behind the Planning Board's Decision to indefinitely postpone this article.

Next week's questions:

For the Planning Board: Do you agree with the planning board's decision to give Cedarmere a special permit when the proposed condominium project didn't get the OK to connect to the town sewer?

For Selectmen: Are rising police and fire overtime costs, and town legal fees a management problem or a fact of life?

For the School Committee: Has the school committee's role diminished under the Education Reform Act?

Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by 5 p.m., Monday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. Items may also be dropped off at Cohasset News on Brook Street. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Monday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

League to host candidates' forum

The Hingham League of Women Voters will hold a forum among Cohasset candidates for local office on Monday, March 22 at the Cohasset Middle High School at 143 Pond St., at 7:30 p.m. The candidates and the public are invited to arrive at 7 p.m., at which time the League will discuss the ground rules with the candidates, and there will be informal mingling.

The LWV of Hingham is a nonpartisan, political organization that encourages citizens to take an informed and active role in government. Cohasset residents are welcome to become members of the Hingham League.

The forum will be conducted in a manner that allows candidates an equal opportunity to inform voters of their position on important issues. The moderator of the forum will be a non-Cohasset resident. The format for candidates for contested office is as follows:

- Opening statement — 2 minutes, each candidate
- Questions from the live audience — each candidate, up to 2 minute answer
- Closing statements — 2 minutes, each candidate

This format will be followed for candidates for Selectman, for School Committee, and for the One Year Term to fill an unexpired term on the Planning Board. The question period will accommodate between two and four questions, depending on the length of the replies. Candidates running unopposed will be invited to make a two-minute statement at the conclusion of the first part of the evening, which should be at 9 p.m.

In the event that only one candidate for a single contested race can appear, the sole candidate cannot participate in the debate according to Federal Election Laws but can make a two-minute statement with the unopposed candidates. The event will be televised on local cable Channel 22.

Anderson a shooting star

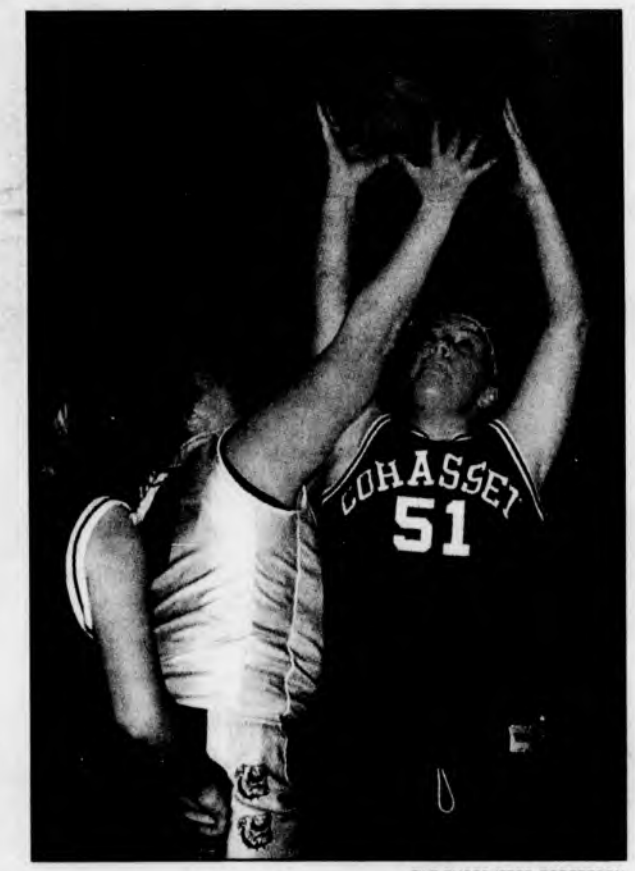
Junior emerged as central figured in lady hoopsters run to postseason

By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

She led the entire league in points per game. She made the All-Star Team. She helped bring the team into the state tournament for the first time since 1988. She's looking to play college basketball. And, believe it or not, Casey Anderson is only a junior.

Casey's enthusiasm for basketball dates back to the first grade when her father introduced her to the game. Her enthusiasm for athletics blossomed as she watched her older brother, Tom, excel in football, hockey and lacrosse. To this day, Casey thrives on the intensity, quick pace and the constant surprise basketball brings to her life

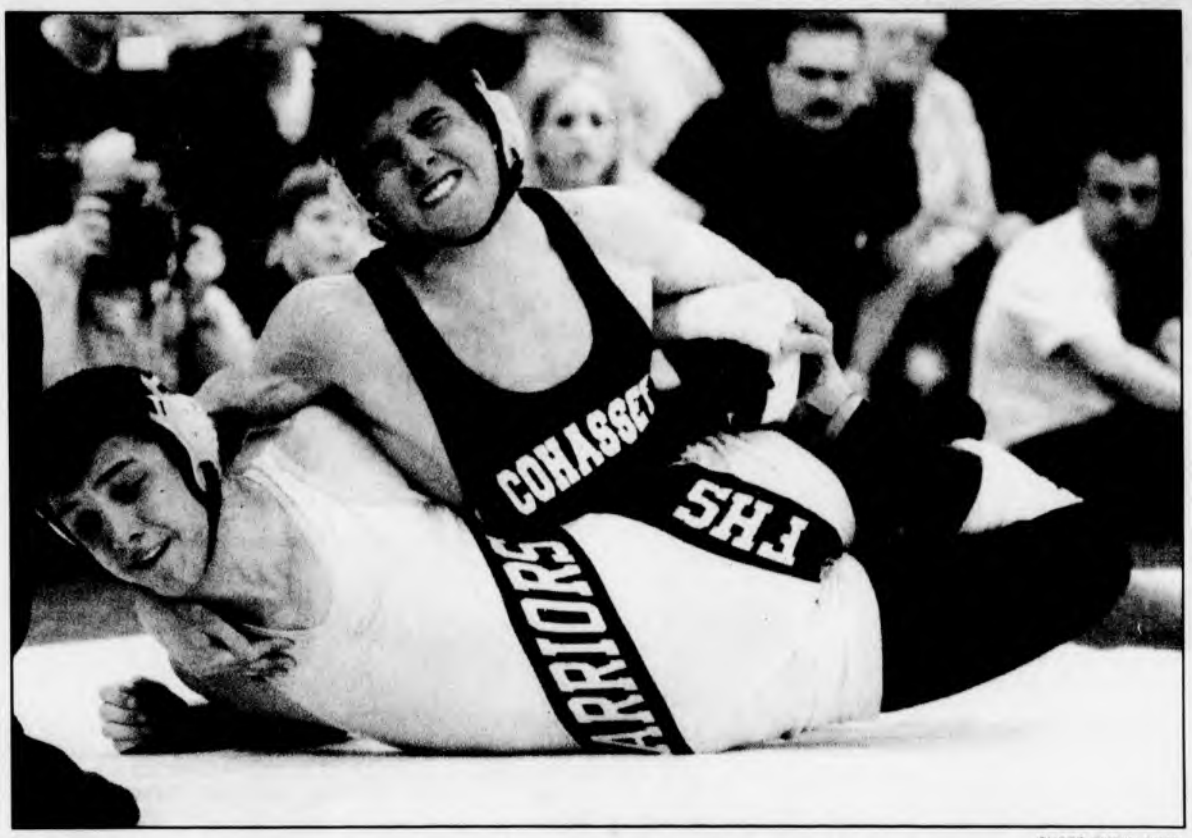
Entering into this past basketball season, however, she had no clue how the team would perform or even who would coach the team. Then along came John Levangie.



"Coach Levangie sparked an entire new energy to the team," said Anderson. "He provided the backbone of our team. The coach taught us how to win and protect our confidence."

When the Skippers shot off with a 4-0 start, the new coach connected with his players. However, the win-loss record worsened. Anderson's attitude and leadership helped pull her teammates through.

"All teams experience these slumps," observed Anderson. "We kept our confidence intact. We pulled through it and rocketed into tourney mode."



The Skippers subsequently clenched a spot in the Div. 3 South Sectional Tournament for the first time in 16 years. Two games into the tourney, however, the Skippers faced their ultimate challenge in a showdown with the Rough Riders of Harwich in Harwich's home gym.

A fitting conclusion

Strazzulla and Baroudi place at New England's, while Kehoe just edged out

By Mike Spellman

It's all a matter of perspective.

The three Cohasset High wrestlers themselves-- senior captain Phil Strazulla and juniors Joe Kehoe and Matt Baroudi—were clearly disappointed not to come out of the New England championships with a little more to show for their efforts, but coach Torin Sweeney could not have been much happier with the way his big three performed.

"A break here or there, and we probably would have had some higher placings, but all three guys wrestled well," appraised Sweeney. "All in all, I'm happy with how we made out at New England's and I'm ecstatic over the way the season went."

Phil Strazzulla, a second year team captain, capped his superb career with a seventh place finish in the 22 wrestler field at 140 pounds, winning two of his four matches.

"I know Phil was a little disappointed he didn't finish higher, but it was a great run for him and a great experience," said Sweeney, who has now completed 21 years of running the CHS wrestling program. "I'm happy for him."

After getting a first round bye, the reward for his second place finish at All-States a week earlier, Strazzulla opened with a 10-8 decision over Matt Phipps, of Manchester West High (N.H.), to advance.

The CHS captain was then pinned by Connecticut All-State champ Brian Crudden, of Reflections on a memorable season

CHS boys accomplished much to be proud of

This year was shaping up to be a lot like last year.

For the Cohasset boys basketball team, that was not a good thing. The 2002-'03 campaign saw a number of tough breaks and losses go against the Skippers on their way to a 7-13 finish.

Thanks to a solid group of seniors and a couple of young players stepping up, this year's team did not repeat their past performance. Despite having records of 2-5, 4-8, and 6-10 at various points in the season, the Skippers made it into the postseason.

There, they lost by 12 to a good Millis squad in the preliminary round. It was a frustrating night offensively for the Skippers, who had some good looks at the basket, but simply could not find the net. Head coach Ron Ford said his players did what they had to do against the Mohawks' box-and-one defense, but just could not get the shots the fall.

Although it was certainly a disappointment to lose, it was a worthwhile experience to make the tournament, considering where the team had to come from to do it.

"Only one team gets to end their season with a win," Ford said. "I'd much rather lose in the tournament than lose in the regular season and not make it at all."

The senior leadership of Chris Bilodeau, Sean Connolly, John Andrade and Dan Tarpey played a huge role in Cohasset's season. Bilodeau led the team in scoring, average over 21 points per game, and also got his fair share of rebounds and assists while playing tough defense.

Connolly, who along with Bilodeau was a four-year varsity player, was the Skippers' top low-post threat and also their leading rebounder. Andrade, who Ford says he remembers as a ball boy when his older brother played for him, was solid at point guard and made some big shots at key moments, particularly in a win over Hull the last week of the season that propelled the team

CHS icemen expected to vie for league crown, playoff glory in '04-'05

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Ben Virga figures the South Shore League title and postseason glory will be there for the taking for his Cohasset High hockey team next winter…if enough of his players truly want it.

"We have a lot of talent in our freshmen and sophomore classes," said Virga, who led the Skippers to a 12-7-3 record in his first season at the helm, including a playoff win over Blue Hills followed by a loss last Tuesday to eventual South Sectional champ Bourne.

"If a good number of those guys lift weights, get bigger and stonger, and play some good caliber off season hockey, we could be a very good team.

"Of course, I can say same about Norwell. They have a lot of underclass talent too, and they could be very good. In the end, it may well come down to who wants it more."

This is not to say the Skippers won't feel the bite of graduation. The caps and gowns claim three league all-stars. Rob Carpenter (12 goals, 20 assists fro a team best 32 points) and defenseman Mike Devine (9 goals, 8 assists), a team tri-captain, were arguably the most talented overall players in the South Shore League this season, and Mike Rasmussen (13 goals, eight assists), another of the captains, was a gritty hard-working forward who led by way of a great example.

"No one player is going to replace a Rob Carpenter or Mike Devine or Mike Rasmussen, but, collectively, I think we have enough talent to take a step up as a team next year," asserted Virga. "We have a lot of players who have shown flashes who I think are quite capable of playing much bigger roles next season."

This sense of confidence begins with the four players who have been named captains: seniors-to-be Ted Straughn, Joe Durkin, Tim Pilczak and Crandon Leahy—all four of whom played key roles this season, the former two up front, the

into the tournament.

Tarpey really came on strong during Cohasset's stretch run, carrying the Skippers at times with his offensive rebounding and big baskets.

"I don't think I've ever had a kid improve over the course of the season like Dan Tarpey did this year," Ford said.

The coach said this group of seniors-- with Bilodeau, Connolly and Andrade as the co-captains-- went a long way in making this a worthwhile season.

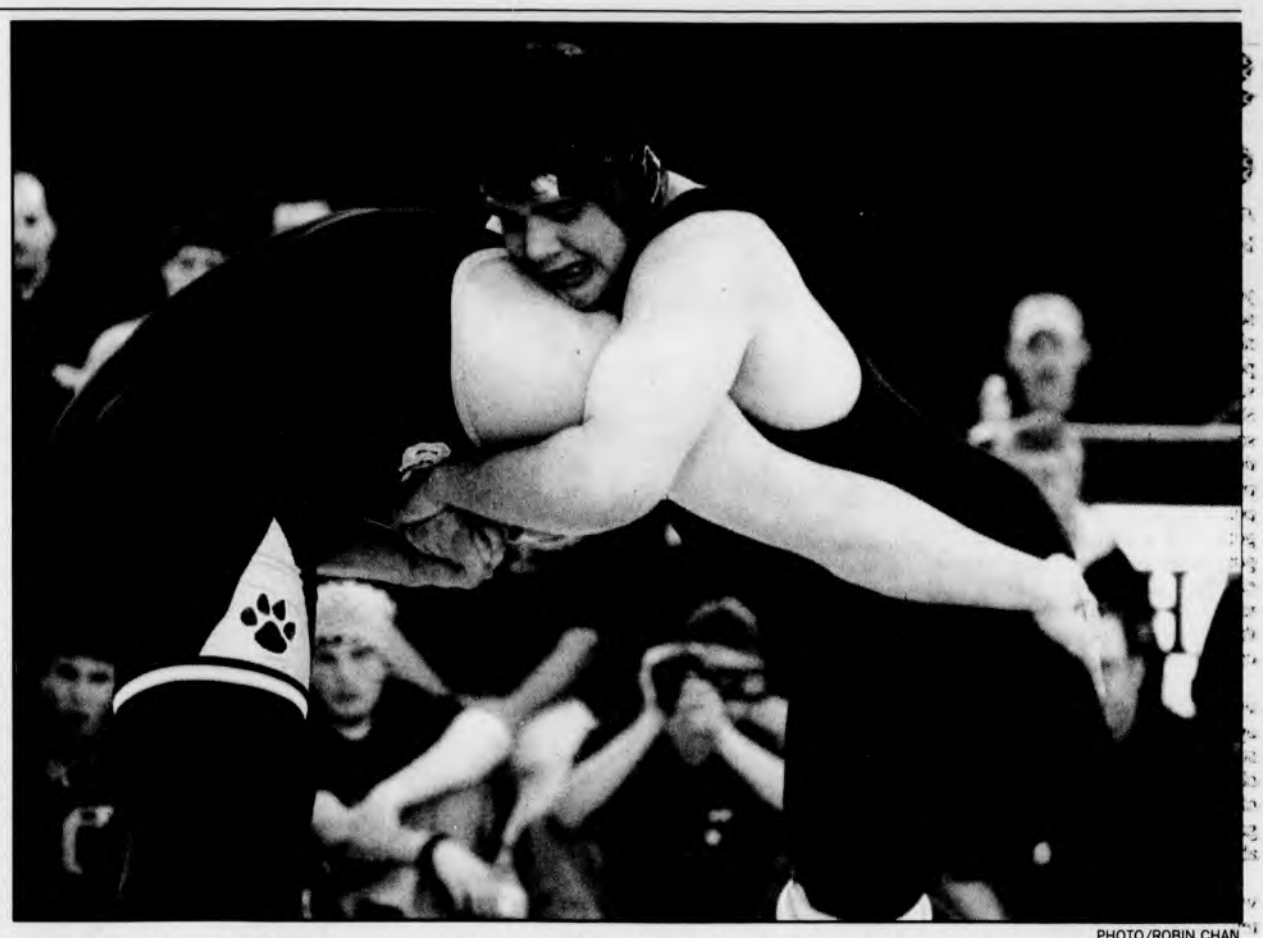
"They showed a lot of great leadership this year," Ford said. "I had a lot of fun coaching this team. They made me want to work as hard as I could."

The character of this team was tested early and often, and they usually passed. The first test came after a game against Canton, in which Cohasset led by seven points with two minutes to go in the second overtime, but wound up losing. Although they lost their next three games, two of them against tournament teams, consecutive wins over Carver and Harwich got the Skippers back on track.

Cohasset played close to .500 ball over the next several games, but a second loss to Abington put the team at 6-10 with five games to go. The Skippers' only realistic hope would be to split a pair of road games at Carver and Archbishop Williams, and then sweep a three-game homestand the last week of the season.

And that is exactly what they did. The win of the year was Feb. 11 against Hull, the Skippers' ninth victory of the season. Led by incredible efforts from Bilodeau and Andrade, Cohasset beat a team that had already defeated them twice earlier in the season. Although they made things interesting in the season finale against Mashpee, the blue and white got the job done and qualified for the tournament.

Looking ahead to next year, the top returning players are guard Trevor Brady and forward Jeff Brown. Brady can play both guard positions and can light it up from behind the arc. Brown, a freshman who was in the starting lineup down the stretch, showed a Rodman-like tenacity on the boards and developed the ability to score as the season wore on.



The 2004-'05 team, which will see players like Chris Ofthsun, John McCarthy and Nick Arment get more playing time, will not have any seniors. Contrary to what most would think, that is something Ford is looking forward to.

"It will be nice to have the same group of kids for two years," he said.

Sean Connolly (#4), the Skippers' top low-post threat and leading rebounder this season, will certainly be missed next season.

FROM WRESTLERS, PAGE 17

Windham High, the fall completed just a heartbeat before the first period buzzer (or just after, depending on who you talk to), with the score tied at 2-2 at the time.

Phil, a four time sectional placer, then gained a measure of revenge over Sandwich's Jameson Sylvia, the lone wrestler who bested him during the regular season, with a decisive win that was not as close as the 8-5 score might indicate, a takedown in the final seconds by Sylvia accounting for two meaningless points.

This win pitted Phil against Vermont state champ Ken Volkner, of Mt. Anthony's, with the latter grappler eking out an 8-7 decision.

"When you get to the final eight or so wrestlers in each class, the difference between them seemed to be an eyelash," appraised Sweeney. "Phil just didn't get that break that could have kept him going."

Still, the coach considered this postseason a fitting ending to a great career for Strazzulla, a two year captain—second place finishes at Sectionals and All States sandwiched around a Div. 3 state title in front of his hometown crowd, all followed by his first ever appearance at New England's.

"Phil is without a doubt one of the best wrestlers I've ever coached," said Sweeney. "He'll be very tough to replace, not just for what he did on the mat, but for his leadership. He's one of the best captains I've ever had and one of the classiest kids I've ever been around."

The best Cohasset performance was turned in by Matt Baroudi. In his second straight trip to New England's, the junior notched four wins and finished fourth at 215 pounds.

After taking fourth at All-States the week before, Baroudi got a tough first round match-up, drawing Timberlane's Zach Zdrada-- ironically, the same wrestler who beat him in the opening round of New England's last year. The match was tied at 2-2 at the end of regulation, but Baroudi flipped Zdrada in OT and got him on his back for the 7-2 win.

Baroudi then stunned Vermont state camp Torey Rich, 3-1, a two point takedown after starting on top in the second period providing the decisive points in this one.

Baroudi then moved onto the semifinals, where he slapped a pin on Cumberland High's (RI) Jim Bridges just before the end of the second period.

The semifinals saw a first ever showdown for Baroudi with three-time defending Massachusetts champ Joe Fendone, of Central Catholic. Baroudi did not get out of the first period of this one, as Fendone finished off his pin 25 seconds before the end of the first period.

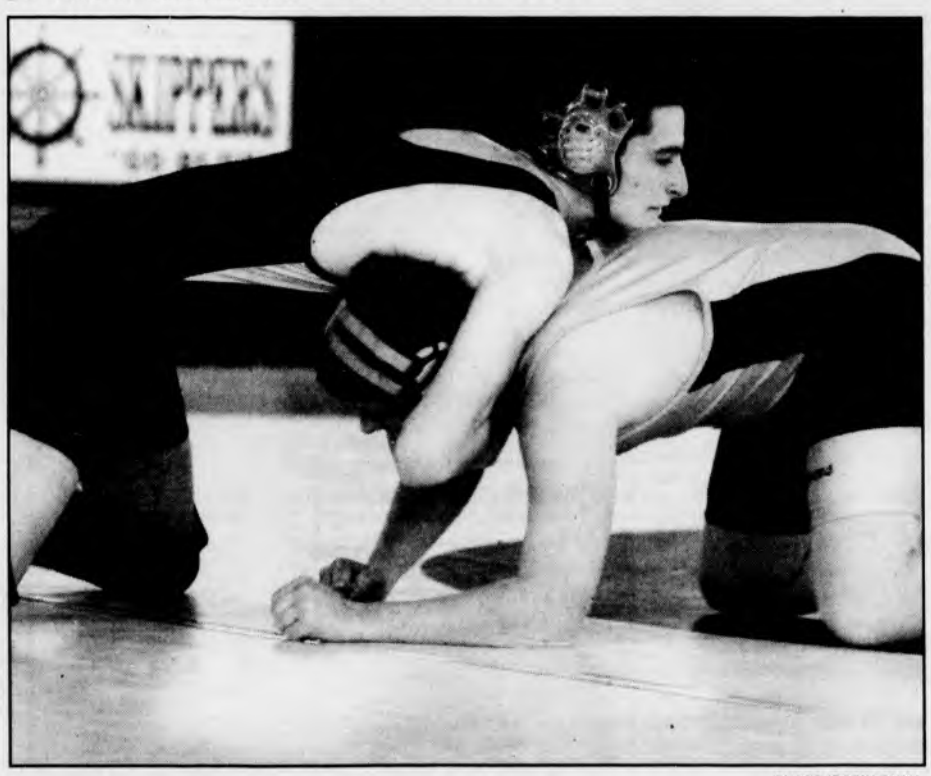
Baroudi showed some toughness by holding on at the end to pull out a 3-2 win over Quabbin's Will Thorng to clinch a finish no lower than fourth.

The CHS junior's day then came full circle, as he dropped a double OT heartbreaker to Zdrada, 2-1, the Timberland wrestler pulling off an escape for the win.

Had Kehoe gotten by his first round match, coach Sweeney feels confident he might also have placed. However, the junior could not recover all the way from a late first period five-point combination by Timberlane's Ty Sullivan in the pigtail opener, and wound up losing 6-5, despite taking the Rhode Island grappler down three times in the match.

"I honestly think Joey was a better wrestler," said Sweeney. "He rode (Sullivan) for like four and a half of the six minutes and had three takedowns, but he just couldn't get that last point. Had he won here, I think he would have had pretty favorable match-ups for the next couple of rounds."

Of course, in the final analysis, to take three wrestlers to New England's, the best CHS total in 11 years, including two juniors, constitutes a great capper to a great season, in Sweeney's mind



"I'm glad Phil was able to get chance to go New England's after four great seasons and, for Matt and Joey, that was a great experience that should only make them hungrier and smarter next year. Really, I'm thrilled."

Kehoe and Baroudi will lead a Cohasset team next winter that is favored to win a third straight league title and could also very well vie for a sectional crown.

Sweeney returns 18 solid wrestlers, with Strazzulla and heavyweight Jake Berger the only two mainstays being lost to graduation.

Juniors Matt Casey (160), Jon Littauer (130) and Kevin Dinsmore (125) and freshman Ryan McClellan (103) all placed at sectionals this season, helping the Skippers to a third place finish, and sophomore Dave McKenna likely would have as well if he had been wrestling at his ideal weight of 130 rather than 135. To this outstanding eight wrestler core, Sweeney expects have at least five other members from what he calls his "best freshmen class in a long, long time" in key roles.

"Next year could legitimately be our year to make a run at Foxboro," said Sweeney, issuing a challenge to the 11-time defending Div. 3 south sectional champions.

Of course, this will be the second year as captain for Straughn, who scored a team best 15 goals to go along with 16 assists to finish a point behind Carpenter in the team scoring race. Even though Straughn was only a junior this season, Virga felt he was the real emotional leader of his team, lavishing praise on both his work ethic and positive nature. In Durkin (six goals, five assists), Pilczak (three goals, eight assists) and Leahy, an excellent stay-at-home defenseman, the coach feels Straughn has three kindred spirits, not to mention comparable talents.

"Standing here right now, I'd be willing to put those four captains against any four captains in the state," said Virga. "These are four character individuals. That quality of leadership I know we're going to get already has me feeling excited about next year."

Another big advantage this team will have in year two of the Virga reign is the ability to hit the ground running…or hit the ice skating, so to speak.

"I think it took this year's players and myself about eight or so games to figure each other out," noted Virga, this assertion supported by a 4-5-3 start and a 7-1 finish to the regular season. "I came in with a new system, and there was an obvious adjustment to that, as well as my style of coaching. Those won't be issues next year.

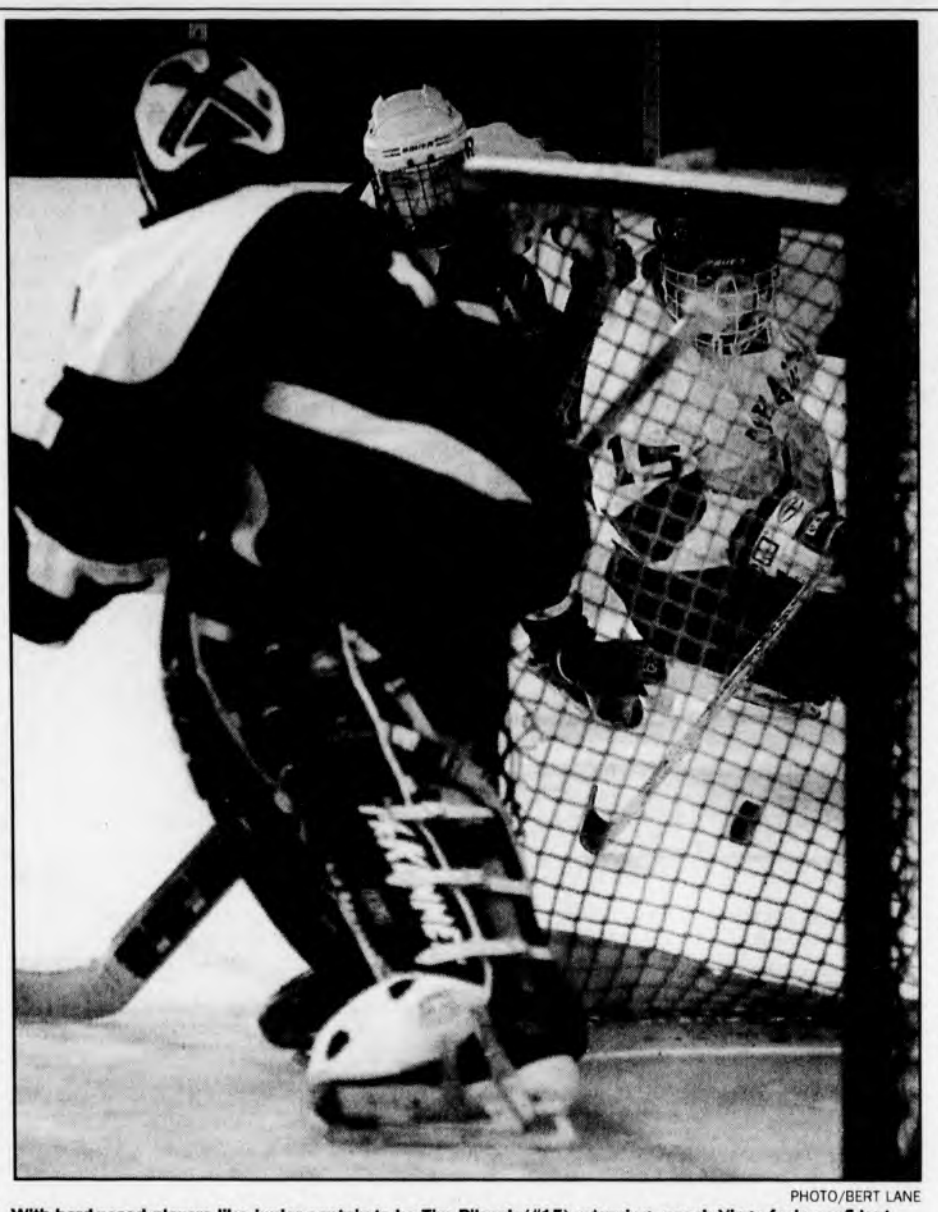
"I've got a lot of players coming back who understand the way things work now, including 15 freshmen and sophomores. I think we have a chance to go on a nice little two or three year run here if we do things the right way."

From the large group of underclassmen, those who saw regular time this season included sophomores Mark Bouchard (10 goals, nine assists), Matt O'Connell (five goals, 13 assists), Brandon Smith, who emerged as another heady stay-at-home blueliner over the second half of the season, and, of course, second year starting goaltender Stefan Parnell.

"Each one of these guys has the potential to get better, and I think they will," said Virga. "Mark's a very good player. Matt had a huge second half and I look for him to continue that. Stefan finished strong. Brandon was an extremely pleasant surprise.

The coach continued on, throwing down the gauntlet: "We've got like an eight or nine player core there we can count on. But that's not enough. We saw what happened in the (playoff) loss to Bourne when Robbie (Carpenter) was playing hurt and then we lost Mike (Rasmussen to a broken wrist) in that game. We just didn't have the depth to stay with a team like Bourne. We need to develop that depth next year, because injuries are a part of the game."

Three players you know the coach is counting on for bigger and better things are forwards Mark Donovan, Ben Libby and Conor Holway, a junior, sophomore and freshman, respectively.



He used these three together as a third line down the stretch to relatively good results, with the trio seeming to compliment one another well: Donovan a hard-working digger, Libby a heady centerman who seemingly lacks only the size needed to be a top flight offensive producer, and Holway an extremely gifted albeit somewhat raw talent.

"I look at Conor as, potentially, another Teddy Straughn," said Virga, paying what in his mind is a huge compliment. "He's big, he can skate, he'll hit anyone and he's got a great shot."

Among the other players the coach figures have a real chance to jump into the mix next year are sophomore Brian Straughn (Ted's brother) and freshmen Austen Lanzillotti, Chris Davis, Corbin Faber, TJ Kennedy and Zach Murray.

Of course, he notes, he would not be surprised to see help come from someone he did not name.

"The players who work hardest to improve will stand out, and they'll get the first chance to play," said Virga.

With hard-nosed players like junior captain-to-be Tim Pilczak (#15) returning, coach Virga feels confident his Skippers can make a run at a league title and postseason glory next winter.

Girls travel basketball report

The Cohasset girls travel basketball teams for grades 5-8 enjoyed a productive weekend with eight wins in eight game games on Saturday and Sunday against Weymouth and Marshfield respectively.

The Blue & White fifth graders won both of their games with relative ease to improve to 8-2 and move into sole possession of third place in the 15-team Old Colony League. On Saturday at Weymouth, Cohasset displayed its most balanced scoring attack of the season in a 25-16 triumph as eight of the Fabulous Fifthers got into the scoring column. Carly Haggerty led the point parade with six points, followed by Emma Musto and Lindsey Davis with four apiece, Rachel Fredey with three, and Emma Quigley, Kate French, Carly Martin, and Olivia Murphy with two points each.

On Sunday afternoon defense was the key to victory in a 14-9 triumph win over Marshfield at the CHS gym. The tight Cohasset 2-3 zone held the visitors, who came into the game tied with Cohasset for third place, scoreless through the entire first half and half of the second half as the Blue & White built up a 14-0 lead. Among those bolstering the staunch Cohasset D were Jen Curley and Colby Smalzel in the front court and Amy Costa in the backcourt. Although the Cohasset offense was not as prolific as in the Weymouth contest, it proved more than enough to get the job done. Musto led the way with six points, Haggerty had five (including two free throws), Fredey hit a free throw, and Logan Pratt iced the Fab Five victory cake with a 12 foot swisher from the side.

The sixth grade squad bounced back from its lone loss of the season last week to Hanover with a pair of wins to improve to a sterling 9-1 on the year. In a run-and-gun, 28-16 win over Weymouth, the Super Sixers showed too much firepower for the host team and controlled the play from the opening tap to the final buzzer. Meredith Kelly displayed her patented baseline power move to lead the Blue & White with six points, while Mimi Mahoney and Lindsay Allard hit for four points each. Allard in particular turned in a rugged game, but bounced back each time despite some very physical play by Weymouth. Lucy Noble contributed to the offensive effort with two key free throws.

On Sunday, the Super Sixers engaged in a defensive battle with Marshfield, but handily prevailed by a 13-6 final score. The stifling, man-to-man defense of Cohasset held the visitors to just two points in the first half. Allard was high scorer with seven points, of which five came on free throws, with Mahoney and Kelly contributing four each.

In contrast to the fifth and sixth graders, the seventh grade team faced its toughest test of the season at Weymouth on Saturday. However, with their unbeaten season on the line, the Seventh Wonders rose to the occasion to pull out a dramatic 21-18 victory. The Blue & White found themselves trailing with 1:20 to play, but their foul shooting practice paid off as Carly Zappolo, Gabriella Flibotte, and Sammi Lehr all tingled the twines from the charity stripe down the stretch to account for Cohasset's final five points in a scintillating 21-18 triumph.

After their hard-earned win Saturday, the Seventh Wonders cruised to a 28-12 win over visiting Marshfield. Tess Calorio led Cohasset with eight points, while Maura Barnes, who always plays hard-nosed defense, once again applied the defensive pressure (and without fouling out!)

The eighth graders completed the weekend sweep for the local teams with wins of 28-20 over Weymouth and 25-16 over Marshfield.

Coastal Stars Youth Hockey sign-ups

The Coastal Stars Youth Hockey organization will be registering players from Marshfield and Cohasset for the 2004/2005 season on the following two dates:

Saturday, March 13th-St. Anthony's Parish Center, Cohasset from 12:00 pm – 4:00 pm.

The 2004/2005 Fee will be $625 if paid in full at registration. Parents should have child's hockey shirt size and desired shirt number. Registration for any new players that are 8 years old and younger will be announced at a future date. For more information see www.coastalstars.com.

EMass Senior softball league seeks players

The Eastern Massachusetts Senior Softball Association ("EMASS") will open its tenth season in May. This is the largest senior softball program in greater Boston, the second largest in New England, and is open to players age 55 and over.

In 2003 there will be over 200 players, organized into two leagues – a twelve team weekend league and a four (possibly six) team Tuesday morning league. The weekend league, which is more competitive, plays games on Saturday mornings (a few Sundays) at fields in Wayland, Framingham, Newton, Cambridge, Canton, Peabody and Tewksbury. The Tuesday morning league, primarily men who are retired, plays in Wayland, with some games possibly in Newton. Players have the option of playing in either the Saturday or Tuesday league or in both.

Each team will play a schedule of 20-30 games starting in May and ending in late August. (Usually two seven inning games are played.) For those who want to play even more, there is an assortment of tournaments and other games both during the regular season and in the fall.

Senior softball has been growing steadily for the past decade. It has long been extremely popular in retirement areas, as Cape Cod, Florida and Arizona, and is becoming more appealing for younger players all over the country, those in their fifties who still love the game but who have slowed a step or two and prefer to compete with people their own age.

Many EMASS players have been active in competitive softball leagues for a long time, while others have returned to the game after "retiring" a number of years ago. Although the competition is serious, the essential goal of the program is for all players to enjoy the experience. Players come from 58 communities all over eastern Massachusetts (and a few from New Hampshire), from Hingham in the south to Salem and Tewksbury in the north, Groton and Marlborough to the west and just about every city and town in-between.

The games are played according to national senior softball rules. A pitch must have a 6' arc and strikes must hit either the plate or a one foot extension behind the plate. There are 11 players in the field, and all players on a team (usually 12-14) are in the batting order. Games are seven innings, with a 12 run mercy rule after 4 fi innings.

EMASS Senior Softball is administered by a commissioner, a board of directors and the managers of the teams. The fee is for the weekend league will be $70 and for the weekday league $40. These fees cover the costs of equipment, uniforms, umpires (for weekend league) and rental of fields.

Every attempt is made to balance the teams in each league. Thus new players will be assigned to teams according to ability, positions to be played and, for the weekend league, openings on teams with home fields close to where they live. Pre-season practices and evaluation sessions are held in April and the games start the first week in May. There are no tryouts. Everyone who wants to play will be assigned to a team.

"We had absolutely nothing to lose," noted Anderson. "Harwich, on the other hand, had a title to defend." Cohasset, unfortunately, lost the game.

Over the entire season Anderson averaged 16.5 points per game with an astounding overall total of 360 points. Casey credits assistant coach Dave Gianferante with "tweaking" her shot.

Casey's close friend and teammate, Nicole Whitney, sees Casey as a "leader on and off the court and a great advice giver."

Teammate Katie James believes Anderson is "one of the most well rounded players in the league."

Between basketball seasons Anderson has carefully planned her sports schedule. She will captain the Cohasset softball squad and play in the highly competitive AAU basketball league.

Only days after this season ended she began thinking about how next year's basketball squad will shake out. With Ashley Faber's graduation the squad will lose a tall and talented individual. Cohasset will also lose a valuable point guard in Jenn Buckley. Casey believes Mia Lieb-Lappen and Lisa Musto will rise to the occasion. She thinks Lacey Richardson and Laura Novak will add depth to the bench.

When asked about arch rival Harwich, Anderson was optimistic. The Cape Cod team will lose eight players to graduation but still retain stars Dee Miller and Amanda Gonzalez. In short, she says Harwich can be beaten.

What happens after she graduates from CHS? Casey plans to attend a division three college, study nursing and continue her basketball. So this time next year Cohasset will say good bye to the second Anderson family star.

But have no fear. Meg Anderson, currently an eighth grader, will probably find her way into Cohasset sports stardom. Like her older sister, Meg can rack up some serious point totals on the court.

COASTAL STARS REPORT

Mite C1

The Coastal Stars Mite C-1's defeated Weymouth this week by a score of 7-1 and thus clinched the Yankee confenrence with a record of 18-1-1. The Stars came out determined and persistent from the opening faceoff. They were aggressive on offensive and provided good protection on defense for Stars goalie Cameron Lamoureux. The first line off the bench, led by Pat Shea, Brendan O'Connell and Tommy Prendergast, with Tucker Ambrose and Brodie Jackisch on defense, grabbed the Stars their first goal in the first shift. They immediately had several good shots from each of the offense but it was Brendan who took a shot from the corner and got past Weymouth for the goal. The second line off the bench with Derek Benson, Justin Fein and Jake Burchill on offense, supported by Charlie Blackington and Adam Benson on defense, followed quickly and again the offense had several good shots on goal but the Weymouth goalie had the edge and all were denied. Cameron, the Stars goalie, was also tested and produced two strong saves. The third line off the bench came out flying. Center Colin MacDonald scored quickly on a breakaway and wingers Colby Comeau and Charley Michalowski followed the lead, digging for every puck and looking out in front for their own shots. Defensemen Kevin Meehan and Bryan Palmieri worked well keeping the puck in the Weymouth zone and keeping the pressure on. The Stars were rewarded with their third goal when Charley took a solid shot that proved too fast and too tough for Weymouth. The Stars earned their next four goals in the same fashion: persistence from the defense keeping the puck in the Weymouth end, good digging in the corner and in front of the net, and lots of shooting. The fourth Stars goal was scored by Tommy Prendergast when he broke up a potential Weymouth run and brought it back and dumped it in. The fifth and sixth goals came from Justin Fein who had several strong shots throughout the game. The seventh goal came from Derek Benson who had his best game of the season. Derek was solid on offense, digging for every puck and taking good, strong shots. His payoff came late in the third when he grabbed a deflected save and pushed it right past Weymouth and in for the goal. This persistence and determination kept Weymouth from having many scoring opportunities, but Stars goalie Cameron Lamoureux was tested and he showed his own determination and skill, stopping the puck all but once, with his best save being a fantastic glove save. Congratulations on a strong, well played game and on a solid season.

Squirt A

The Squirt A's scored early and often for the second week in a row as they make their run for the playoffs. Matt Entwistle (1 goal 1 assist) and Brian Scott (2 goals) registered their first goals of the season and played their typical stingy defensive games, as did Pat Cull and Will Schorle (1 goal). Jeff Durkin (2 goals) got things started just one minute into the contest banging home a one timer on a pretty feed from Alex Evans (3 assists). John Collins (1 goal 4 assists) also assisted on the play as he cycled the puck down low to Evans. Tyler Martina (2 goals 1 assist) played a very strong two way game at center. Other goal scorers in the game were Travers Craven (1 goal 3 assists) and John Meehan (1 goal 1 assist). Connor McLean (2 assists) made a very unselfish play assisting on Matt Entwistle's first goal of the season late in the third period and Ryan Donovan (1 assist) played a very disciplined puck control game. Kevin Kelly played well in net allowing just one goal that came early in the third period with the Stars in complete control.

Coastal Stars Youth Hockey sign-ups

The Coastal Stars Youth Hockey organization will be registering players from Marshfield and Cohasset for the 2004/2005 season on the following two dates:

Saturday, March 13th-St. Anthony's Parish Center, Cohasset from 12:00 pm – 4:00 pm.

The 2004/2005 Fee will be $625 if paid in full at registration. Parents should have child's hockey shirt size and desired shirt number. Registration for any new players that are 8 years old and younger will be announced at a future date. For more information see www.coastalstars.com.

Boston Bruins Alums vs. Coastal Stars coaches

The Boston Bruins Alumni Team will be playing the Coastal Stars Youth Hockey Coaches at Hobomock Arena in Pembroke on Sunday March 14th at 3:15 p.m. The Proceeds from the benefit game will go to support the Ace Bailey Children's Fund and Coastal Stars Youth Hockey. The Ace Bailey Children's Fund was established in memory of former Bruin Garnet "Ace" Bailey, who was aboard United flight 175 on 09/11/01. The proceeds raised by the fund go directly to improve the hospital environment for sick patients at The Floating Hospital for Children. A limited number of tickets will be available in advance and the day of the game. Ticket prices are $8 for adults and $5 for children. Please contact Bill Quackenbush at 781-319-1929 for tickets. There will be Bruins merchandise, photo opportunities and even more excitement on the ice.

SPORTS NOTES

Krupczak wins ODAC 55-meter crown

Brian Krupczak, a junior at Washington and Lee University in Lexington VA, competed in the Old Dominion Athletic Conference (ODAC) indoor track championships on Saturday February 28 at Lynchburg College. Krupczak earned top honors, All-ODAC recognition, with a first place finish in the 55 meter dash with a time of 6.67. Krupczak is a 2001 graduate of Cohasset High School.

April vacation baseball clinic

The South Shore Baseball Camp will provide an April vacation baseball clinic, beginning Tuesday, April 20, through Friday, April 23, at Barnes Field. The clinic runs from noon to 2:30 p.m. and this week-long program will cost $100 per participant. For more information, call the Recreation office at 781-383-4109. Registration forms can be found at the Recreation office, first floor, Town Hall.

Spring wrestling clinic

The Cohasset Recreation Department announces registrations for a spring wrestling clinic will be held at the Deer Hill School gym starting Monday, March 15.

The clinic will meet each Monday and Wednesday from 2:35 to 4:15 p.m. from March 15 through April 14.

The fee for the five-week program meeting for 10 sessions is $60 per wrestler. Phil Strazzuela and Jon Littauer will co-instruct this unique wrestling opportunity for grades 4 through 6.

Registration forms will be sent home via school, or you may register at 2:35 p.m. Monday, March 15, at the Deer Hill School gym. Should your child be staying after school for this program, send a note in to the teacher for the first class Monday, March 15.

Splash into the Summer of 2004

We would like to extend an invitation for applicants! Cohasset Swim Center is accepting applications for Lifeguards for the 2004 summer season. All applicants must be 16 years of age and hold current Lifeguard/CPR/First Aid certifications. Letters of interest should be sent to Attn: Darleen Koetsch, Cohasset Swim Center, P.O. Box 132, Cohasset, MA 02025 or e-mail cohassetswimcenter@comcast.net. Anyone interested in employment and enrolled or planning to enroll in a Lifeguard and/or WSI are encouraged to apply. Employment will depend on successful completion of the course.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse looking for coaches

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is looking for volunteer assistant coaches at all levels for its spring season, with a particular emphasis on finding coaches for its girls teams.

Cohasset currently expects to field at least 10 teams this spring, although the growth in the number of participants could push that number even higher, provided there is adequate coaching available to protect and develop the youngsters involved.

In all, Cohasset will field boys teams at the 14 & Under (7th and 8th grade), 12 & Under (5th & 6th grade) and 10 & Under (3rd and 4th grade) levels, and girls teams at the 14-U and 12-U levels, plus a weekly clinic for girls players in grades 3 and 4.

The shortage of coaches is particularly acute for girls, where the current coaching staffs are so limited that roster sizes may be kept particularly small unless more coaches volunteer.

In the younger boys' age groups, more coaching volunteers could enable the program to add additional teams, keeping roster sizes smaller and more manageable, resulting in a better experience for all kids involved.

Cohasset Youth Lacrosse currently has head coaches at all age levels, but with the probability of more than 300 children spread throughout the program this year, increasing the size of coaching staffs is essential for player development.

Through its nine-year history, the foundation of the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse coaching staff has been volunteers who do not have children on the teams involved. In seeking additional coaches, the program is hoping to get both community volunteers and parents whose children will play. Experience playing or coaching the game is desired, but not necessary; coaches must be able to throw and catch with a lacrosse stick in order to teach others and facilitate drills. Cohasset Youth Lacrosse will pay registration costs to coaching clinics for those individuals interested in participating.

At all but the youngest age levels, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse holds two practices each week, and has games on Sunday afternoon. The youngest boys have one weekly practice, while the girls clinic program will be one weekly 90-minute session. Assistant coaches are not expected to attend every event, although they should be able to appear often enough to be perceived by the players as a team leader.

In addition to coaches, Cohasset Youth Lacrosse is interested in developing referees who can work its games. Interested individuals will be required to take some officiating instruction classes during the winter, and may then be eligible to work games either with a partner or solo in the spring.

For more information or to express your interest in coaching or officiating, call Chuck Jaffe, coordinator of youth lacrosse, at 781-383-9858.

Summer sports school/programs

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer a variety of sports camps during the summer of 2004, designed specifically and individually for boys and girls, ages 4 through 18 years.

South Shore Baseball Club will be held at Milliken Field Monday, June 28 through Friday, July 2, directed by South Shore Baseball Club, Frank Niles. For ages 7-12, 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., $175; ages 5-7, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m., $100.

South Shore Baseball Club (Week 2) to be held at Barnes Little League Complex Monday, Aug. 9 through Friday, Aug. 13, directed by South Shore Baseball Club, Frank Niles. For ages 7-12, 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., $175; ages 5-7, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m., $100.

South Shore Basketball School, ages 8-15, will be held at Cohasset High School Gym Monday, July 12 through Friday, July 16, directed by Coach Ron Ford. Boys and girls ages 8-11, 8:30 to 11:30 a.m., $100; ages 12-15, 12:30 to 3:30 p.m., $100.

Lacrosse: Girls Clinic & Lacrosse: Boys Clinic will be held at Milliken Field, Monday, July 19 through Friday, July 23, directed by Chuck Jaffe. Grades 3-6, 8 to 10 a.m., $85. A few days will run longer than 10 a.m., director will advise.

Wrestling Clinic to be held at Cohasset High School Tuesday, July 27 through Friday, July 30, directed by Torin Sweeney. Grades 7-12, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., $125; grades 3-6, 1 to 2:30 p.m., $55.

Soccer Squirts - South Shore Soccer Camp at Milliken Field Monday, July 28 through Friday, Aug. 1, directed by SSSC, Jon Anderson and Larry Shultz. Soccer ABCs, ages 4 and 5, 8 to 9:30 a.m., $85; 1/2 day program, ages 6 and 7, 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., $125. Price includes ball and camp shirt.

South Shore Soccer Camp at Milliken Field Monday, Aug. 2 through Friday, Aug. 6, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., directed by SSSC, Jon Anderson and Larry Shultz. Boys and girls, ages 8-18, $245 ($20 discount for second child). Price includes a camp shirt.

All programs have individual application forms. To register for any of these programs call the Recreation office at 781-383-4109 or stop by the office, first floor, Town Hall. Programs are limited in size. To insure acceptance into a program, register as soon as possible. Family discounts are available for most programs. Sports camps are scheduled to meet regardless of weather conditions in most cases and should it be necessary to move into the high school, you will be notified at drop-off time.

High school students put their 'spin' on the news

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It takes a lot of hard work and dedication to put out a newspaper, which high school students on the Spinnaker staff are learning at a very young age. Blood, sweat, and tears are required to write stories, design graphics, find advertisers, edit contributing writers, and somehow compile, on deadline, a 44-page, polished publication, worthy to be read by the entire student body. But month after month, no matter what the challenges of the previous issue, the staff keeps coming back for more.

"It is so much more work than we thought it would be," said News Editor Ashley Faber, but it is work the staff seems to thrive on, as the paper has been fully staffed for the past two years. Although the journalism class taught by Christine Berman was offered to both juniors and seniors last year, interest has grown so much that it had to be limited to seniors only. What is even more impressive is the fact that the class was only offered first semester this year, and the paper still lives on, months into second semester.

"You do it because you want to do it," said Ali Earon, editor in chief, who along with the entire spring staff is taking an independent study to make sure the school continues to receive the news, even without a journalism class. "We all enjoy putting the paper together," she said.

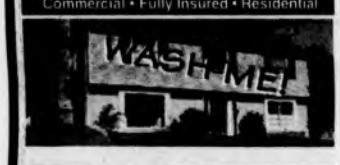
The Spinnaker is roughly 44 pages, and includes news, features, sports, editorials, and a special section for middle school students. The paper has a consistent nautical theme running throughout, with columns titled, the "Scuttlebutt," "Fog Horn," and in the middle school section, "The Surf." The paper comes out four times during the school year, including a Halloween issue, Holiday issue, Valentine's Day issue, and a Senior Salute in May.

Because it is a school newspaper, the Spinnaker follows its own set of rules, which Features Editor Sarah McMorris said gives the staff a great deal of freedom when putting the paper together. "It's up to us how it comes out," she said. But Director of Advertising and Sales Brenna O'Donnell is quick to point out, "It's a privilege to be on the staff, but at the same time it's a lot of responsibility."

The staff said it has had to learn the importance of providing a balance between writing for entertainment and reporting the news. The paper does include gossip, and the staff said it's been hard to decide whether something is funny, or makes fun of someone. "It's a hard line deciding between whether it should be put in or not," said McMorris, adding above all, there has to be consideration for other people's feelings. As Features Editors she, along with Gillian Weber, have had some of the most difficult decisions to make in terms of what is printed. Something that could seem harmless on the computer screen can end up creating chaos in the high school once it's been published. However, Weber said "The most popular papers are when we've had the most controversy."

But it's not just the High School students who see their names in black and white. Middle school students have their own mini-paper called "In the Middle," which is located, conveniently, in the center of the Spinnaker. Kelly Hurley is the editor for the middle school paper, and as a senior in high school, isn't completely familiar with all the ins and outs of those in grades seven and eight. Fortunately, she has family she can rely on, as her younger brother, Pat, is on the middle school staff.

It takes funding to keep the paper going, and the Spinnaker staff said it relies mostly on advertisement sales. O'Donnell said it was very difficult to get advertisers at the beginning of the year, and she, along with Tess Foley and Kristin Howard, had to work hard to get their base started. "The three of us did a lot," said Howard, adding parents of students who have businesses have been very supportive, as well as the Cohasset business community. There are also some advertisements from Hingham and Scituate businesses. However, because it is a school paper, there isn't always someone in the office to answer the phone if an advertiser calls, which can make coordinating schedules difficult. But the Spinnaker still comes out on top as the most profitable student endeavor in school.



After the copy has been proofread and comes back from the printer, the Spinnaker staff does something most newspapers do not — they collate each issue themselves. Standing in a circle of desks, staff members pass papers around until they are ready to be stapled together. Spinnaker staff also include a lollypop with each issue as an added incentive to purchase the paper.

For more information on the Spinnaker, or to order a subscription, please call the Spinnaker office at (781) 383-6100 x253 or Adviser Christine Berman at (781) 383-6100 x256.

WHY CAMP? Camp Gives Kids a World of Good!

There are more options than ever before to keep a child busy during the summer, yet summer camp enrollment remains steady despite economic and world conditions. This phenomenon has left many people to ponder the question, why camp?

Because camp does more than keep a child busy. According to camp directors, parents send their children to camp because of the positive impact it has on youth development. In a national survey of camps accredited by the American Camping Association (ACA), camp directors reported that parents rate the most important benefits of camp to be:

1. Increased self-confidence and self-esteem
2. Providing a safe place
3. Making new friends
4. Offering fun activities

"Camps partner with parents, schools, and the community in raising children, says Bette Bussel, Executive Director of the American Camping Association of New England. "Camp experiences reinforce lessons already learned and they also provide new ones. Attending camp is a very important part of growing up. Every child deserves to benefit from a camp experience!"

According to Robert Ditter, a Boston-based clinical psychologist who specializes in child and adolescent treatment, camp helps build emotional intelligence. He states that camp contributes to the development of three emotionally based competencies - cognitive emotional quotient (EQ), social EQ and emotional EQ - and these competencies cannot be taught in the conventional sense. Rather, they are developed through experience. "Today's camp curriculums," Ditter said, "are designed to teach socialization skills that help a child better cope in the real world."

BUSINESS NOTES

Bernard O'Neil, chef/owner and Sheila O'Neil, owner of Bernard's of Cohasset served their signature dishes at Great Chefs 2004 a fundraising gala to benefit the cardiac programs of Partners Home Care.

Bernard's cooks up success at benefit

When it comes to good food, Bernard's of Cohasset knows how to serve it and when it comes to raising nearly $60,000 to support cardiac care, Bernard's also knows how to help. The restaurant recently joined 18 other restaurants, caterers and bakeries at Great Chefs 2004, a charity event to benefit the cardiac programs and services of Partners Home Care (PHC).

Hosted by the Sheraton Braintree Hotel and sponsored by Roche Brothers Supermarkets, Critical Care Systems, Long's Jewelers, Hill Holliday, Sullivan Tire and American TeleCare, Great Chefs 2004 offered the sold-out crowd an opportunity to sample signature dishes from the area's top chefs while raising funds for the non-profit agency's cardiac services and programs.

Heart disease is the number one diagnosis for home health patients and PHC is a leader in providing sophisticated cardiac care at home — care that was once provided only in a hospital setting. "The technology available to patients at home is amazing," explains Kris Shorey, BSN, from PHC's Cardiac Specialty Team. "We even have some patients awaiting heart transplants who are being kept stable and at home thanks to the technology and care PHC provides."

Dependable Cleaners celebrates 60 years

Dependable Cleaners will offer its customers a "gem" of a New Year. In 2004, the company will celebrate 60 years in business with a spectacular "Diamond Anniversary Promotion." One lucky Grand Prize winner will receive his/her choice of either a "men's 18-carat gold plated, micron-finished genuine diamond Movado museum watch" or a "women's 14-carat gold, 2.25-carat diamond tennis bracelet."

Entry forms can be dropped off at all 17 Dependable Cleaners locations until April 15. The Grand Prize winner will be announced on April 30. In addition, contest participants have the chance to win one of five $60 gift certificates, which will be awarded each month during the promotion. Drawings for these prizes will take place on Feb. 27, March 31 and April 30.

Dependable Cleaners was founded by Don Fawcett, Sr. and his wife, Marion, in 1944 with one shirt laundry. Today, with a continued commitment to quality and service, the company has 17 locations throughout greater Boston and the South Shore. The torch of ownership has been passed down twice through the generations, and with it, the family's commitment to maintaining the highest industry standards. Christa Hagearty has been president of Dependable Cleaners since 1996, when she succeeded her father, Don Fawcett. Hagearty's business philosophies and corporate reinvestment programs have fueled the company's overall growth. Hagearty's dedication to her employees, her customers and the communities she serves is reflected in the increases in same-store sales, the growing number of store locations and employee retention.

"There is no better way to celebrate our Diamond Anniversary than to give away sparkling gifts to our clients," Hagearty said. "We are happy to celebrate this landmark anniversary by giving back to the communities and individuals that support our business."

To print out an entry form or to read more information about the 60-year history of Dependable Cleaners, go to www.DependableCleaners.com. The web site also includes directions to the Dependable Cleaners location nearest you.

Spanish immersion program in Cohasset

Su Escuela is a Cohasset based Spanish language training organization founded by native Spanish speakers residing in the South Shore. Su Escuela has a unique "community" approach in that the programs are custom designed for a particular community and the materials are developed and produced with the aid of experienced Spanish speech therapist professionals.

Children learning at the Spanish immersion center, Su Escuela.

At Su Escuela, the mission is to create an interactive, fun environment in which children learn Spanish naturally.

One's native tongue is not acquired through the structured study of grammar rules and vocabulary lists; instead, children learn their primary language through practical, engaging everyday interactions with their parents and their peers. It is through this exploration, interaction and fun that children learn best.

Su Escuela has recreated an environment that allows children to learn more naturally and to retain those language skills that enable them to speak Spanish fluently. Instead of rote memorization and drills, Su Escuela uses guided interactivity and tutoring to teach. The adventure stories, the variety of learning activities, and the simplified teaching methods are all designed to make learning friendly, interesting and fun, while building a foundation for fluency.

All children are born with an inherent ability to mimic the sounds heard in all languages; when placed in an environment where the sounds of the Spanish language are heard on a regular basis at a young age, children will acquire the ability to reproduce those sounds as well. The instructors are qualified, native Spanish-speaking professionals. Children will acquire not only the correct Spanish syntax, but will speak with a proper accent as well.

Students learn best when they hear and speak Spanish while engaged in diverse, fun activities, which include games and music. The play-based curriculum more closely mimics their initial language learning environment and accelerates their acquisition of Spanish. And, because the environment is play-based and not rigidly structured, like a classroom, different learning styles can be accommodated. Visual, tactile and auditory learners benefit from the variety of ways in which they can interact.

Su Escuela is located at 152 King Street (Rt. 3A) Cohasset , the Director Sandra Baldeón is a Hingham resident born in Chile who believes that every child should benefit from knowing a second language. Please contact Su Escuela at 617-513-8799 or www.suescuela.com for information or appointments.

Now that's Irish! Bia Bistro plans week-long celebration

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

St. Patrick's Day comes but once a year, and Brian Houlihan, owner and chef at Bia Bistro in Cohasset Village, has made plans to celebrate all week long. For one week this month, Houlihan will be changing up his usual Mediterranean bistro fare to offer a menu of gourmet Irish cuisine. With dishes such as Kinsale style seafood stew, herb roasted pheasant, cured and cider glazed pork loin and Guinness braised beef, the menu is a far cry from the stereotypical Irish meal of corned beef and cabbage.

"Ninety-five percent of the time, when I go to a table, the first question I get is, 'You're Irish, how come you can cook?'" Houlihan said. Through his week long celebration, Houlihan hopes to change that assumption and introduce customers to the foods of his homeland, by offering traditional Irish cuisine with his own personal twist.

Houlihan grew up in Ballincollig, Ireland, a suburb of the southeastern city of Cork, which provided the opportunity for him to train under chefs in Kinsale, the gourmet capital of Ireland. After graduating from culinary school in Ireland in 1993, Houlihan moved to the United States, and he has been working as a chef in various Boston area restaurants for the past 10 years. While in training, Houlihan had the opportunity to cook in some of the most prestigious restaurants in Ireland, and he brought those authentic Irish dishes from the tables of Kinsale to the restaurants in the states.

"It's a fishing town a lot like Cohasset and Scituate," said Houlihan of Kinsale, adding its location and his experiences there played a big part in his being able to prepare many seafood dishes.

Brian Houlihan hopes to introduce customers to the foods of his homeland, by offering traditional Irish cuisine with his own personal twist.

Houlihan said he is hoping to include other Irish dishes on the menu, and has asked some Boston area Irish chefs if they would lend their culinary skills for a night or two and join him in the kitchen during the celebration. So far, Gary Hanlon, Executive Chef at Devlin's in Brighton, has agreed to give Houlihan a hand during the week, and Houlihan is waiting to hear from two other Irish chefs.

"St. Patrick's day is very busy for these guys," Houlihan said, but he's keeping his fingers crossed.

While Houlihan said he has been wanting to offer a week of Irish cuisine for years, there hasn't been a time in his career where it has been feasible. Now that he owns his own restaurant, he has more flexibility, and he decided the time was right.

The St. Patrick's Day celebration will kick off Tuesday, March 16, the day before St. Patrick's Day, and will continue until Sunday, March 21. After hearing about Scituate's ever-growing St. Patrick's Day parade, Houlihan thought his celebration would coincide perfectly. Houlihan will also be opening his restaurant early on Sunday, to offer both lunch and dinner at the conclusion of the parade.

Changes could be made to Houlihan's menu throughout the course of the week, "Depending on what I can get my hands on," he said. He has been working on making contacts companies that import authentic Irish cheeses and meats, and is waiting to see what he will be able to purchase and receive in time. "Because of customs, we might not be able to get Irish lamb," he said, but added he may be able to get New Zealand lamb instead, which is very similar. However, one of the most important contacts Houlihan has made so far is calling his mother in Ireland to get her recipe for rhubarb tart.

The word "bia" means food in Gaelic, and Houlihan said has every intention of demonstrating what the evolution of Irish cuisine has become through his special Irish menu. Menu items during St. Patrick's Day week include:

•Starters: Finnan Haddie and potato pie, oysters and Guinness, chicken liver paté, and traditional colcannon with boiled ham

•Entrees: mixed grill of lamb, pan roasted turbot, and Clifford's gourmet Irish lamb stew

•Dessert: stone fruit crepe with wild honey and crème, bailey's Irish cheesecake, oatmeal crusted apple crumble, and his mother's rhubarb tart with custard.

Houlihan said this celebration will hopefully begin what will become a monthly tradition, as he plans to begin offering special menus at least once a month. Upcoming events will be posted on the Bia Bistro web site.

Bia Bistro is located at 35 South Main Street in Cohasset Village. Houlihan's St. Patrick's Day celebration will run from Tuesday March 16 to Sunday March 21. For more information or to make reservations, please call (781) 383-0464 or visit their web site at www.biabistro.com.

Mass. Architectural design gone to dogs

On March 21, designer doghouses conceived and built by Massachusetts architectural firms will be auctioned off to the highest bidder at Barkitecture 2004, a fundraiser for Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

The town of Cohasset, is home to some of the grandest of Massachusetts' mansions, but for one afternoon in the dreary days of March, it will also be home to 20 of the most palatial doghouses New England has ever seen. From 1 to 5 p.m., on March 21, Cohasset's Red Lion Inn will host a live auction of designer doghouses built and conceived by Boston-area architects to raise funds for Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

The event will also feature a cocktail reception and silent auction featuring the work of area artists, craftspeople and merchants.

Tickets are limited, and are $25 in advance and $30 at the door. For information, call 1-877-378-1195 or go to www.hsar.org <http://www.hsar.org/> for details.

Barkitecture is sponsored by Roberts Animal Hospital, Animal Care Center of Marshfield, Abington Savings Bank, McKee's Moving and Storage, and Petco and the Petco Foundation.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is a non-profit organization staffed entirely by volunteers, that rescues and places homeless animals, assists in the care and control of the local feral cat population, and raises funds to construct an animal shelter for the town of Hull. For information on HSAR, call 1-877-378-1195.

History symposium celebrates South Shore

The Back Roads of the South Shore, the collaborative organization that last year offered the first-ever seven-town, 13-site common free open house day in the history of the region now announces the organization of the first-ever South Shore History Symposium, to be held in the Mayflower Room of the Radisson Hotel in Plymouth, on Saturday, April 17, from 8 a.m.-3:45 p.m..

The symposium, titled "Views Fore and Aft," focuses on the region's maritime history, in anticipation of June's Maritime Heritage Trail Open House, which will include eight towns and nine maritime history sites. Five presentations – by David Ball and Fred Freitas of the Scituate Historical Society, Patrick Browne of the Duxbury Rural and Historical Society, John J. Galluzzo of the United States Lifesaving Service Heritage Association, Ben Cowie-Haskell of the Stellwagen Bank National Marine Sanctuary, and more — will explore the region's shipbuilders and maritime traders, shipwrecks, lifesavers and more. Haskell, the keynote speaker, will update all on the most recent underwater research of the steamer Portland, lost in the gale of the same name in 1898.

The $35 admission price for the symposium includes lunch and coffee and snacks throughout the day. All Proceeds go to support future free programming of the Back Roads of the South Shore. Plymouth County historical organizations are invited to join in the day's events by bringing brochures and other handouts to share with the public.

For more information, or to make reservations, contact John Galluzzo at 781-724-7131 or Patrick Browne at 781-934-6106.

If you want to get to know a rug, rub its back.

DOES IT FEEL TOO SMOOTH, TOO STIFF? IT'S PROBABLY A MACHINE-MADE RUG.

SOME EXQUISITE RUGS HAVE AS MANY AS 800 KNOTS PER INCH.

MOST RUGS ARE MADE OF WOOL. MORE ELABORATE DESIGNS ARE OFTEN WOVEN FROM SILK. WE HAVE SOME THAT COMBINE WOOL AND SILK.

WE HAVE THE WIDEST SELECTION AND BEST VALUE OF ANYONE IN NEW ENGLAND, LIKE THIS RUG FROM THE MAHAL COLLECTION BY SAMAD (M-101 RED/RED).

If it feels a little too smooth, if you can't feel the knots, if it feels a little stiff, then it's probably a machine-made rug. There's nothing wrong with a rug made by a machine as long as you aren't paying like it was a rug made by hand. The same design executed by a machine should cost a third of what a hand-made costs. Hand-knotted rugs are guaranteed to out-live you. A machine-made rug has the life expectancy of five to ten years. Many people buy hand-made rugs for a living room, dining room, or entrance hall. They put the hand-mades where there's a lot of traffic. They put the machine-mades where there's less traffic. That's pretty much the rule.

If you're really serious, measure an inch (the tip of your index finger in length) and count the number of knots. More knots per inch are another measure of quality. There are some amazingly elaborate works of art that have as many as 800 knots per inch. (We have some in our store.)

A simpler design might have around 80 knots per inch. The knottier rugs are often made of silk. The simpler ones are generally made of wool. We have some outstanding rugs that are a combination of wool and silk, basically the best of both worlds. At our store, Dover Rug, we can show you everything from an investment grade rug to a beautiful broadloom carpet. We have the widest selection and the best value of anyone in New England. Plus, on our hand-made rugs, we offer a lifetime (That's lifetime) exchange policy.

So, another way to make sure you're getting what you paid when you buy a rug is to turn the corner and look for our label.

IT'S HAPPENING

Kitchen tour to offer a feast for the senses

Designer fabrics, lush floral arrangements and table settings befitting the most elegant and formal of evenings to the most comfortable and relaxing of family breakfasts. Hors d'oeurves, finger sandwiches, pastries and sweets from the best-loved South Shore caterers. It's all part of the South Shore Community Center's Kitchen Tour 2004, Friday, April 2, from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

As individual as their owners, each of this year's six Cohasset kitchens reflects the vast and varied options available to today's homeowner when planning or decorating a kitchen as well as the individual style and flare of today's hostess.

Advanced tickets may be purchased at the Center or by calling 781-383-0088. Tickets are $25 and $30 the day of the tour. Ticket sales are limited, so early purchase is suggested.

Funds from the Kitchen Tour 2004 will be used to support the programs of the South Shore Community Center. The Center, at 3 North Main St., Cohasset is a non-profit organization dedicated to a wide range of educational and enrichment programs for infants to seniors.

For more information about the Kitchen Tour or for a free course schedule call 781-383-0088.

Book discussion on 'Da Vinci Code'

Come to at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave., starting March 17at 7:30 p.m. for the first of our three-part discussion of Dan Brown's controversial best seller 'The Da Vinci Code'

Participants can attend all three Wednesday night groups, or just one. A lot input will make the discussion that much better. Call 781-383-0345 to register for this free event.

Chili Cook-off! For Newcomers Club

The 10th annual chili cook-off is scheduled for Saturday, March 13 at 7 p.m. at the home of Scott & Carrie Peters, 27 Beach Plum Lane in Scituate. All club members are invited to bring a pot of their favorite chili in this flavorful competition. It should be ready to serve, including any additional fixings you wish to serve with it. Paper goods and silverware will be provided. Anyone not interested in entering a chili should bring an appetizer or dessert to share. There will be a charge of $5 per person collected at the door. Beer, wine, and soft drinks will be provided. Please RSVP to Heidi Blanchard at 545-8006.

Historical Society spring lecture series

The Cohasset Historical Society will offer a spring lecture series the third Wednesday of March, April and May at the Historical Society headquarters in the Pratt Building, 100 South Main St.

On March 17, the program will be "A Cohasset Woman At Sea; The Story of Drucilla Snow Percival," presented by Penny Myles. Myles will share the story of this courageous 19th-century woman who left the safety of shore, took her two small children and went to sea with her husband.

The April 21 program will feature David Wadsworth's slide and lecture on "Minot's Light: One Hundred and Forty-Four Years of Service." Wadsworth calls on his vast knowledge of local history to recount the story of this 114-foot granite tower, which is often shrouded in salt spray, fog and mystery.

Leslie Silvia will discuss her mother's book, "Once Upon an Island" by Matilda Silvia, at the May 19 meeting. Peddocks Island, a 188-acre bit of land on the outskirts of Boston Harbor, was home to Matilda Silvia's family from 1904 to 2001. Her memoir of life on the island is rich in both local and family history.

All presentations will begin at 7:30. These lectures are open to the public and are free of charge. Light refreshment will be served and all are invited to attend.

Pop into spring with flair with new musical

Variety is spicing up the spring musical this March at First Parish, the Unitarian Universalist church on the Common. Its "Poppin' into Spring" musical takes place on Friday and Saturday, March 19 and 20. This year's musical is different from its past cabarets. A totally new approach, beginning with the opening number of its "pops concert", introduces new instrumentalists from the church community, a new repertoire, and includes a pops "extra" with the special flair of a "black tie" affair.

For every person performing on stage there are at least three people assisting with production. The extensive amount of time invested by the church's extended choir shows a willingness and determination to provide a full and varied evening's entertainment.

These two evenings' performances take place in Trueblood Hall in the Parish House, 23 No. Main Street on Cohasset Common. Social Hour from 7 – 8 p.m. with drinks, hors d'oeuvres and a display of the evening's Auction items and a raffle sale - Pops Concert begins at 8 p.m.

Reservations are strongly suggested. Please call the First Parish office (Sandy Bailey) at 781-383-1100 or the Bloomfields at 781-383-1360. Tickets are $25/person or $50/patron. Full tables for eight may be reserved at $200.

Arts & Crafts Programs

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for grades K-3 Arts & Crafts programs by calling 781-383-4109.

Arts and Crafts for grades K-3 will be held from 3 to 4:30 p.m. on Mondays and will be held at the Joseph P. Osgood School.

The program will be 5 weeks in duration, costing $50 per child. Programs are scheduled to begin Monday, April 5, continuing thru 5 weeks thru Monday, May 10, (class does not meet 04-19-04).

For more information, details and registration, call the Recreation office at 781-383-4109

Springtime house tour planned April 4

"Opening Doors for Resurrection Youth Ministry" Resurrection Parish of Hingham would like to welcome you to its first annual House Tour & Boutique featuring Springtime Table Settings on Saturday, April 4, from noon to 4 p.m.

The goal of this important undertaking is to raise funds to send middle and high school-age students away this summer for a week of volunteer work. This year there will be more than 70 students traveling to Quincy, Worcester, San Francisco, Calif., and Gallup, N.M., to spend a week serving meals in soup kitchens, stocking food pantries, delivering meals to the homebound, visiting the sick and elderly, and doing home and building renovations.

Local shops, florists, decorators, and homeowners have worked together to create an exciting variety of table setting ideas in both the kitchens and the dining rooms of these South Hingham homes. Reflecting themes both casual and elegant, you'll enjoy seeing a French Fete celebration, a Kentucky Derby party, Breakfast with the Easter Bunny, Alice in Wonderland's High Tea, and a Springtime Renewal of Friendship gathering, to name a few. High school students planning to go on these trips will be staffing the homes on the Tour.

The Boutique, open from noon to 5 p.m., on Sunday, April 4, has 20 venders offering a superb variety of gift items for sale, such as handmade jewelry, knitted scarves, custom pottery, handbags, hand painted furniture and note cards. It will be located in Read Hall, the lower level of the Resurrection Church, adjacent to Notre Dame Academy, at 1057 Main Street in Hingham. Ten percent of the proceeds will benefit Youth Ministry. The Boutique will also have a Bake Sale, sponsored by Middle School students and a "Relay for Life" table with Luminarias available for a donation to the American Cancer Society.

Advanced tickets will be available for purchase for $20, beginning March 13, and can be purchased at any of the following locations. Resurrection Rectory, Treasures in the Square, Corson's Glass House, La Petit Maison, Olden's Pharmacy in Weymouth, Village Gardens in Norwell, the Hingham Public Library, and Noble's Camera Shop in Queen Anne Plaza in Norwell. Tickets for the House Tour will only be available at the Boutique on the day of the Tour and will cost $25.

Call the Resurrection Rectory at 781-749-3577 with any questions you may have about the House Tour and Boutique.

UUA president to preach at Old Ship

This Sunday, March 14, the Rev. William G. Sinkford, president of the Unitarian Universalist Association, will be preaching at First Parish in Hingham (Old Ship Church), 107 Main St.. Sinkford, 56, was elected president of the UUA in June, 2001. As president of the UUA, he administers staff and programs that serve its more than 1,050 member congregations, and also acts as principal spokesperson for the Association. His has been a powerful voice in the national interfaith community on issues of racial justice, same sex marriage rights, civil liberties, peace, and global economic justice, among others. Sinkford's sermon this Sunday will be "In from the Margins."

This Sunday's service will also bring together in the Old Ship Meeting House the congregations, ministers, and choirs not only of First Parish in Hingham, but also Second Parish in Hingham, First Parishes of Cohasset, Scituate, and Norwell, and the Unitarian Universalist Church of Assinnippi. Second Parish and First Parish in Cohasset were both originally part of First Parish, splitting away in 1742 and 1721 respectively. The Scituate and Norwell congregations likewise share historical roots with one another.

The service this Sunday will be at 10:45 a.m.. Regular Sunday services are at 10:25, with a full program of religious education for children in the Parish House at 107 Main St., across from the Meeting House at the same time. All are welcome to worship at Old Ship. The Old Ship Meeting House, built in 1681, is the oldest wooden building in the nation in continuous use for worship. It is wheelchair accessible. For further information, call Old Ship's office at 781-749-1679, or go to the Old Ship web site at www.oldshipchurch.org.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

An open letter to Garrett Bradley

TO THE EDITOR:

The following letter was sent to state Rep. Garrett Bradley:

I slept tonight from 10:30 p.m. until 1:30 am, and now I am awake, sitting at the computer, trying to get down on paper some of my thoughts that are preventing me from getting back to sleep.

First of all, thank you for accepting the invitation to participate in a dialogue this past evening (March 8) with some of your constituents who urgently needed to know that you are aware of their thoughts and feelings about the constitutional amendment that you will be voting on in three days. You allowed yourself to be put in a difficult position, and it probably seemed to you that you would be given credit for that. I believe you were given credit for that by many in attendance.

What has kept me awake is the frustration I feel that you are not seeing the full impact of what you are intending to do by voting in favor of the Travelini amendment. Forgive me if I come across as "preachy" or arrogant. I certainly do not intend to in any way minimize the difficulty of this vote for you.

You are one of only 200 people who have an opportunity at this time to cast a vote. You tried to explain to us this past evening that you are concerned about the process, that you believe the voters will insist upon having a vote themselves on the issue — if not on a legislatively initiated amendment, then on an initiative petition amendment, which, as you explained, is harder to craft, and could well be more onerous than the one you will be considering.

However, your actual vote will be seen by your constituents as a statement about how you feel about the issue of equal civil and marriage rights for gays and lesbians, and, actually about non-discrimination in the Massachusetts constitution. Very few people will have the time or opportunity to know about the nuances you explained at the gathering last evening. This will be seen as simply a vote for or against writing discrimination into our constitution. And also a vote for or against gays — a group that continues to be unfairly treated, even hated, by many in our country.

When I ran for State Senate 12 years ago, I did so because I wanted to be the one with the power to cast just this type of vote, a vote that really mattered, that said something about justice, fairness, protection of the less powerful, and could be seen as a teaching or leadership moment.

I would like to remind you that most of your constituents look to you for leadership on the tough issues. You have often said that you vote for what you think is right, even if not everyone agrees with you. I'm afraid this is an opportunity where you are called upon to do that again. And it may be that the majority of your constituents would have a problem with your vote if you vote to defend the rights of a minority. But you also said this past evening that you believe it is right to uphold the constitution as interpreted in the Goodrich decision, and that you will vote at the ballot against whatever amendment is up for approval. As the holder of one of those precious 200 votes to set the tone of the debate, you can be consistent with this part of your tradition, and vote on Thursday for what you believe is right, by voting against any measure that would write discrimination into our Constitution.

As I was letting my thoughts creep in tonight, suddenly the words to a hymn came back to me, a hymn that I sang in my Episcopal church growing up, and then still in my Unitarian Universalist church where I worship now. I write them down for you to think about, to give you courage to do the right thing, to be reminded that there are moments when it really does matter to stand up for truth and virtue and good. The people that came to the meeting with you a few hours ago need you to be on their side now.

From James Russell Lowell, 1844: Once to Every Man and Nation

Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide,
In the strife of truth with falsehood, for the good or evil side;
Then to stand with truth is noble, when we share her wretched crust;
Ere her cause bring fame and profit, and 'tis prosperous to be just.

Though the cause of evil prosper, yet 'tis truth alone is strong;
Though her portion be the scaffold, and upon the throne, be wrong.
Then it is the brave man chooses, while the coward stands aside,
Till the multitude make virtue of the faith they have denied.

WORSHIP NOTES

United Day Of Prayer at Glastonbury Abbey

Each year Fr. Thomas Keating and Contemplative Outreach designate a day for people throughout the world to gather together for prayer, silence, and sharing. Fr. Keating has prepared a special video presentation for people attending these sessions, and there will be opportunity for discussion after the video.

This year the South Shore and Cape conference will be held at the Glastonbury Abbey Conference Center in Hingham on Mar. 20 from 9:30-3p.m. In addition to the video by Fr. Thomas, there will be several sessions of centering prayer, a walking meditation, and the opportunity to attend noon mass at Glastonbury Abbey.

It is not necessary to belong to a Centering Prayer group to attend this day, but familiarity and practice with centering prayer would be helpful. This day provides an opportunity for the global community of Contemplative Outreach to bond in silence. Morning coffee and lunch are included in the $35 fee for the day.

Please call Rosemary Edwards at 781-749-5377 or Ed McDermott at 781-925-2707 to reserve a place or to answer questions about this program.

Voice of the Faithful meet on church closings

The Hingham area Voice of the Faithful will meet Tuesday, March 16, to hear the Rev. James Rafferty, pastor of St. Paul Church, make a presentation on the process being employed throughout the Boston Archdiocese to evaluate all parishes regarding the possibility of reducing the number of operating Catholic churches.

This matter has received considerable attention in the press and in the parishes throughout the Diocese. Rafferty will also review the present status of this process. The meeting will be held at St. Paul's School hall at 7:30 p.m. and is open to all.

The Hingham affiliate of Voice of the Faithful is one of nearly 200 affiliates throughout the United States and was established in the summer of 2002. It serves Catholic parishes in Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and Norwell.

Shawl Ministry to meet March 27

The next monthly gathering of The Prayer Shawl Ministry sponsored by Christ Church United Methodist of Hingham will be on Saturday, March 27 from 1 to 3 p.m. in the Gala Room of the Company Theatre. The Gala Room is on the second floor of the building to the left side of the theatre complex at 30 Accord Park Drive in Norwell. New participants are welcome and can be taught the needlework basics if necessary. Rev. Victoria Gaskell, pastor of Christ Church, will be the facilitator. Participants are welcome to create shawls for any person or project they desire.

For more information call the church office at 781-741-5030. Knitters should bring size 11 or 13 needles and 3 skeins of yarn. Crocheters need a size M,N, or P hook and 4 skeins of yarn. For suggested yarns and more information about The Shawl Ministry go to www.shawlministry.com. Directions to The Company Theatre can be found at www.companytheater.com. The Gala Room is not handicapped accessible.

OBITUARIES

Florence C. Hitt

Florence C. Hitt, a former resident of Cohasset, died Feb. 18, 2004, in Lacey, Wash. She was 88.

Mrs. Hitt was born in Tacoma, Wash., one of two daughters of hardworking Swedish immigrant parents. While attending the University of Washington, she met and married her husband John. His graduate studies in electrical engineering at MIT brought them to Massachusetts and eventually Cohasset in 1957.

Their connection to the Pacific Northwest resulted in a number of cross-country automobile trips in the '50s and '60s with their family. They also traveled to Europe several times with their children to visit relatives in Sweden.

After her husband's death in 1969, Mrs. Hitt continued to live in Cohasset until 1992 when she moved to Washington State.

She leaves a sister; a son, Peter Hitt of Gig Harbor, Wash.; a daughter, Sandra (Bruce) Young of Bowie, Md.; a granddaughter, Kathy; and two great-grandchildren.

Memorial remembrances may be made to the First Parish Church in Cohasset.

Voters should weigh in on gay marriage amendment

YOUR REP

GARRETT BRADLEY

As we reconvene the Constitutional Convention and continue to debate the issue of the Marriage Amendment, I wanted to share with you my thoughts on the process and the issue. I have spent many sleepless nights contemplating the issue and I have heard from numerous constituents who have expressed strong feelings on both sides of this debate.

While I have reviewed the arguments from all points of view and have factored in my personal feelings on this issue, I have also taken a step back to focus on the process, my role in this process as a member of the Legislature, and your role in this process as a voter. I have reviewed journals, debates, and proceedings from the 1820 and the 1917-1919 Constitutional Conventions for perspective on the amendment process and my role in this process.

During my discussions with constituents, many have asked why the Constitutional Amendment process is the only venue for this debate. The answer is simple: legislative inaction and judicial action leave only two options — same sex marriage or a Constitutional Amendment to make it unconstitutional. The question for me as your State Representative is who should decide this issue. Should it be decided by only 200 legislators at the Statehouse or should it be decided by the millions of registered voters in this Commonwealth? I believe that the process calls for such an important issue to be decided by the voters.

Our Constitution, principally written by John Adams, contained no provision for amendment. However, the Preamble states that the people have the right to alter government when necessary and Article Seven states in part "the people alone have an incontestable, unalienable and indefeasible right to institute government; and to reform, alter or totally change the same, when their protection, safety, prosperity and happiness require it". The process to change the Constitution was historically cumbersome. It called for a referendum question to be put to the people for them to vote on which asked if they wanted to call a Convention to revise or amend the Constitution. This required a two-thirds majority vote of the people.

The Constitutional Convention of 1820 changed this process when Article of Amendment IX was proposed and passed by the voters in 1821. This Article established a process by which a majority of the Senate and two-thirds of the House of Representatives could submit an amendment to the Constitution to the people for their approval or rejection. This Article fixed the most significant defect of the Constitution and helped to transform our State into a true democracy. As the years passed, this process proved too difficult because the political majorities in the Legislature could, and did, stop measures from reaching the ballot. A movement began to change the amendment process to give the people a greater role in it. The issue was addressed in the Constitutional Convention of 1917-1919 and the voters approved a change in the process in 1919. The voters reduced the role of the Legislature in the amendment process and the people also gained indirect initiative capability through Article of Amendment Forty Eight. This Article is the process that is still in place today, which calls for the issue of same sex marriage to be placed on the ballot and decided by the people. Article Forty Eight provides that the Constitution can be amended either by legislative petition or initiative petition. Legislative petitions for amending the Constitution can be introduced into the Convention by any member of the Legislature. If the petition receives a majority vote in two successive conventions, it is placed before the people for their acceptance or rejection. Initiative petitions for amending the constitution require a significant number of signatures of registered voters to be collected and certified. The petition is then placed before the Convention. Unlike legislative petitions, initiative petitions only require a 25 percent vote in two successive conventions to then be placed before the voters for their acceptance or rejection. Another significant difference is that legislative petitions only require a majority vote to be amended while an initiative petition requires 75 percent approval for any amendments. While we are currently debating a legislative petition, I strongly believe that if we do not act on this issue, signatures will be gathered and we will see an initiative petition, that could be much more divisive than the current petition, before the next Constitutional Convention. This is another reason that I believe this issue should be decided by the voters as soon as possible.

People power

In reviewing of the history of our Constitutional Amendment process, it is clear that the process has consistently evolved to take power away from the Legislature and return it to the people. The Legislature is not to be a rubber stamp on any proposed amendments to the Constitution. The Legislature should not, however, block from the ballot issues that are of great importance to a large number of people. The Legislature should schedule hearings, reject proposals of little importance, closely review amendments and advise their constituents whether to approve or disapprove an amendment when it reaches the ballot. While it has become clear to me throughout this process that people in the Legislature and outside of the Legislature disagree on our role in this process, we must continue to ask ourselves two important questions: (1) If an issue as important as this one should not go to the voters as the process provides, what issue should?; and (2) Should 200 people decide an issue as important as this one for the entire Commonwealth?

Since the Constitutional Convention began, I have voted for two Amendments that would place before you the issue of whether to define marriage in our Constitution as being between one man and one woman. I voted against one other amendment that also did this and spoke to civil unions, which I have long supported, because of what I saw as a defect in the amendment. The amendment contained a "reversion clause" which changed any same sex marriages that happen between May 17, 2004 (the date the court's ruling goes into effect) and November 2006 (should the amendment reach the ballot then and pass) into civil unions. I believe that such a clause would be constitutionally challenged. All three of these amendments failed to gain majority support. When we reconvene this week, I will continue to vote to place the issue of same sex marriage before the voters.

The reason for the lengthy amendment process, which will take a minimum of two and one half years on this issue, is to allow time for a healthy and vigorous debate. While I believe we should have that debate, I believe that it should occur over the next two and one half years as the issue makes its way to the ballot in 2006. As I explained earlier, I believe the issue will get to the ballot one way or another — either in 2006 by legislative petition or in 2008 by the initiative process (gathering signatures). Let us have a great debate, but let us make sure the voters are part of that debate. I have always been, and continue to be, a supporter of civil unions and the extension of the same rights, protections and responsibilities of marriage to same sex couples. Therefore, to me, this issue comes down to defining the word marriage and whether that should take place in our Constitution. When I go to the polls to vote on this issue in 2006 or 2008, I personally will vote against defining marriage in our Constitution. I do not believe a definition of marriage belongs in the Constitution. However, the Constitution is clear that every voter has a right to be heard on such an important issue. It has been said, and I believe it to be true, that the people are a safety valve in the representative process. I also believe that there will be no closure until the people are given the opportunity to exercise their right to vote on this issue.

As always, I look forward to your continued input as we move through this process.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley represents the Third Plymouth District that includes Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and one precinct in Scituate.

First Parish Hall across from the Old Ship Meetinghouse in Hingham to explain his stance.

Bradley, who does not oppose same-sex unions, supports putting the issue before the voters in the form of an anti-gay marriage amendment that could pass muster at the reconvened Constitutional Convention today at the Statehouse. The amendment is expected to define marriage as between a man and a woman and create civil unions for same-sex couples.

"I personally support same sex marriage rights but I believe the ultimate question of whether or not the constitution should be amended to prohibit it should be decided by the voters of the commonwealth," Bradley said in a telephone interview Tuesday. "That is why I have and will continue to vote when we reconvene in the Constitutional Convention to place this issue on the ballot as soon as possible."

Bradley's stance was confusing to those in attendance because he doesn't think marriage should be defined by the constitution. So he plans to vote against the amendment at the ballot box although he supports putting it there.

Bradley tried to provide a history lesson on the process of amending the state constitution Monday evening but it failed to sway the audience, which said civil rights is not something that should be left up to a majority vote at the polls.

"You don't put an issue on the ballot that allows the majority to take away the civil rights of a minority," said Laura Burns of Hingham.

A woman from North Scituate, who is caring for her same sex domestic partner suffering with ovarian cancer, said she didn't choose whom Bradley could marry.

"The state should not have a role in whom I can spend the rest of my life with," she said. "It is an issue of civil rights and we need your leadership."

The state Supreme Judicial Court in a recent 4-3 vote ruled there is no prohibition to same sex marriage in the constitution. Without intervention from the Legislature or a stay from the court, it will be legal for gay and lesbian couples to marry starting May 17.

MassEquality, a coalition of local and national organizations dedicated to ensuring the SJC's marriage decision is upheld and any anti-gay amendment to the state constitution is defeated, sponsored the Hingham forum.

Many speakers, who came from towns across the South Shore, urged Bradley to do nothing and hoped other legislators would follow suit, delaying putting the issue before the voters. They feel that the heterosexuals will adapt to same-sex marriage once it becomes commonplace. Some explained interracial couples faced similar discrimination 30 years ago.

Margie Peters of Hull urged Bradley to dispense with the process argument.

"You could be the guy who stood up and takes a stand for civil rights," she said. "You could be the guy to stand up and do it – I give you that chance."

One audience member asked Bradley if he'd be happy with a civil union.

The Rev. Ken Read-Brown of Old Ship said he expected to officiate at the weddings of same-sex couples in May and noted the world would not fall apart once those marriages begin to take place.

But Bradley said the ballot vote was the only way to bring closure to this issue.

"My position has upset those on both sides of the issue," he said, adding it wasn't about politics. "This is about what I think is right to do in the long run on this issue."

A man from Hull said, "the Supreme Judicial Court has already ruled it's OK for gay people to marry, we don't want to change it – leave it alone."

Max Pounder of Scituate said something is wrong with the process if it allows the constitution be changed to reduce civil rights.

Another Hull man told Bradley, "I think you are playing politics and passing the buck – take a stand one way or another."

Bradley said it wasn't his role to "choke off an amendment such as this."

Then a woman in the back stood up and said, "I'm ashamed we voted for you and you're a Democrat!"

LISTEN To Life
by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

TURNING A DEAF EAR TO LOUD MUSIC

These days, nearly every young person owns headphones attached to a CD player or an MP3 player that can deliver high-decibel sound. Is it any wonder, then, that a University of Florida study has shown that, nationwide, nearly seven times more middle and high school students of this era display the various degrees of hearing loss that their counterparts did only two decades previously? Hearing experts say that continuous exposure to sounds over 85 decibels has the potential to damage hearing permanently. The typical rock concert produces sound levels between 100 and 120 decibels, while car audio equipment can reach 155 decibels or more. Each increase of 10 decibels represents a sound that is ten times more powerful.

Young teenagers rarely listen to anything other than loud music, so good advice about protecting their hearing usually "goes in one ear and out the other." For the young as well as the young at heart, FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER suggests you listen if a hearing instrument is recommended after testing. Here at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth, we offer many services to our clients, including comprehensive hearing tests, a full range of hearing instruments, and unsurpassed personal attention. Call us at 781-337-1144 for an appointment.

Getting to root of the tree snafu

Island caregiver explains decision

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

When George Washington chopped down the cherry tree, all was immediately forgiven. But Town Manager Mark Haddad might have to work harder for the same outcome after allowing a tree to be cut down on the island at the intersection of Joy Place and North Main Street.

Two trees — one pin oak, located on the island located at the intersection of Joy Place and North Main Street and the other, a white ash located on town property next to Central Cemetery — have been cut down to nothing, causing an uproar around town. The tree on the island, which serves as a memorial for Capt. John Lyons, was reportedly planted in his memory.

Last summer, the board of selectmen asked members of the community to volunteer their time through the "Adopt an Island," program, in an effort to beautify the town. Volunteers would be responsible for general upkeep of the island, including planting throughout the seasons to enhance its appearance. Rob Kasameyer, who lives at 103 North Main St. and is a member of the water commission, was given permission to "adopt" the Capt. John Lyons memorial island, located across the street from his house.

Kasameyer said when he came to Haddad asking to take care of the island, Haddad asked him what plans he had in mind. Kasameyer said he told Haddad he would like to plant both low growing shrubs, so as not to impair the view for drivers, and some perennials. He said he also had plans to bring in an arborist to make recommendations for the tree on the island, which he said looked damaged and was tangled in the electrical wires overhead. Kasameyer consulted Bartlett Tree Experts who he said confirmed his suspicion that the tree was damaged, both from being cut back from the wires many times and from salt and sand from the road.

"It hadn't been very well taken care of," Kasameyer said. "The lines aren't very tall, and the tree was directly under them. I was told it was the wrong tree in the wrong place."

Kasameyer said the tree's proximity to the street would continue to impair its health. He decided to plant something else in its place, which would be more appropriate for the island.

While the Bartlett expert was

Mr. Skipper takes the stage next week

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset High's Mr. Skipper Contest puts the fun in "fundraiser," says senior class advisor Mike Gill.

The second annual all-mail "beauty" and talent competition steps off at 7 p.m., Friday, March 26 in the high school auditorium.

"What I love about it is that it brings the parents and kids together," says Gill, who is also the school health education coordinator. "There are really not that many events that kids and parents enjoy together and can just laugh and have a good time."

Tuesday the contestants met with Gill for a few minutes after lunch to go over the details of the event, which raises money for the prom and other end-of-year activities.

Mr. Skipper Night is a four-part pageant that features the guys in tuxedos, casual wear, a talent contest and answering a philosophical question.

Last year's event — which was the first-ever Mr. Skipper Night — raised $1,700, Gill said. This year, organizers hope between $2,000-$3,000 will be raised. Tickets are $6 and are available at the door.

This year there will be five judges: three faculty members, one student and the audience collectively. Ballots for audience members will sell for $1 each.

Adding the audience as the fifth judge is a great way to add to the revenue, Gill said.

Talent can range from singing and dancing to juggling. Last year there was even a unicycle, said Gill, who clears all the acts and outfits, which must be in good taste.

Tuxedos are being provided at no cost by Bernie's Formal

Fixing large house bylaw

Flaws seen in current proposal

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

A zoning bylaw change drafted to prevent a situation like 3 Jerusalem Road from happening again in Cohasset, has too many flaws to be adopted as is, officials said.

The Large House Site Plan Review, article 7 on the March 27 Town Meeting warrant, does not have the support of the board of selectmen or the two boards most responsible for enforcing the bylaw. Members of both the Zoning Board of Appeals and Planning Board said there were flaws in the current language of the bylaw revision.

With that input, Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris, as well as selectman Michael Sullivan, voted against recom-

DA's involvement in police investigation is made clear

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

After reviewing documents provided by the Cohasset Police Department, the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office did not find a basis for belief that Sgt. William Quigley mishandled a series of 14 police stops and arrests that Police Chief Robert Jackson asked it to investigate.

However, the DA asked the town to provide more information in order to more satisfactorily respond to the chief's request for an investigation into the police conduct of Sgt. Quigley dating back to Jan. 1, 2001.

"The town needed to do whatever it could to investigate those complaints and to protect its citizens and the town."
— Town Counsel Peter Berry

A page-one story in last week's Cohasset Mariner was incorrect because it stated the DA's office had in fact conducted an investigation into the 14 incidents and determined Quigley was not guilty of any wrongdoing when the material supplied by the town was not sufficient for it to do so.

Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris was highly critical of the Mariner story.

"Clearly the story was inaccurate and wrong," McMorris said. "The Mariner should have checked the facts before printing the story. It is an important issue before the town and the readers were misled."

In a March 10 letter from Town Counsel Peter Berry to Quigley's attorney, Doug Louison, Berry stated the DA's office had not made any determination as yet and had not even begun a formal investigation, but was requesting further information to pursue the town's request for an investigation.

"The town will be following up with the DA," Berry said Tuesday. "We intend to continue to work with the DA and cooperate with that office in pursuing the investigation."

Berry explained the request for an investigation was launched because the town had complaints about Quigley's conduct from citizens and other police officers that the sergeant was abusing people's civil rights and falsifying reports.

"The town needed to do what-

Town, officers call a cease-fire

The town and Sgt. William Quigley and Officer James McLean released the following joint statement yesterday, March 17.

The Town of Cohasset, Sgt. William Quigley and Officer James McLean have agreed to a cooling off period during which the parties will attempt to resolve their employment disputes through a structured mediation process.

The hearings have been suspended for 45 days.

To protect the necessary confidentiality of mediation, no further comments will be made to the press during the cooling-off period. The parties are committed to using good faith efforts to seek alternative resolution of their disputes.

Household hazardous product collection

Cohasset will have a joint hazardous waste collection day with Hull from 9 a.m.-1p.m., June 5 at a location to be announced.

Accepted materials include solvents, gasoline, motor oil mixtures and other automotive fluids, pesticides, photography chemicals, pool chemicals, acids and bases, thermometers, thermostats and poisons. Materials not accepted include industrial waste, radioactive materials, pathological and medical waste, pressurized gas cylinders, auto batteries and explosives. Paint, motor oil, propane tanks, fluorescent lamps and NiCd (rechargeable) batteries are collected regularly by many towns and may not be accepted at some collections. Latex paint is nonhazardous, and may be dried and disposed with trash. Bring chemicals in their original containers or labeled clearly as to their contents. Clean Harbors will conduct the collections.

Residents who turn in a toxic mercury thermometer or other mercury item may swap it for a digital thermometer. Visitors' mercury waste may be disposed but not swapped. Swaps sponsored by American Ref-Fuel at SEMASS or Mass. DEP.

For more detailed information and directions, call the South Shore Recycling Cooperative at 508-785-8318. Claire Sullivan, Solid Waste Planner.

New faces on the Conservation Comm.

Sarah Charron and David Farrag are the two newest members of the Conservation Commission. Charron, a licensed environmental engineer who moved to Cohasset last summer with her husband, has been appointed to the full-time position and Farrag, a practicing lawyer who grew up in Cohasset, will fill the associate position.

"I believe I have the interest and experience to help the town," Charron said, adding she has spent the last 10 years working with drinking water and wastewater projects.

Farrag said he has much experience with real estate law and has been before various Planning Boards quite a bit. However, he said he has also represented conservation commissions in the past, proving he has experience on both sides of conservation issues.

Both new members will soon be sworn in at the Town Clerk's office.

Graves will be sold back to town

Katherine Mayo, who currently lives in Hancock, Maine has decided to sell her two Woodside Cemetery lots, containing seven graves each, back to the town. Because the graves are located in an area that people wish to purchase, and they are all together, the cemetery department has valued the graves at $300 a piece. The graves are located in section B of the Woodside Cemetery and are numbered 110 and 120. For more information, please contact Carl Sestito, DPW Superintendent at (781) 383-0273.

Building permits

The following building permits were issued recently at Town Hall.

37 Willard, Stockbridge St., re-roof 16 squares, $6,700; Ogrodnik, Reservoir Road, renov. Breezeway, winds, wall, etc., $15,000; Monica Schlawinsky, Elm Court, remodeling two floors, $10,000; Black Rk. Rep. Garrett Bradley holds office hours

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D – Hingham, will be holding district office hours Monday, March 22, at Cohasset Town Hall from 6 -7 p.m. If you are unable to attend this scheduled office hours, but would like to meet with Bradley, call (617) 722-2120 to schedule an appointment.

Brush at the RTF

Residential brush will be accepted through April 30. No trees over 3 inches in diameter. No contractors please.

Flag depository at American Legion

The American Legion, George H. Mealy Post 118 in Cohasset has a way for the public to be able to bring them their tattered and worn flags so they may be properly and ceremoniously destroyed. The Flag Depository, located in front of the legion post at 98 Summer St., has the look and shape of an American flag. This solid metal Flag Depository protects the flags until they are removed for storage and kept until the time of the desecration ceremony. The Herb Chambers Automobile Dealerships made this service possible through a donation to the post. Everyone is invited to bring his or her retired flags to the depository.

Senior housing deal is done

Northland Residential to build on Cook Estate

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

The Board of Selectmen voted unanimously in favor of allowing the Northland Residential Corporation to build its proposed senior housing project on the Cook Estate property, and has given the company the go-ahead to get started with its plans. If all goes as planned, development of "The Villages at Deer Hill" would be complete in December of 2006.

Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris said she is very excited about the decision and the prospect of beginning a much needed senior housing project in town. She said she is very proud of Cohasset for taking the initiative to address the concerns of citizens who have been working on getting senior housing built in town for many years. "We're keeping valuable members of the community in town, and generating the funds needed to help pay the bills and educate our children," she said.

Voters at the fall Special Town Meeting approved the allocation of $4.5 million for the purchase of the 22-acre Cook parcel of land, located off of Sohier Street, which will be sold to the Northland developers with the adjacent 8.7 acres of town property. There will be a double closing, transferring the property from the Cooks to the developer, and therefore no money will be expended by the town.

At the closing, slated for October, the town will give the Cook heirs $4.5 million for their property, and Northland will give the town $5.425 million for both the Cook property and the town's parcel of land, leaving $925,000 for the town. The minimum bid price set by the town was $5.2 million for both parcels.

With the $925,000, Haddad said the town will spend between $125,000 and $150,000 to pay back its consultants, the Advisory Committee for funds it lent, and any other debts accrued during the process.

"It's a very good benefit for the town," said Haddad, adding there are no current plans in place as to where the rest of the money the town makes will go.

While plans are subject to change, depending on how the permitting process unfolds before the Planning Board, the project currently features 60 townhouse style attached condominium residences, spread throughout four duplex buildings , 12 triplex, and four quads. There will be two rental apartment buildings, one with 18 units and one with 17, for a total of 35 mixed-income rental apartments.

Plans also call for the development of 30 of the 35 rental apartments to be affordable to seniors who qualify at "moderate" income levels, meaning those who earn between 50 and 80 percent of the area median income. The town is currently trying to meet a 10 percent affordability threshold set by the state, and at least 30 of the 35 units will count toward meeting that goal. Developers said in their proposal, regardless of how the project is funded, 30 units will be able to count under the Local Initiative Program, but if financing is used from an approved federal or state program to create the affordable housing, all 35 rental units could potentially count.

About The Villages at Deer Hill

Some of The Villages at Deer Hill's specifications are:

Concrete foundations and floors

Exterior walls will be spruce clapboards and white cedar shingles with stain finish. Trim is pine with painted finish. Roof shingles are asphalt. Decks are pressure treated lumber.

Each residence will be heated and air conditioned by a natural gas fired air system. Hot water will be supplied by a 50 gallon insulated hot water heater.

All homes will be equipped with hard wired smoke detectors.

All homes will be prewired for television.

Kitchen sinks are stainless steel high/low bowl. Kitchen cabinets have a wood or plastic laminate finish. Countertops are Corian brand solid surface. Appliances are by General Electric and include dishwasher, disposal, gas range, microwave, and a top/bottom refrigerator/freezer.

Wall to wall carpeting and dense padding is installed over tongue and groove plywood, except in kitchen, baths and front entry. Other areas will be either ceramic tile or sheet vinyl.

The site plans take into consideration the target market for the development, providing amenities the active, 55-plus crowd wants. All units have a first floor master bedroom, one or two car garages, and loft spaces. There will be walking trails along the perimeter of the entire village, which could be linked with present or future "off-site" trail networks. The plans also include a common garden facility available for all residents, and the existing Cook residence will be renovated into a "village clubhouse" to be used for social events and gatherings.

Floor plans for townhouses will come in four designs. Three feature two bedrooms and two and a half baths, and the fourth has two bedrooms and two full baths. Square footage ranges from 1700-1950 square feet of living space.

During a "pre-sale" period, homes will be offered at a discount and only marketed to Cohasset residents. After the pre-sale period, townhouses will most likely be marketed for $575,000 to $585,000 and increase in value as the project progresses.

There will be two one-bedroom market rate apartments available, with rents of between $1,400 and $1,600 a month, and three two-bedroom market rates, with rents of between $1,700 and $1,900 a month. There will be 15 one-bedroom affordable apartments with rents between $800 and $1,253 and 15 two bedroom, with rents between $900 and $1,410. All one bedroom apartments are 700 square feet and all two-bedroom apartments are 1,000 square feet.

Northland has a team of experts assisting in the Villages at Deer Hill. Grazado Velleco Architects has teamed up with Northland on a number of 55-plus housing projects, and even redesigned three floor plans for Northland, after an original developer's plan for a senior housing community had failed.

Coler &Colantonio will also lend their engineering expertise to the project. The town hired C&C to carry out a hydrogeologic study on the property, prior to choosing Northland as a developer, as part of the due diligence process. Because town sewer is not available on the Cook Estate site, there will need to be a plan in place for on-site wastewater disposal, and the data C&C has already provided will help speed the process along.

Tom Ryan will be the landscape architect for the project, and has worked with Northland on their two most recent townhouse communities. Construction will be managed with Northland residential Construction LLC, which is a wholly owned subsidiary of Northland Residential Corp., and specifically acts to provide construction management and construction related services on each of the company's projects.

Ball tossed to Town Meeting for $98K athletic field repair

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Town Meeting will have the final say whether monies from the Community Preservation Fund will be used to fix the drainage problems at Alumni Field at the middle-high school.

The Community Preservation Committee will recommend Town Meeting voters approve spending $98,500 to repair the field which is where most of the high school athletic games are held.

Town Manager Mark Haddad, middle-high school Athletic Director Ron Ford, DPW Supt. Carl Sestito and parks foreman Andy Swanson provided a joint presentation recently that persuaded the Community Preservation Committee the funds would solve the problem and prevent further deterioration of the sports field which was constructed on clay and has poor drainage.

If Town Meeting gives the go-ahead, work would start after the American Cancer Society's Relay For Life, slated for mid-June. Volunteers at the annual 24-hour benefit pitch tents and camp out on the field overnight.

According to Quincy-based Foy & Letendre Landscaping, Inc., which provided the estimate for Haddad, the turf — about 56,000 square feet — would need to be stripped off the field. Slit trenches and related materials would have to be installed for drainage that would provide 10 times the current drainage capability. Work would also include repairing the existing irrigation system.

"I think we have a pretty good plan to keep it from turning into a mud bowl like last year," Haddad said. Last spring was one of the wettest in recent memory.

"Basically the clay has turned into cement."
— Ron Ford, Athletic Director

Ford, the athletic director, explained the popular field is strictly used for games with few exceptions such as football kicking practice.

"Last fall 45 games were held on the field over 30 dates," Ford said. Some 30 games are held on the field in the spring. The field is closed in the summer, except for the track which is used by the general public.

He said what has happened to Alumni Field where clay gets compacted and water can't drain is fairly common. In fact the clay is so compacted on the field it takes a jackhammer to break through it. "Basically the clay has turned into cement," Ford said.

CPC Chairman Stuart Ivimey asked if the repairs were maintenance or capital improvements. Money from the preservation fund cannot be used for routine maintenance.

Haddad explained the drainage to be installed does not currently exist, taking it out of the realm of maintenance and into capital improvement.

Ford said the field is not overused and only the track team practices there and does not really use the inside of the field.

Lacrosse has the most impact on the field because of the games' concentration around the goals, but it's one of the school department's biggest sports and most successful programs, Ford said.

Haddad said he was confident the proposed plans would be a good solution to the problem. He said he has built a $50,000 line item into the annual budget to cover ongoing maintenance for all the town's fields so he didn't expect having to return to the CPC down the road for more money.

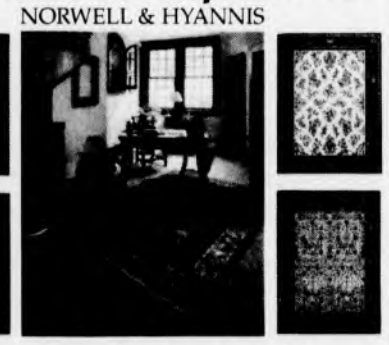
At a special election in May 1994, voters approved a $750,000 debt exclusion to pay for designing and constructing the new field, later named Alumni Field. The money also included repairs to the adjacent Milliken Field. That March, Town Meeting overwhelmingly voted (326-5) to go ahead with the project.

Part of the argument for the new field was Cohasset track teams could not host home meets because of the condition of the high school track that was built in 1938. Selectmen, the Advisory Committee and the School Committee wholeheartedly supported the project.

Cohasset schools get chemical grant

State Sen. Robert Hedlund and Rep. Garrett Bradley joined together to applaud the School Chemical Management Grant of $5,000 that will help Cohasset schools clear out old, stockpiled chemicals and create a sustainable chemical management system, which will include the recycling of some chemicals.

"The removal of chemicals, some possibly hazardous, from our children's schools is a great step towards maintaining a healthier, more environmentally sound commonwealth. I am pleased to see government taking on this type of investment in recycling," said Hedlund.



"I am pleased the state has recognized the importance of proper disposal of chemicals in our schools and has begun the process of distributing financial assistance," Bradley said..

The grant funds come from the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs and the Department of Environmental Protection as part of the overall Municipal Recycling Grant.

DA's involvement in police investigation is made clear

ever it could to investigate those complaints and to protect its citizens and the town," he said. "If the town is aware an officer is abusing his police power then the town has the obligation to take the appropriate steps to stop it or it would be exposing itself to liability."

Berry said the town hired a private investigator who reviewed past police reports and identified some that needed further review. The town asked the DA to begin the investigation of those 14 incidents because the town needed to get the resources of the DA's office involved in an investigation of that scope.

At the same time the town brought allegations forward in specific incidents including three arrests and one booking procedure that the town felt it had the most solid evidence," Berry said. Those incidents have been the subject of the ongoing police disciplinary hearing at Town Hall, which Quigley and Officer James McLean, who also is charged with wrongdoing, asked to be conducted in public.

In a Feb. 24 letter to Chief Jackson, First Assistant DA Dennis Mahoney stated the office had reviewed all the material that has been supplied and there was nothing in the material by itself that suggests Quigley was involved in a pattern of misconduct by filing false police reports and depriving citizens of their constitutional rights.

In that same letter, Mahoney stated, "Since your letter indicates your review goes back to Jan. 1, 2001, we are requesting any and all information that has been developed through your review and the independent investigation concerning arrests that led to both pending and disposed cases." Mahoney also requested any further information that has been developed on the 14 incidents the town already forwarded to the DA's office.

Mahoney stated the DA's office is taking the allegations very seriously. In his letter to Jackson, he said if there is wrongdoing that has affected past prosecutions that needs to be addressed.

"This office has the responsibility to not only address discoverable material in relation to pending matters," he stated. "But if there was indeed a past favorable prosecution, we need to review any new information about the underlying incident(s)."

Louison, the officers' attorney, said he stands by this statement that the DA's letter vindicated Quigley.

"I stand by my position that the DA reviewed all the information produced to him by the chief," said Louison, noting the chief was not limited in any way in what he could send to the DA.

"All the information sent is the foundation for these disciplinary charges," Louison said. "Based upon that information, the DA said in his letter that he found no evidence of wrongdoing on the part of Quigley.

"The DA simply said back to the chief, 'if you have any more information on these charges – please send it.'"

Louison said according to the testimony of the private investigator during the disciplinary hearing, "there is no additional information developed by this investigation and the investigation is based solely on the files the DA reviewed."

McMorris, the selectmen chairman, said she has not seen the packet of material Chief Jackson presented to the District Attorney and is not sure what he intends to present for additional information.

Town Manager Mark Haddad and Chief Jackson have declined to comment to the Mariner on the police matter.

Quigley, who has been on paid administrative leave since Oct. 20, is facing charges from the town of abuse of police power in three arrests and one booking procedure. He was not made aware of the charges until Jan. 13. He is also accused of drinking on duty following a training exercise last May at the Scituate Rod & Gun Club. The charges have been part of an ongoing police disciplinary hearing. Both Quigley and McLean deny they did anything wrong and want to get back to work.

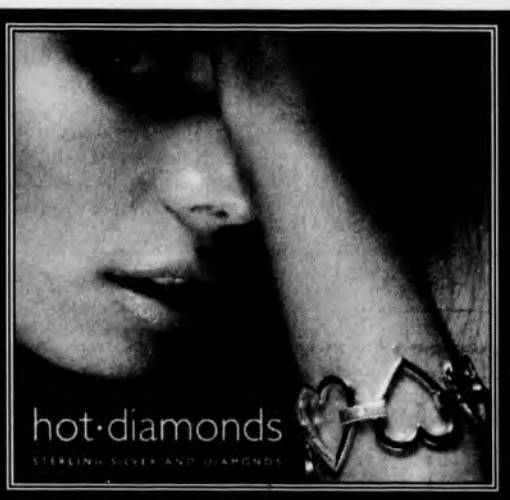
The DA's office received a letter from Chief Jackson on Jan. 21 asking for an investigation of 14 incidents that includes two of the arrests and the booking procedure that town has charged Quigley with mishandling. However, Jackson did not ask the DA to investigate Quigley's arrest of the chief's son and two others outside the Legion hall last October. But Judge Mark Coven earlier determined there was probable cause for those arrests after Mahoney brought the case forward at Quincy District Court. The charge of malicious destruction of property facing the three men is still pending.

Why Monday's hearing was postponed

The Town's police disciplinary hearing was scheduled to resume Monday (March 15) but was postponed until parameters with a juvenile's parents' attorney can be worked out before having the parents testify, according to Town Counsel Peter Berry who is prosecuting the case for the town.

Berry said Tuesday the parties are taking advantage of this hiatus to enter into mediation and see if the matter can be resolved by agreement. (See related press release page one).

Berry explained Dedham Superior Court Judge Isaac Borenstein is out of town. Borenstein denied the juvenile's parents' request for an injunction to stop the hearings from being held in public. However, Borenstein wants to be apprised of the steps to be taken keep the parents' identity secret.



The juvenile's parents were upset because their child's name and address were inadvertently revealed during earlier testimony.

Berry said the town has not rested its case against Sgt. William Quigley and Officer James McLean and needs to complete its case before the officers can respond.

Polly Logan eyes Rep. Bradley's seat

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Most people eat chicken soup when they have a cold, but not Cohasset's Polly Logan.

She drinks Gator Aid – a fact that wouldn't surprise her legions of friends and political acquaintances.

Logan, 78, is a Republican who doesn't necessarily follow the rules. When most septuagenarians are content to take it easy — Logan is just getting revved up.

After her March 2 victory in a three-way race for Republican State Committee in the Plymouth-Norfolk District, the Nichols Road resident is seriously considering a run against Hingham's Garrett Bradley. Bradley represents the Third Plymouth District that includes Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and one precinct in Scituate.

"It would be a lot of work, but I'm not afraid of that," says Logan, as she sipped Gator Aid for a nasty cold.

Logan, a former Hingham resident, is an avid supporter of Gov. Mitt Romney and says a run for state representative would help the Republican governor. She explained that Bradley's seat is one the Republican State Committee has targeted as "win-able."

Bradley, 33, who is seeking a third term, welcomes the competition.

"I like her very much personally, she's a very energetic woman," he says. "I'm looking forward to hearing what she says about the issues such as 40B, health care, education and the economy.

"I'm looking forward to the debate."

Kevin O'Donnell, chairman of the Cohasset Republican Town Committee, said he's all for a potential Logan vs. Bradley race. "It would be a lot of fun and I hope she does do it," he says.

> "It would be a lot of work, but I'm not afraid of that."
> — Polly Logan

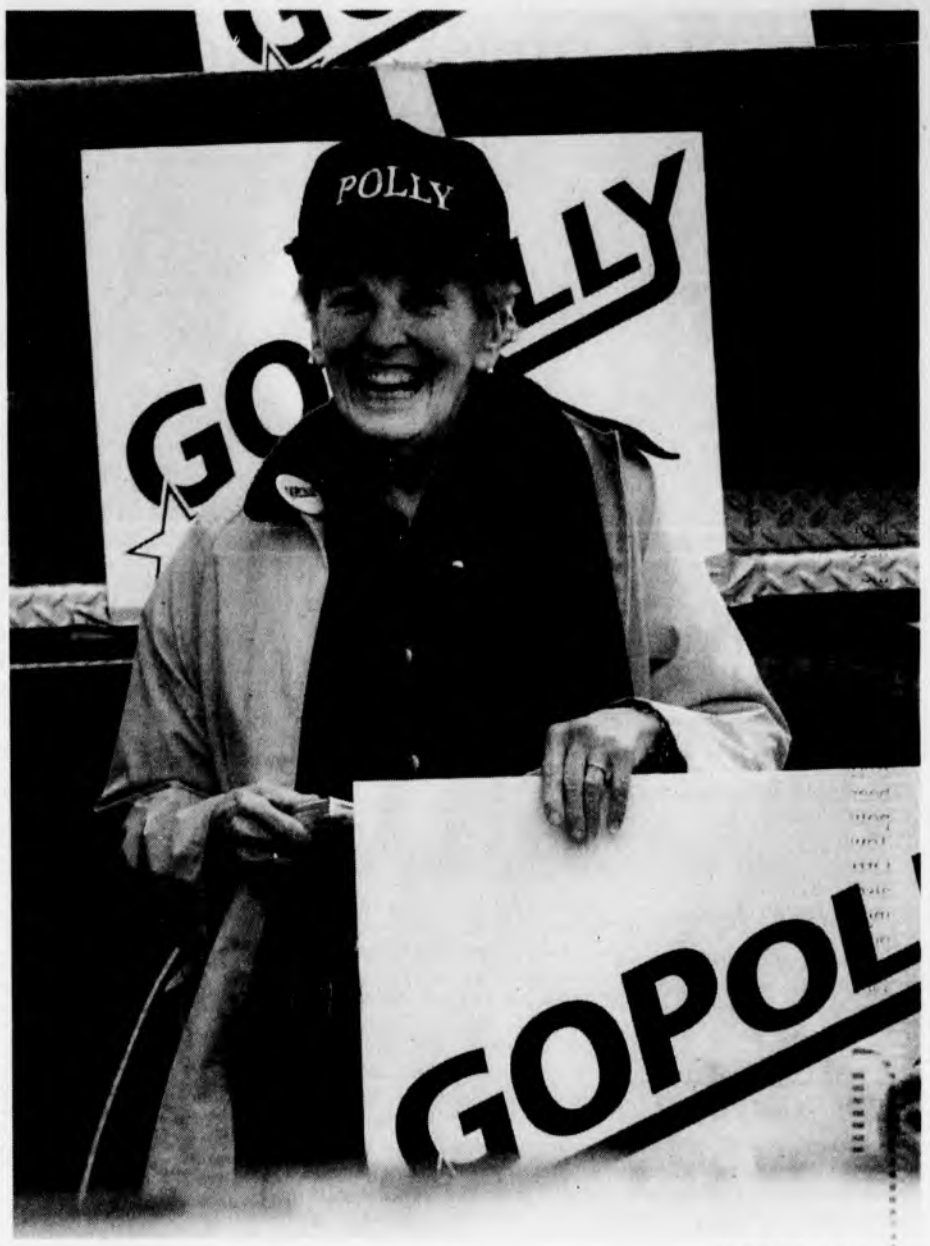
O'Donnell said the race would have "a novelty factor" to it that would draw the attention of the Boston press. "You usually don't see someone of Polly's experience running at this time of life."

O'Donnell noted Logan attracted a lot of out-of-district press in her race for reelection to the Republican State Committee, of which she is the vice chairman. He also said no one else has stepped forward to take Bradley on.

Don Hussey, chairman of the Hingham Republican Town Committee, described Logan as a real go-getter.

"She has boundless energy, loves politics and would be a formidable candidate," he says. "And she wants to do what she can to help Romney bring the balance back to Beacon Hill."

Logan said it wouldn't be hard to gear her campaign up. Her signs for the State Committee race say "GOPolly" and don't name an office, so they can also be used for the representative race. She also has a web site up and running.



"If elected I wouldn't have any trouble finding my way around the Statehouse," Logan laughs. She is a founder of the Doric Dames State House guides, volunteers who provide tours of the building.

She said her recent campaign energized her even more.

"I loved going door-to-door," said Logan, who has not run for elected office other than for the State Committee.

She explained she's being encouraged to run for the Third Plymouth District and would have gladly done so earlier in life, but she was too busy with a 50-room house and lots of Logans to look after.

"I don't even have a dog right now, so it would be a good

SNOW BETTER THAN RAIN

Well, a storm is coming as I write this week's column and I am pretty excited. I know, how could I be but really, isn't it better to have snow in March than to have all that rain? It is so gross when all the mud is everywhere! At least the snow lasts only long enough in March to play in for a few days and then it is gone. Stay safe, have fun and take the time to play a bit if you can.

COMMUNITY GARDENERS

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its monthly meeting at the Second Congregational Church Bates Hall Tuesday, March 23 at 9 a.m.. This month, through slides and lecture, Joseph Hughes will address the types, history, and design elements of the Japanese Garden. Listening to Joseph and seeing his slides should make a very enjoyable and informative morning for all that attend.

PARENTS' FORUM

Parents of pre-teens and teens, mark your calendars! Parents' Forum, a popular non-profit group based in Cambridge, will present a 2-part seminar on Tuesday April 6 and 13 from 7-9pm at the Cohasset Library.

Focusing on effective parenting skills, the sessions will cover relationship-building, strategies for better communication, and finding balance. This workshop is sponsored by Project Safeguard, a community consortium that includes parents, clergy, health education professionals, the PSO, and the Cohasset Public Schools. To reserve a space, mail a check for $20 payable to "Project Safeguard", along with your name and phone number, to: Project Safeguard, c/o Cohasset Middle/High School, 143 Pond St., Cohasset 02025. For more information, call 781-383-6190.

FLIPFLOPS FOR SCHOOL SPIRIT

The Middle/High School PSO is currently selling Cohasset Flipflops by Toegoz. These summertime shoes are great for in and out of the water and are designed for school and town spirit! They are selling fast at $20 a pair. A profit of $10 from each sale will go back into the Middle/High School classroom. Toegoz's will be sold at Mr. Skipper Night which will be held at the Middle/High school on March 26. Organizers look forward to seeing everyone at this fun-filled event. If you would like to purchase a pair of Toegoz please give Lucia Flibotte a call a 781 383 2792, while supplies last.

SEMESTER IN SOUTH AFRICA

Wow, what a lot of talented young men and women from Cohasset who have been recognized in the following areas. Lauren M. Smith of Cohasset, a junior at Colby College in Maine, is spending the spring semester in South Africa enrolled in a course of studies at the University of Cape Town and the Colby-Bates-Bowdoin Center in Cape Town. Lauren, a graduate of Thayer Academy, is the daughter of William and Maureen Smith. At Colby, Lauren is majoring in sociology and English with a concentration in creative writing. Lauren, if you have time to let Cohasset know how your are doing and what it is like in South Africa, please let us know.

DEAN'S LIST

Jason Richard Brown and Charles W. Dean have been named to the dean's list at Curry College in Milton for the fall 2003 term.

Vincent Gratta, sophomore management major, has been named to the dean's list for the fall 2003 term at Bryant College in Smithfield, R.I.

Corinna Noering, a political science major in the College of Arts & Sciences, is on the dean's list for the fall 2003 semester at the University of Vermont.

Maura Duffy, who is majoring in nursing, has been named to the dean's list at Northeastern University where Maura is also an honors student.

On the dean's list for the fall 2003 semester at UMass Amherst are Susan M. Dane, Elizabeth N. Hassan, Ashley E. Koed and Taylor A. Toth. Congratulations to all of you on a job well done.

ELECTION SUPPER

The Annual Election Supper, a springtime tradition for decades, will be held at the Beechwood Congregational Church on Church St. in Cohasset. Candidates for town offices and voters/diners are invited to get together to discuss politics before and after dinner on Thursday evening, March 25 at 6:30. Dinner will include stuffed chicken breast, dilled carrots, peas, cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes, cake and ice cream as well as beverages. Before dinner, all candidates will be introduced to those in attendance. Tickets are $8 for adults and $4 for children. To make reservations, call 781-383-1298.

TEAM CAPTAINS FOR RELAY

The Relay For Life in Cohasset planning committee is currently seeking local residents to serve as team captains and/or team members. Relay For Life teams raise money by gathering sponsors to support their participation in the Relay. Teams of walkers keep a continuous presence on a local school track throughout the overnight event, walking in shifts to raise funds for American Cancer Society programs of research, education, advocacy and local patient services. The first Team Captain's meeting is set for Wednesday, April 7 from 6:30 – 7:30pm at the Cohasset High School Cafeteria, Pond Street. Anyone interested in finding out more about Relay For Life and how to join is welcome to attend. The Relay For Life in Cohasset is set for June 18-19 at Cohasset High School.

ASP FESTIVAL

The Cohasset Appalachia Service Project's third annual Appalachian Festival will be held on Saturday, April 3, at Cohasset Middle High School (143 Pond Street). This important fundraising event includes a southern, family-style dinner at 6:00 pm followed by an Appalachian Marketplace featuring a slide show, special Appalachian crafts, a quilt raffle and dessert. The festival concludes with a fun Blue Grass concert featuring local favorite: "Quarter Moon." Tickets are on sale now at St. Anthony's, St. Stephen's, First Parish and Second Congregational Churches and Buttonwood Bookstore, and are priced as follows: for Dinner and Concert: adults- $20; children - $8, family maximum - $50. For more information visit www.CohassetASP.org.

Please make sure to get all information to me no later than mondays by noon! I write the column on Monday evenings and it is very hard to have to accommodate all of the late arrivals that come in on Tuesdays!

Osgood third-grade teachers are all about teamwork

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Third grade is a time to learn about teamwork. Whether in school, on the field, or at home, cooperation is a lesson that is constantly being reinforced. Therefore, it only makes sense that the third grade teachers at Osgood School would follow the same principal, sharing ideas, materials, and strategies, to ensure the children in their care receive the best education possible.

Osgood third graders are divided between the six classrooms of Kathleen Hepp, Emily Fortin, Kristin O'Sullivan, Kelly Gately, Beth Owens-Rigby, and Jeanne Hanson. Special Education teacher Trish Baldwin works exclusively with third grade students as well. Together, these seven teachers have melded into one cohesive unit, turning the task of teaching a grade of students into an opportunity to form a united teaching front, full of exciting, diverse teaching concepts, which each child can benefit from no matter whose class they are in on a daily basis.

— TEACHERS WITH CLASS —

While Hepp and Fortin are the newest teachers to the group, and are both in their first year of teaching in Cohasset, both brought many new ideas with them.

"Every time we get a new teacher, it helps even more," said Hanson, adding the more ideas, the better teachers they can all become.

Hepp said she taught in California for four years before she came to Osgood, and had taught for one year prior to that at another school in Massachusetts.

"I came from a school where there was only one teacher per grade," she said, adding with such a small school, there isn't the opportunity to bounce ideas off of other teachers of the same grade level, because they don't exist.

"It's so wonderful to be able to talk to other teachers," she said.

Fortin agreed and said having a large group of grade level teachers is very beneficial because of the added resources it provides.

For O'Sullivan, who had previously taught in New York, coming to Cohasset was actually downsizing, because there were a total of 15 teachers in her previous grade.

"I can't believe how small we are," said O'Sullivan.

O'Sullivan went on to say that, with more teachers, there are certainly more resources, but by having a smaller group of six classroom teachers, it allows them to get to know each other better.

The opportunity to get to know each other better exists through "extra curricular" activities as well, as many teachers participate in professional development events.

"The level of professionalism in the building, both through furthering education and professional development, is wonderful to see," said Fortin.

Owens-Rigby agreed and said a recent teacher study group was held on overcoming dyslexia and 26 teachers signed up to attend.

"A lot of parents and teachers have heard about it, and it affects all grade levels," she said, adding it's always nice to see teachers take the initiative to learn more about their profession.

But it's not just the professionalism the teachers say they like about their colleagues, it's the fact that everyone at Osgood, not just those teachers in the third grade, seems to have the same focus on putting the children's needs first.

"I like the whole feeling," said Hanson. "There isn't a competitive feeling of one teacher against another, and the whole school is child-friendly."

Gately agreed and said: "Everyone does their best to make accommodations for each individual child."

However, with the reorganization of the schools which will take place this fall, grade three will move up to Deer Hill, meaning the third grade teachers will find themselves leaving the community they have grown to love, to become members of a new one at Deer Hill.

"It's a paradox; it's not that we're not happy to go there, but we're very happy here," said Hanson, adding that moving up to Deer Hill will provide the opportunity to see former students as well as gain access to additional resources.

"This is very much a primary school," she said of Osgood, adding the library at Deer Hill will have a wider variety of materials for students at the third grade level.

The teachers said they have been very involved in the discussions surrounding the reconfiguration, and have already begun to implement programs that will help ease the transition. Students in grade three have had older fourth grade "buddies" come down from Deer Hill to read books together and do other activities. When students make the move up to Deer Hill, they will already have made some acquaintances. Soon, the third grade students will make the trip up to Deer Hill to visit their buddies and become more familiar with their new school.

These seven teachers have melded into one cohesive unit...

Until the reorganization occurs, though, there will still be lessons to be learned and the third grade teachers have a variety of special activities they have planned to bring the lessons to life.

The third graders have one unit of study called "Among the generations," and part of that unit includes a trip to the Senior Center to have lunch with a senior citizen. Students conduct interviews with their partner, to find out what life was like when the senior was their age.

Students also learn about the solar system, and will visit the planetarium at the Museum of Science, and will learn about the history of Massachusetts, including immigration focusing on the Pilgrims.

No matter what lessons their students learn, the teachers said they continue to learn from each other and support each other in any way they can. For the rest of the school year, the third grade will continue to make adjustments to get ready for the transition next fall, which with all the support, will no doubt be a smooth one.

on site, Kasameyer said he asked if he would look at an additional tree, just feet from the island that he thought looked decayed. Kasameyer said he was told that tree did have decay throughout it, and had been damaged at the base, most likely by a car hitting it. He said he was told that tree should be removed as well.

Kasameyer said he then went to Haddad to let him know Bartlett's recommendations. Kasameyer said he asked Haddad if he should proceed and have both trees taken down, but Haddad said he only recalls having been asked about the tree on the island.

"I don't want it to be a point of contention, but I don't remember him asking about the second tree," Haddad said. "He may have, and if he says he did, I'm sure he did — Rob doesn't lie — but I honestly don't remember him asking about the second tree."

However, Kasameyer said he spoke with Haddad about the recommendations from Bartlett and told him he planned to take both trees down, plant junipers in the center of the island in that tree's place, and surround the new bushes with daffodils. Kasameyer said Haddad told him the plan sounded fine, and he could move forward with it.

Haddad said regardless, after speaking with Kasameyer, "I should have said go to the tree warden," but he gave his permission and admits, "It was a mistake."

Swanson said if a resident in Cohasset would like to cut down a tree on town property, they must inform him first. He will make a site visit and determine the condition of the tree and whether it needs to be removed. If removal is necessary, he will be responsible for making those contacts. However, if a resident wants to remove a tree because it's a nuisance and there is no threat if it remains, there must be a shade tree hearing, which is advertised in the newspaper and posted for two weeks, Swanson said. Shade tree hearings are conducted by the Board of Selectmen.

Kasameyer said he became involved with the "Adopt an Island" program to help beautify the town, and thought he was following what the program was set up to do, and would have changed his plans if necessary.

"I checked with the town every step of the way," he said, adding he only did what he was given permission to do. "I would have done whatever the town said."

Haddad said he apologizes for the mistake and assures residents, "This was not done maliciously," adding he is doing the best he can to work with residents and members of the Central Cemetery Committee to remedy the situation surrounding both trees.

As far as the rumor that the tree was a memorial to Lyons, Glenn Pratt, who is on the Veterans Memorial Committee said it's false. "It wasn't a tree that was planted in memory of Captain Lyons," said Pratt, adding as far as he knows, the island was turned into a memorial site in 1996. Peter Laugelle said he planted the pin oak in 1982, at the request of Edward Tower, former President of the Central Cemetery Committee, and confirmed it is not a dedicated tree. Any tree in town that has been dedicated to someone has a bronze plaque designating it is a dedicated tree, and the pin oak on the island was planted only as an ornamental tree, not in Capt. Lyons' memory.

SAMANTHA BROWN PHOTOS

Residents are upset that a pin oak tree was removed from the island at the intersection of Joy Place and North Main Street. Rob Kasameyer adopted the island, located across the street from his house.

Kasameyer said because his house is located across the street from the island, having the trees removed "does improve my view. My house looks at Joy Place." However, he said his view to date has been of a diseased tree that had obviously not been very well taken care of and was unhealthy. While he said most people may not have noticed the condition of the trees, he can see them every day from his yard and noticed their poor condition. Kasameyer added, "We had a view of the water before," and the tree removal hasn't made much of a difference.

However, arborist Garry Barrow and Swanson both said the pin oak on the island was not in bad shape, and was only in need of some structural pruning. Neither one recalls the condition of the white ash by the cemetery and both said they didn't have the opportunity to take a look because the trees were removed so fast.

Local environmentalist Jim Shipsky said he worries from everything that has transpired, it will set a precedent for other citizens. "If a private citizen can take down a tree because they want to, what else will they begin to do?" Shipsky added what has happened "shows a tragic misunderstanding of the proper relationship between humans and nature. Humans think they can do anything to nature and there won't be any consequences. That attitude is destroying this planet."

All affected parties were invited to a meeting with Haddad yesterday morning to discuss possible remedies to the situation. While neither tree can be brought back, Haddad hopes an agreement can be made to plant something in their places. Shipsky said in the end, he hopes the ultimate outcome of the incident is that is will serve as "the catalyst that could prevent other tragedies in the future."

Trees will be replaced

Roughly 15 concerned residents were in attendance for the meeting held by Town Manager Mark Haddad on the two trees removed from the corner of Joy Place and North Main Street, and an agreement was made that both would be replaced.

Rob Kasameyer who removed the trees, will be responsible for a portion of the costs to replace the pin oak, formerly located on the island, with another pin oak, and the white ash with another tree, possibly of a different variety.

Anne Montague, president of the Cohasset Central Cemetery Committee said at the meeting she would like to see either another white ash or something very similar to it planted on the cemetery side. Because the cemetery is listed on the National Register as a colonial, rustic cemetery, it is only fitting to keep the trees in the area simple and rustic as well, and not flowering. She said because the island is at the entrance to the cemetery, she would be happy if all that was planted there was a new tree as well.

"Junipers are nice and daffodils are nice, but daffodils will be dead by the Memorial Day parade," she said.

The ideal time to plant a tree is in either the spring or fall, said Tree Warden Andy Swanson, adding once the weather warms up, it will be the perfect time to plant the trees. Swanson will be responsible for making sure the new trees are watered and taken care of after planting.

Haddad said he is waiting to receive quotes as to what it will cost to buy and plant two new trees, as well as grind the stumps of the two former trees. "When the bills come in, we'll split the cost. I'll personally contribute to it as well," he said.

meeting the article. Selectman Fred Hoed said he did not feel comfortable voting at all until more questions can be answered, and with Merle Brown and Tom Callahan in favor, the vote was split.

This year will be the third year in a row the Growth and Development Committee has tried to bring its bylaw before Town Meeting. Member Mark DeGiacomo said 3 Jerusalem Lane "is the poster child" for the bylaw, and would set up a peer review process when a home is over a certain size, which will ensure the town doesn't face similar problems in the future.

The owners of 3 Jerusalem Lane had obtained a building permit and construction was 80 percent complete, when they were ordered by the ZBA to stop work on their home. Neighbors had complained that Building Inspector Robert Egan had erred in issuing a building permit without the homeowners first obtaining a special permit because they were building on a non-conforming lot, and the ZBA agreed.

Bob Sturdy of the planning board said because 3 Jerusalem Lane was issued a building permit illegally, the same kind of problem is not likely to happen again. By imposing the new bylaw, "It gives abutters the right to endless appeal," and if an abutter has a beautiful view from their home they don't want interfered with, theoretically they could tie the property up for years.

But chairman of the Growth and Development Committee, Rick Swanborg, said the bylaw is intended to put a subjective process in place for the Planning Board, so the town will have some control over large houses, much like is done in commercial zoning.

"We thought this would be a better way to do it, rather than tweak setbacks mathematically," to control development on sites, he said. He added that the bylaw is not only based on a bylaw adopted by the town of Weston, which was approved by the Attorney General, but it has been looked over and been changed by many people in Cohasset over the last few years and at this point, he believes it's the best the committee can do to control large houses. "It adds a little bit more of a peer review process, and at this point, we'd just like to have the town vote on it," he said.

Planning Board member Peter Pratt, who was the lone vote against indefinite postponement on his board, said the bylaw would provide guidelines for both the homeowner and abutters, and help catch what neighbors see as "mansionization" in their own back yards, before it is too late. If there had been a bylaw such as the one proposed, 3 Jerusalem Lane might not have become an issue because abutters would have been notified and problems could have been worked out before construction began.

Sullivan asked whether under the bylaw, a homeowner could be told what size their house should be, to which Swanborg said as he interprets the bylaw, "sure." DeGiacomo said he wasn't so sure he would interpret the bylaw the same way, and thinks the size of the house could be conditioned, and criteria would be applied to deal with the location and preserving open space, but a homeowner wouldn't necessarily be told what size the house had to be.

"Zoning articles are dangerous things," said Planning Board Chairman Al Moore, adding he thinks the bylaw as currently written is flawed. "I have no problem letting the people vote, but I'm going to vote too and I'm voting against it." He said he feels the bylaw infringes on people's rights and makes them jump through hoops.

"This is a big brother article," said Sturdy, adding it sets up specific criteria like only allowing homeowners to landscape with plants that are indigenous to the area. "Half of all the things I plant are not indigenous," he said, adding, "I might want a redwood tree, but I couldn't have one, but I could plant the entire property with poison ivy because that's indigenous."

Sullivan said, "The Planning Board and the ZBA say the bylaw is flawed and they're the ones that are going to be dealing with this. You're handing it to two boards who are saying 'We don't think this is right.' Al and Bob have been on the Planning Board a long time, and I don't think it's fair to bring this to the community."

The large house site plan review was modeled after a bylaw adopted by the town of Weston. It will ensure any proposals for construction of residential buildings greater than 3,500 square feet or 10 percent of the lot area up to 6,000 square feet, will be subject to a site plan review process by the Planning Board. The intention of the bylaw is to insure abutters are notified if a "large house," is going to be built in a given neighborhood, and that houses are built in a manner consistent with the surrounding properties.

Selectman Callahan, who also sits on the Growth and Development Committee and has been heavily involved in the Master Plan, said the article was drafted as a response to the overwhelming concern that the town's character needs to be preserved, which is a main goal of the Master Plan. Some refer to the large houses being built as a "mansionization" of the town, and this bylaw would set up guidelines for regulation.

The Annual Town Meeting will be held Saturday, March 27 at 10 a.m. in the Sullivan Gymnasium at Cohasset High School.

Water quality survey sent to all customers

The Water Commission has mailed a Taste & Odor Questionnaire to all of its customers in Cohasset to find out what people think about tap water quality.

"We want to hear from all of our customers about any concerns they have about the taste, odor, and appearance of their tap water," said John McNabb, chairman of the Water Commission. "We urge everyone to fill out the questionnaire an return it to us soon."

"Our tap water meets or exceeds all applicable health standards," said McNabb, "but taste and odor are not regulated. We are going beyond the requirements of the state and federal government to make every possible improvement not just to the quality of the water but to the aspects which are also very important to people – how the water tastes and smells."

The questionnaire is part of the Water Commission's overall program to improve drinking water quality which will include testing of the tap water in a representative sample of locations in Cohasset. The Water Commission's consultant, Norfolk Ram, took an initial round of 12 tap water samples in November, and will take the first round of expanded sampling of at least 40 locations later this Spring.

"Taste and odor issues can come from any and all components of the water system," said McNabb, "including the water mains that deliver water to the home, the storage tanks, the treatment plant, and the source of the water, Lily Pond and the Aaron River Reservoir. We are currently closely examining all of these areas to see what we can do to improve drinking water quality."

Completed questionnaires should be returned to the Cohasset Water Department, 339 King St.

OPINION

Shooting the messenger

Here at the Cohasset Mariner, we take great pride in our editorial pages. In fact, year after year the Cohasset Mariner receives more letters to the editor than any of its sister Mariner newspapers with the exception of the Hingham Journal, even though Cohasset is one of the smaller towns.

We're also proud of our readership. We reach more than 80 percent of the households in town, a circulation penetration that is unheard of with most newspapers whether weekly or daily and is one of the highes among all Community Newspaper Company papers

The Cohasset Mariner — your hometown paper — has become the means through which the vast majority of residents find out what's going on in town. We sit through endless meetings to bring you the latest news and we spend hours on the telephone and in interviews to get background for "non-meeting" news and feature stories. This is all done with one-half of an editor, one-quarter of a photographer, one-sixth of a sports editor, a reporter, a cartoonist, an around town columnist, and a high school sports correspondent.

We have never tried to win any popularity contest but have endeavored to present a balance of stories with balanced, comprehensive coverage. We are determined to report the news, both good and bad and won't be intimidated from that mission. With that being said, some of our readers, at times, think we haven't been as fair as we should have on a particular issue and we can accept that criticism. However, we always strive for fairness.

In these turbulent times in Cohasset, it's important for all of us to remember what a treasure a local paper is. Few towns in the country have a weekly newspaper totally dedicated to covering their town alone; most local papers are regional publications including a cluster of communities.

Those of us currently at the helm of the Cohasset Mariner are its stewards and hope the publication continues to thrive well past our time. We understand that our readership has high expectations of us – but they are no higher than those we have of ourselves. We wouldn't have won five New England Press Association General Excellence awards without high standards.

But we're disturbed about the current negativity around town directed toward the paper. We realize not everyone is happy when we print letters for the override and not everyone is happy when we print letters against the override, but we are providing ample space for both sides. Cohasset letter writers are almost always verbose and our fellow editors continually say we should cut the letters and limit the length. But we respond, "This is Cohasset – it's different here."

Lately we've either witnessed ourselves or heard about certain town boards and town officials "trashing the Mariner" either because they didn't like a particular question of the week, letter, commentary or news story.

We heard rumors that some people objected to the Mariner editor sitting on the panel for the upcoming Selectmen's debate at Town Hall because of a perceived bias on the police issue. At it turned out, none of the candidates had a problem with the Mariner editor's participation.

We accept justified criticism; we make typos, we make errors and occasionally we make mistakes in judgment. If you don't like a headline or the tone of a story we welcome your comments; if you don't think we're being fair, let's air that out. We're easily reached by telephone or email.

But at the same time, love and support your Mariner, as we do. An awful lot of hard work and dedication goes into to producing your hometown paper week in and week out.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Haddad apologizes for the removal

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to take this opportunity to apologize to the residents of Cohasset for an error that I made in carrying out my duties as Town Manager.

Last year, the Board of Selectmen instituted an "Adopt an Island" program that encouraged residents to help the Town maintain public locations. This program has been very successful as many residents have stepped forward to assist the Town by maintaining public property. One such public location, the island located at the intersection of Joy Place and North Main Street, was "adopted" by resident Rob Kasameyer.

Mr. Kasameyer volunteered to maintain the island and enhance its appearance. In early February he contacted me to request permission to remove the tree located in the center of the island due to its condition and his proposed plan for the island. At this time, I should have directed Mr. Kasameyer to the Tree Warden and the Board of Selectmen for a hearing to determine whether or not the tree should be removed. I did not do that and approved his request to remove the tree.

For this, I apologize to the residents. Mr. Kasameyer and I are in the process of working with neighbors and other interested residents to correct this mistake. I appreciate your patience and will make sure that this does not happen again in the future.

Mark W. Haddad
Town Manager

Tree removal meant to help adopted island

TO THE EDITOR:

After the Selectmen enacted Cohasset's version of "adopt an island," I asked Mark Haddad if the Town would mind if I take care of the triangle where Joy Place meets North Main Street. He asked what I had in mind. I indicated that I would like to plant some perennials, perhaps some low shrubs and that I would bring in an arborist to make recommendations on what should be done about the tree which was tangled in the electric wires and had been chopped back in several places over the years. Mark said that would be fine.

I have planted about 100 daffodils and brought in a professional arborist. The arborist indicated it was the wrong tree in the wrong place. He stated that it would always interfere with the low hanging electrical lines directly above, and its proximity to the street would continue to take a serious toll on its health. He recommended taking the tree down and planting something more appropriate in its place.

I also asked the arborist to look at a nearby tree on town land outside the cemetery. The arborist indicated this tree had been damaged at the base apparently by a car hitting it, and had quite a bit of decay throughout the tree. He recommended this tree also be taken down.

I talked with Mark about the arborist's recommendations. Mark asked about my plan in more detail. I proposed to take the trees down, and plant about five junipers in the center of the island following the general shape of the island. The junipers would be hardy enough for the location but remain low enough so as not to obstruct the driver's view of Main Street. The junipers would be surrounded by the daffodils.

Mark indicated that sounded fine and I could proceed.

I did. I am discussing how best to improve the island with the neighbors including the Cohasset Central Cemetery, as well as Carl Sestito, head of the Town's DPW, and am incorporating their thoughts in the plan. I believe we will have an attractively landscaped island in the spring.

'As lovely as a tree'

TO THE EDITOR:

The last line of the famous Joyce Kilmer poem reads, "Poems are made by fools like me, but only God can make a tree." To think a greater fool would remove a tree for the pleasure of his view, and an even greater fool would give permission for such an act. I cannot comprehend. Being a Vietnam combat veteran drives the hurt even deeper. One of the trees removed for this selfish gesture was a tree planted to honor the wonderful Cohasset boys that died in that cruel war.

The world being what it is, we must gather and enjoy every bit of life we have. The laughter of children, the sound of the surf, birds in flight, the buds of spring, and the beauty of trees. The death of the 30 plus year old trees can not be reversed and our young brave veterans that gave the ultimate sacrifice can only be remembered. This Memorial Day as we pass by the spot where those once stood. Joy Place on our way to honor our dead, my heart will feel sadder that in past years.

..."A tree that looks at God all day, And lifts her leafy arms to pray."...

Let the voters decide on same-sex marriage

TO THE EDITOR:

The right to vote!

In last week's Mariner Garrett Bradley's column explained his support for initiatives that would give Massachusetts citizens the right to vote on civil unions and same-sex marriage. Rep. Bradley is courageous to stand up to those who would pre-empt the desire of many to be heard on this important issue.

Appearing opposite Bradley's column was an "open letter" to Bradley urging him to let stay the decision of the Supreme Court. The author, Chartis Tebbetts of Cohasset, lamented that as a democrat candidate for the legislature 12 years ago, she hoped that she would have "the power to cast just this type of vote...that truly mattered" of course, Ms. Tebbetts is entitled to her beliefs, just as am I. I believe that the "power" should be with the voters, and clearly should not reside with anyone who believes I am not enlightened or otherwise incapable of making an appropriate decision on an important issue.

We should praise Rep. Bradley for seeking to preserve the voice of the voters. I believe we are seeing that people do want to be able to have a say on many issues — statewide and in Cohasset — and they do not want to be dictated to or be under the guardianship of a select few.

Headline wrong, story misleading

TO THE EDITOR:

I was extremely disappointed with your misrepresentation of the March 8 meeting evening that involved Rep. Garrett Bradley and 200 of his constituents. The vast majority, if not all, of those attending were his constituents, not from "towns across the South Shore". And the page one headline was wholly incorrect. The people who were upset were not "gays". The only way you could have accurately used that word was if you also included the word "straights", as there were a mix of both — and people do not go out to meetings wearing pink or blue or whatever to show our sexual orientation. The four people you quoted by name are all straight! By your headline, you have contributed to the propaganda that the issue of same-sex marriage is a "gay" issue, rather than one of civil rights for all persons, equality under the law, and the integrity of our Constitution.

The meeting with Rep. Bradley was co-sponsored by the No Place For Hate Committees of the four towns that Garrett represents, along with MassEquality. The ADL, from which the NPFH effort sprung, is part of MassEquality.

I, along with many of his constituents, have also met with Sen. Robert Hedlund, a Republican, to discuss his stance on this issue. When you believe in equality, justice, and individual rights, you certainly have an interested audience in the Republican Party. We who are concerned about same-sex marriage rights do not feel that we "waste our energy on Republicans".

You owe everyone there an apology. Please educate your readers about the nature of this issue and the actual complexity of the event. Headlines matter, and this one was terrible.

HEALTH NOTES

What you should know about Hepatitis A

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

You probably know that Hepatitis A has been in the news recently. A few weeks ago, a teacher at the Osgood School was diagnosed with the virus. The teacher was from Marshfield, and that town is conducting a thorough investigation to determine the source of the infection and its extent. In Cohasset, letters were sent to parents giving information about the disease, and the excitement faded when most people realized that spread of the disease was very unlikely in a school setting, and that the recent outbreaks probably originated from transmissions in the January time period. Nevertheless, the news still contains information about outbreaks all over New England. It's therefore probably appropriate to give some facts from the Center for Disease Control, which may give you some idea about the probability of contagion for those in Cohasset.

Hepatitis A is a liver disease caused by hepatitis A virus, which is spread from person to person by putting something in the mouth that has been contaminated with the stool of a person with hepatitis A. This type of transmission is called "fecal-oral." For this reason, the virus is more easily spread in areas calling for a high level of sanitary conditions or where good personal hygiene is absolutely essential. For example, in food service establishments such as those involved in recent New England reports of the virus. The likelihood of spread in a school environment is highly unusual. Most infections result from close contact with a household member or partner who has hepatitis A. Casual contact, as in the usual office, factory, or school setting, does not usually spread the virus.

Children with hepatitis A virus infection may not have any signs or symptoms of the disease. Adults almost always have symptoms of a varying degree. If symptoms are present, they usually occur abruptly and may include fever, tiredness, loss of appetite, nausea, abdominal discomfort, dark urine, and jaundice (yellowing of the skin and eyes). Symptoms usually last less than two months; a few persons are ill for as long as six months. The average incubation period for hepatitis A is 28 days (range: 15–50 days).

Hepatitis A is a liver disease caused by hepatitis A virus, which is spread from person to person by putting something in the mouth that has been contaminated with the stool of a person with hepatitis A.

A blood test (IgM anti-HAV) is needed to diagnose hepatitis A. Talk to your doctor or someone from the Board of Health, if you suspect that you have been exposed to hepatitis A or any type of viral hepatitis.

Always wash your hands after using the bathroom, changing a diaper, or before preparing or eating food.

Two products are used to prevent hepatitis A virus infection: immune globulin and hepatitis A vaccine.

Here are some facts about Immune globulin: Immune globulin can be administered during pregnancy and breast-feeding.

Immune globulin is a preparation of antibodies that can be given before exposure for short-term protection against hepatitis A and for persons who have already been exposed to hepatitis A virus. Immune globulin must be given within two weeks after exposure to hepatitis A virus for maximum protection.

Hepatitis A vaccine has been licensed in the United States for use in persons 2 years of age and older. The vaccine is recommended (before exposure to hepatitis A virus) for persons who are more likely to get hepatitis A virus infection or is more likely to get seriously ill if they do get hepatitis A. The vaccines currently licensed in the United States are HAVRIX® (manufactured by GlaxoSmithKline) and VAQTA® (manufactured by Merck & Co., Inc).

Here are some facts about the Vaccine: Although data on long-term protection are limited, estimates suggest that protection will last for about 20 years. Protection against hepatitis A begins four weeks after the first dose of hepatitis A vaccine. A second dose is necessary for long-term protection.

Hepatitis is not life threatening, but it's not pleasant, so use good hygiene and wash your hands.

Budget situation not unique to Cohasset

COMMENTARY

COLEMAN NEE

As a parent and a taxpayer, I am supporting the upcoming Proposition 2-1/2 override on the next election ballot.

First off, no one likes higher taxes, including me. However, the situation Cohasset finds itself in is not unique or uncommon for these trying times. The reality is that we, as a commonwealth, are facing a severe budget crisis and our economy is stagnant. The tough choices facing Cohasset are the same ones facing public officials in Milton, Concord, Great Barrington and Orleans.

Unfunded mandates, rising expenses and needed infrastructure improvements are causing all of our cities and towns to make difficult decisions. Fortunately, thanks to proper budgeting and the hard work of dedicated volunteers and officials, our economic situation is in much better shape than many of these other municipalities.

We could find ourselves in a worse kettle of fish. Recently in Winthrop, 500 of the high school's 600 students walked out of school to protest budget cuts that will eliminate all school sports and drastically reduce other programs. Their protest was in response to the town meeting's rejection of a $6 million Proposition 2-1/2 override. This vote will probably mean teacher layoffs, fewer electives, possibly the end of advanced placement classes and cuts to other town departments in that community.

Last January, School Committee members in the town of Westborough adopted a $30.4 million budget for fiscal 2005 that was then $820,000 over the levy limit and called for the elimination of 16 staff positions, including 13 teachers. Without additional funds, school officials argued they would have to cut 36 staff positions, including 31 full-time teachers.

Our situation is much better. Cohasset's override is for $400,000 (a relatively small figure compared to many other areas) and School Committee President Rick Flynn deserves great kudos for his detailed and expansive explanation of how the Committee arrived at this figure. Teachers' salaries are under contract and not negotiable. The costs of maintaining the schools have gone up universally. And, the federal and state governments are continuing to push unfunded mandates on cities and towns for items such as special education.

At the end of the day, neither feeling guilty nor being a school parent should be a factor on which you make a decision regarding the override.

Do we cut our core services to make up this shortfall? That is an option, but it is, in my opinion, a pennywise and pound foolish approach. Also, as some have suggested, there may be creative ways to raise more revenue for our school operating budget. These concepts should be explored in full over a reasonable period of time. Perhaps those interested in finding alternative funding sources could create a committee to evaluate and analyze the benefits and costs associated with each idea. However, at this late stage in the game, statements such as "Maybe if we did this..." should not be used as excuse to deprive our students of a first-class education today or to negatively impact every homeowner owner in Cohasset who has realized huge gains in the value of their property due to our school system's outstanding reputation.

At the end of the day, neither feeling guilty nor being a school parent should be a factor on which you make a decision regarding the override. I believe you should ask yourself two questions: "Are we doing the best we can in budgeting for the schools and other vital town services?" and "Are we willing to cut at the heart of things that makes this town so special in order to avoid making the more difficult choice?"

I know how I will answer those questions, and I don't feel the least bit guilty about it.

Straits Pond flushing clarified

TO THE EDITOR:

My name is Bill McNamara. I was born and brought up in Hull and have lived on Straits Pond, located in Cohasset and Hull, for 65 years. I have been the tide gate manager and consultant for the Pond since the mid-90s when Town manager, at the time, Phil Lemnios, contracted me to be the Pond consultant to the Town Manager and the Board of Selectmen.

As tide gate manager, I am concerned about false information spread by certain State and Town officials and other individuals that the Pond is not flushed according to the required flushing schedule in my contract. I fill out the Straits Pond gate records each time that I flush the Pond, when I free the gates (for emergency) when they are frozen in the winter, during predicted storm floods, part of the 2001-2002 ENSR flushing study, and bridge condition inspections.

Here is the wording of the records that I fill out — average 18-24 pages of forms turned in per month.

1. This form must be completed for each open/close gate operation.

2. Forms must be turned in to the Town Manager's Office monthly.

3. Pond to be flushed at least 3 times weekly year round.

4. Failure to comply with Straits Pond flushing policy will result in disciplinary action.

Date, Time of arrival, Height of water when you open the gate, Time leaving, and any other observations or comments.

All records are public records and are available from the Town Manager's office.

As you can see from the contract and Pond flushing records, the Pond is flushed 3 times weekly or every other day and times of flushing occur according to the tide schedule. Under contract the flushing was done every other day since 1995 to 2001 from April to October. Since 2002 the flushing schedule was changed to year round. When there are people skating, snowmobiling, or ice boats on the Pond, as they were this year, the flushing schedule is altered. The schedule is also altered when there are storm events predicted.

This same flushing schedule was also recommended by a 2001-2002 ENSR flow study as flushing every fourth tidal cycle.

I have been telling Town officials about the poor condition of the West Corner bridge for 4 or 5 years. Gas, water and sewer pipes run under the bridge and through the culvert. During this winter more damage to the bridge occurred. In my estimation there should be no 24-hour flushing, as planned for this Spring, until the Bridge and culvert have been replaced.

Future restoration to the Pond, after the new bridge and culvert is replaced, includes 24-hour flushing schedule which according to studies would create a smaller and less deeper Pond surrounded by marsh areas along the edges. In my opinion, the residents of both Towns should be notified and have a say and be involved with any changes that are being planned.

For those who are concerned and who want more information about the future of Cohasset's and Hull's Straits Pond call me at 781-925-1988.

Professional police study makes sense

TO THE EDITOR:

Your recent editorial suggesting that Cohasset should follow the lead of some other towns and have an independent study of the police department makes sense. It seems that there are organizations in place, staffed by experienced police chiefs and other knowledgeable people, available to do this work. That would be more effective than a committee of residents, who may think they understand the mores of their own town better than strangers would; but who would lack experience in how police departments operate in other towns, and uninformed as to how they should operate within the morass of regulations and strictures that is the world of law enforcement.

Of course, a professional study costs something, probably $20,000, but would be well worth it if it reveals how to reduce police costs while improving its service to the town.

It's good that the proponents of the citizens' article have realized that investigating the investigation is like examining a situation by looking at it through the wrong end of a telescope, and now recommend a broad study. However, I contend that the study should be done by professionals with relevant law enforcement experience, not by amateurs.

The record shows that one of my ancestors, John Rogers of Marshfield, was fined for missing town meetings in 1651 and 1652. Served him right! Why did we stop fining people for shirking their civic responsibility? Could we institute a system by which chronic non-attendees have their attention stimulated by a 10 percent surcharge on their taxes? And maybe an additional 10 percent for uttering lame excuses like "what difference does my vote make against the organized voting groups", "it's all rigged" and similar inanities?

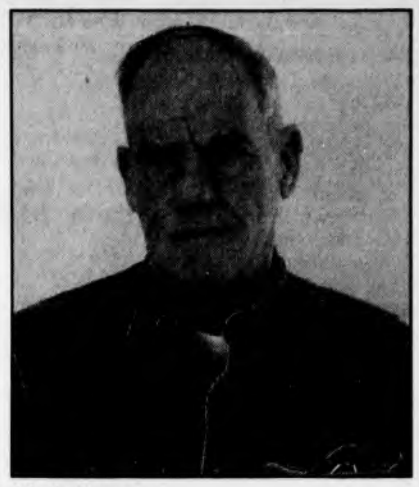
No sense of guilt in voting for override



TO THE EDITOR:

The voters of Cohasset are being asked to vote on another override. I have lived in this town for the past 14 years and will have five children in the school system next year. I am voting in favor of the override. I read a letter in last week's paper from a Sarah Gomez in which Ms. Gomez professes that her "top priority is to ensure the best possible education for my children..." yet she does not support the override. I can and do respect the opinions of the override opponents. I do however object to some of the statements made in Ms. Gomez's letter that minimizes the efforts and achievements we have accomplished as a community over the past 10 years.

We have undertaken many capital improvement projects over this time, any one of which would have overwhelmed many other towns. We have built and/or renovated all of our schools, constructed a new public works building, a new town library, and installed an extensive sewer system over this time period. A debt of gratitude is owed by many for the countless hours many have volunteered to complete these projects. The Building Facilities Committee put in hundreds of hours of time over an eight-year span to deliver a new school and the major renovations of the other

Merle Brown

Brown announces reelection bid to BOS

Merle recaps some of his many accomplishments during his tenure as selectman.

From the very being as a selectman, Merle pointed out the importance of communication between the Board of Selectmen and all other boards and committees, elected and appointed. One of his first actions in this direction was meeting with the chairman of the School Committee to develop a better working relationship with the schools. This relationship has increasingly become very successful over the years.

Another indication that increased communication is doing well is the very successful round table discussion held last year. This was possibly the first time in the town's history that so many people involved with town government came together in one room. Merle is looking forward to developing more of this cooperative effort.

Merle attends many of the advisory board meetings to listen and give his input when requested. Merle feels that continuous interest and involvement with other boards and committees helps him to learn and understand what their concerns are.

Merle's work with other boards and committees set-up the new master plan and digitized the maps of the town. All the different boards that use the town mapping can now work from the same plans. Merle would like to thank Rick Swanborg and the Growth and Development Committee for their hard work in making this possible.

Due to Merle's commitment to working with fellow selectmen and other people of the town, the Town has consolidated the Highway, Tree & Park Departments and the Recycling Transfer Facility (RTF) into the Department of Public Works (DPW). The result of this move has led to a more efficient department with the ability to accomplish their requirements. Merle would like to thank Harold Litchfield for stepping up to the plate to be the first appointed supervisor of the new DPW.

Merle was also instrumental in changing the Town Accountant and Treasurer positions from elected positions to appointed ones. Merle felt that in today's complex municipal government, the finance of the town requires highly qualified people in these positions. He believes we meet these requirements in Mike Buckley and Joe DeVito.

Merle has worked hard to set-up a Maintenance Department as part of the DPW. The Maintenance Department is responsible for all of the Town buildings; schools, fire/police station, Town Hall, library, RTF and the DPW. If Merle is reelected, one of his goals would be to continue working with the DPW to set up a computer program that would track all building maintenance. This would include daily maintenance tasks such small repairs i.e. door knobs and light bulb replacement to long term maintenance projects such as inside/outside painting and repairing or replacement of major items as necessary.

Merle was at the forefront of the Town's adoption of the "Pay As You Throw" system (PAYT) in place at the RTF. Through his efforts, the town received a substantial grant from the State to implement the program. The PAYT system not only increased our recycling rate (this year at 44 percent), but in the first year alone, we saved over $116,000.00 in trash removal. The Town was also able to reduce the sticker fee for the RTF by a large amount from $85 the first year to $50, the next year $50 to $35 and then down to $30. The town then made the sticker an "All Facilities" sticker for the one price, once again saving money in handling and bookkeeping costs.

Merle is not just a one night a week selectman. He is totally committed to the town he loves and the people in it. Merle is proud to tell new people he meets that he is from Cohasset. The response is almost always the same "Cohasset is such a great town". Merle looks forward to continuing to work for the Town and do whatever he can for the benefit of all its citizens.

If you would like to donate to Merle's reelection, please send your donation to: The Committee to Re-Elect Merle Brown 546 Beechwood St. Cohasset, MA 02025

March 25 election supper is planned

The annual Election Supper, a springtime tradition for decades, will be held at the Beechwood Congregational Church on Church Street. Candidates for town offices and voters/diners are invited to get together to discuss politics before and after dinner on Thursday, March 25 at 6:30 p.m.. Dinner will include stuffed chicken breast, dilled carrots, peas, cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes, cake and ice cream as well as beverages. Before dinner, all candidates will be introduced to those in attendance. Tickets are $8 for adults and $4 for children. To make reservations, call 781-383-1298.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Spofford platform

"Public service is about committing yourself and your principles for the long haul. I believe in Cohasset and I believe I've demonstrated my commitment to serving this community over the last nine years," said Rob Spofford at weekend events.

In his remarks, Spofford noted that Cohasset was facing a number of pressing decisions.

"It's imperative that we work to protect all that distinguishes us as a community: Our schools, our natural beauty, our socio-economic diversity and the character of our neighborhoods.

"As a fiscal conservative I believe we must balance expenditure against need," added Spofford. "My approach as a Selectman will be to listen, qualify and make informed and independent decisions."

Voters can meet Rob at the following receptions:

Sunday, March 21, 4-6 p.m., hosted by Maryann and David Chase.

Wednesday, March 24, 9:30-11 a.m., hosted by Diane and Tom Shipp.

Thursday, March 25, 9:30-11 a.m. hosted by Kathy and Rich Ofsthun.

Harvey-Dormitzer events

The following events, open to all townspeople, have been scheduled for the Lou Harvey-Ralph Dormitzer campaign for the two available selectman seats in the April 3 election:

March 18, 7-9 p.m., at the Silvia home, 445 Beechwood St.

March 19, 6-8 p.m., at the O'Donnell home, 72 Old Pasture Road.

March 20, 3-5 p.m., at the Gomez home, 53 Highland Ave.

March 21, 4-6 p.m. at the Oddleifson home, 25 River Road.

March 23, 1-3 p.m., senior tea at the Lightkeepers' House, Government Island.

March 24, 7-9 p.m., at the Pierson home, 123 Atlantic Ave.

March 26, 7:30 p.m., town-wide dance at the Red Lion Inn Barn.

March 28, 3:30-5:30 p.m., at the LoJacono home, 111 Nichols Road.

Williams meets voters

Voters are welcomed to meet Jamie Williams at coffees on:

March 23, 9:30 a.m., hosted by Leila Hill, 40 Atlantic Av.

March 29, 9:30 a.m., hosted by Renate Devin, 140 Lamberts Lane.

Williams will also be attending the March 22 candidates' forum hosted by The Hingham League of Women Voters, 7:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Middle/High School.

"I've lived in Cohasset for 12 years and am a parent of two children in our public schools," said Williams. "I am happy to be meeting with others who are interested in my views about planning, fiscal stability and quality education. As a member of the school committee I will deliver results for our children."

For information, call Kellie Gaumer, 383-6343 or Christine Woodward, 383-2604. www.votejamie.org.

MacCarthy events set

Just fresh from a coffee at the home of Claudia McKeon, Adrienne MacCarthy talked about her accomplishments thus far and her plans to bring that same level of commitment to the School Committee, if elected. Adrienne feels energized about the upcoming week ahead. The following events are scheduled next week:

Monday, March 22, Hingham League of Women Candidates night, at Cohasset High School. Candidates will have time to present their platforms and field questions from a moderator. This will be on your Community Television channel 22.

Tuesday, March 23, 7-9pm, coffee at the home of Susan and John Donohue, 3 Ledgewood Drive.

Thursday, March 25, 7-9pm, coffee and dessert hosted by Anna Abbruzzese and Sarah Murphy At this event, you will also be able to meet Joe Nedrow, candidate for Planning Board, and Nancy Barrett, incumbent for the Housing Authority.

QUESTIONS

BHRC is sponsored and underwritten by Fleet Bank as a public service for readers of the Cohasset Mariner. It is written by Bob Katzen who has covered the legislature for more than 25 years and has been providing this feature to newspapers since 1975.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local representatives' votes on five roll calls and local senators' votes on four roll calls from the week of March 8-12.

BAN SAME-SEX MARRIAGES/ESTABLISH CIVIL UNIONS (H 3190)

Constitutional Convention approved 129-69, 136-62 and 121-77, the Travaglini-Finneran amendment sponsored by Senate President Robert Travaglini (D-Boston) and House Speaker Thomas Finneran (D-Boston). This proposed constitutional amendment bans same-sex marriages but gives same-sex couples the right to form civil unions with all the same benefits, protections, rights and responsibilities granted to couples who are married. It also allows the legislature to enact laws that are not inconsistent with the amendment in order to carry out the purpose of the amendment.

The convention then recessed until 10:00 a.m. on March 29 at which time the entire process opens up again. The Travaglini-Finneran amendment will be on the agenda and can be replaced by other proposals, amended, approved in its current form or rejected. Any amendment agreed to at the end of the next round is the one that would go on the 2006 ballot if also approved by the members of the 2005-2006 legislature. The process in the 2005-2006 session is a simple one. The measure can no longer be amended and is simply voted up or down on one roll call vote.

The three roll calls in this week's report were all on the identical Travaglini-Finneran amendment but many legislators did not vote the same way on all three. Representatives and senators on various sides of the gay marriage debate switched their votes for strategic reasons on one or two of the roll call votes.

Here's where it get a little technical. The first two roll call votes were on substituting the Travaglini-Finneran amendment in place of the original Travis amendment. The Travis amendment bans same-sex marriages and prohibits any other relationship other than marriage from being recognized as a marriage or its legal equivalent. The third roll call was on ordering the Travaglini-Finneran amendment to a third reading which basically means giving it initial approval).

The vast majority of same-sex marriage supporters devised and participated in a strategy to hold their noses, vote for the amendment on the first two roll calls even though they do not support it and then to vote against it on the third roll call in order to defeat it. Under complicated convention rules, only the defeat of the amendment on the third roll call would result in no more anti-gay marriage amendments to the constitution being allowed for consideration this year. If they had voted against the amendment on either of the first two roll calls, they feared that the amendment likely would have been defeated and under the rules, the convention would then be open to harsher anti-gay marriage amendments including the Travis one. They also took some comfort in the fact that even if their strategy failed, the Travaglini-Finneran amendment was the lesser of several evils and they would still have another session at the end of March at which they could work to defeat that amendment and prevent other more heinous ones from being approved.

The strategy might have worked but key opponents of gay marriage developed and implemented their own counter-strategy. They voted against the Travaglini-Finneran amendment on the first two roll call votes because most of them do not favor legalizing civil unions in the constitution. However, if they voted against the amendment on the third roll call, the strategy of same-sex marriage supporters likely would have worked, the amendment would have been defeated and the convention would be barred from considering any other anti-gay marriage amendments this year. Faced with this dilemma, gay marriage opponents decided to hold their noses and vote for the amendment on the third roll call. They decided that this was the only way to get at least some anti-gay marriage question on the ballot, live to fight another day and perhaps secure the votes at the upcoming March 29 convention session for an amendment banning gay marriages without the guarantee of civil unions.

Here's a look at a breakdown of the three basic voting blocks on the roll call votes on the Travaglini-Finneran amendment from last week's session. Most legislators fall into one of these blocks.

Block 1: These legislators, led by Travaglini and Finneran, said the amendment is a reasonable compromise that protects the traditional institution of marriage while ensuring that gay and lesbians have the constitutional right to form civil unions and be afforded all the protections of married couples. This group also includes legislators who are not enamored of the amendment but are determined to put a ballot question in front of voters. This group of legislators generally voted "yes" on all three roll call votes.

Block 2: These legislators either strongly support same-sex marriage and/or oppose placing a ban on gay marriage in the constitution. The voting pattern of this block broke down into two groups. The first group simply voted "no" on all three roll call votes. The second group participated in the strategy to vote "yes" on the first two roll calls and then to switch their votes to "no" on the final vote in their unsuccessful attempt to defeat the proposal and bar consideration of any more anti-gay marriage amendments this year.

Block 3: These legislators said they support banning same-sex marriages but do not favor civil unions or prefer to craft civil unions legislation as a general law rather than as part of the constitution. They participated in the strategy to vote "no" on the first two roll calls and then to switch their votes to "yes" on the final vote in their successful attempt to keep any anti-gay marriage proposal alive.

(On all three roll calls, a "Yea" vote is for the proposed constitutional amendment banning same-sex marriages but giving same-sex couples the right to form civil unions with all the same benefits, protections, rights and responsibilities granted to couples who are married. A "Nay" vote is against the proposal).

The exact language of the Travaglini-Finneran amendment reads:

"It being the public policy of this Commonwealth to protect the unique relationship of marriage, only the union of one man and one woman shall be valid or recognized as a marriage in Massachusetts. Two persons of the same sex shall have the right to form a civil union if they meet the requirements set forth by law for marriage. Civil unions for same sex couples are established hereunder and shall provide entirely the same benefits, protections, rights and responsibilities that are afforded to couples married under Massachusetts law. All laws applicable to marriage shall also apply to civil unions. This article is self-executing, but the General Court may enact laws not inconsistent with anything herein contained to carry out the purpose of this article."

PLACE LETTER IN OFFICIAL JOURNAL (H 3190)

House 70-125, rejected an order requiring that the recent letter about the Travaglini-Finneran gay marriage amendment sent to legislators by Senate President Robert Travaglini (D-East Boston) and House Speaker Thomas Finneran (D-Boston) be reprinted in the state's official journal that describes the proceedings of the constitutional convention. The letter describes the amendment in detail and urges legislators to support it. Another part of the letter states that the two leaders believe that the amendment would not require religious institutions to conduct same-sex marriage or civil union ceremonies. It goes on to say that Travaglini and Finneran's unequivocal intent is that their amendment shall not abridge, inhibit or restrict the "free exercise of religion or the teachings or doctrines of any religion or religious institution and does not place any religious institution at risk of losing tax-exempt status, academic accreditation, media licenses, and other privileges, or of facing charges of violating human rights codes or hate speech laws." Supporters said it is important to place this letter in the journal so that future legislatures and the courts will clearly understand the intent of the sponsors and the legislature. They cited past cases in which a constitutional convention was unclear as to the intent of the action of a prior convention. Opponents said it is unfair to only include a letter from two supporters of the amendment and argued that opponents of the amendment should be allowed to include their thoughts and positions. They also argued if this procedure is allowed for the Travaglini-Finneran amendment, it should also be allowed for all other amendments. (A "Yea" vote is for the order to include the Travaglini-Finneran amendment in the official journal. A "Nay" vote is against the order).

PLACEMENT OF BABIES (H 4325)

House 137-21, gave initial approval to a bill allowing parents to leave their baby under the age of seven days at a police or fire station or hospital emergency room. The baby would then be placed into the state's foster care system. The measure requires the worker accepting the baby to make every effort to solicit identifying and background information from the parents. It also mandates that the state begin the process of terminating parental rights but stipulates that this voluntary abandonment does not constitute an automatic termination of these rights. Other provisions require the state to publicize the new law, teen pregnancy prevention programs and adoption information. The law would expire on June 30, 2008 unless renewed by the Legislature. Supporters said more than 40 other states have similar laws and argued that the measure would save lives and give young, scared mothers a choice. They argued that without this new law, unsafe abandonment or even the killing of babies would continue. Opponents said this misguided bill sends the wrong message by legalizing child neglect and abandonment for the first seven days of a baby's life and questioned its effectiveness in other states. They noted that the state already provides ample opportunity for these parents to work with adoption agencies to safely give up their babies and noted that even without this proposed law, many babies are already safely dropped off at hospitals. They argued that the should strengthen and adequately fund existing programs to help these parents. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against the bill).

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Are rising police and fire overtime costs, and town legal fees a management problem or a fact of life?

SELECTMAN/ Louis S. Harvey

The handling of the police and fire departments and excessive use of legal services is symptomatic of the leadership void that how exists in town government.

Overtime costs and legal fees are only one of the many consequences of the lack of leadership, communication blackouts and fiscal irresponsibility.

When the town's Selectmen decided to endorse the severe action of charging police officers with criminal actions instead of using appropriate discipline, they released a series of events that has enormous financial implications. These events have polarized residents into two camps, one for the cops and the other against.

When our town's Selectmen decided that it was acceptable to maintain a hostile relationship with police and firemen's unions, they released a series of events that has inexorably led to higher costs, more waste and poor relationships.

Strong leaders would end this management by crisis and reestablish civility in relationships among the town officials, employees and unions and offer solutions that bring residents together instead of ripping us apart. Strong leaders use attorneys for legal advice, not to make decisions for them.

Open communication would respect the superior role of residents and it would meet the obligation of keeping the public informed of the actions being taken. It would also means that town governors listen to the voice of the people and consider the advice that is offered.

Fiscal responsibility would recognize the downward spiral of these bad situations and the consequential upward spiral of the costs that displace the proper education of our children.

As long as we accept the current quality of leadership, we can expect that runaway spending and the overrides to fund them will remain a way of life.

SELECTMAN/ Rob Spofford

Legal fees and overtime costs for public safety workers are both a management problem and a "cost of doing business" for all municipalities. These costs can't be avoided completely, but I believe the Selectmen have a responsibility to ensure they are kept to a minimum, and to budget realistic amounts for these items so that we are not continuously seeking funds to cover shortfalls.

As a professional liability insurance expert, I counsel corporate and municipal clients on how best to protect their interests in the most cost-effective manner possible. Cost-effective protection is precisely what Cohasset needs.

With a $30 million budget, Cohasset must project reasonable amounts for legal fees while recognizing that all municipalities are susceptible to increased costs. No one can eliminate those unexpected events that push costs beyond budget restraints.

I believe the key is to know what we are paying for and why. We must review our fee arrangement with town counsel annually to be sure we are getting appropriate legal representation. Negotiations should include the amount of the retainer, the services it covers, and a negotiated hourly rate for additional services, all in conjunction with a clearly articulated set of guidelines for engaging counsel. Cohasset's retainer was $54,000 last year, but actual legal costs totaled $250,244. Selectmen must look hard at the current agreement with an eye towards restructuring provisions.

Controlling police and fire department overtime starts with negotiating contracts that combine reasonable manning standards and appropriate overtime provisions. We must be sure our police and fire employees miss shifts only when absolutely necessary. Finally, we must constantly balance the cost of additional employees against the price of overtime.

Given my business and municipal experience, I believe I can balance fiscal conservatism with the realities of running a government that sufficiently provides for the community's needs.

SELECTMAN/ Ralph Dormitzer

Overtime for the policemen and firefighters is deeply rooted in the system. The costs are driven by minimum manning requirements in union contracts, by contractual sick leave provisions, by hourly minimums, and by the salary expectations of our public safety employees. Today, overtime can add as much as 30 percent to the salary of a policeman or firefighter. Reversing the practice will be enormously difficult in view of current collective bargaining agreements and the current expectations of our police and fire employees. I believe that we will need to persuade our pubic safety employees that it is in their interest and that of the town that these services be made more efficient and that adjustments be made to the union contracts to satisfy both the town and the employees.

Legal expenses are incurred for Cohasset by the selectmen, by the other elected boards, and in categories such as labor matters and litigation. There is no consistent pattern of spending for legal support by these entities and, in fact, among them it is quite varied year over year. What is consistent is that it always seems to add up to approximately $250,000 each year. With a single board up one year but down the next, it is difficult to predict that any specific solution will result in an overall reduction in spending. A few things might help: agree on those issues which deserve to be litigated, make sure we have the facts right so we only take legal action when we have a high probability of success, cut your losses if you are clearly losing, and seek the best advice from the best counsel in advance.

SELECTMAN/ Merle Brown

Rising police and fire overtime costs and Town legal fees are neither a management problem nor a fact of life. It is the cost of providing important and vital services to the Town. As Town officials we are in the business of delivering services. This is not a money making proposition. As a Selectman, I have worked hard to provide the best services in a most cost efficient manner. As a member of the Board of Selectmen we created a paramedic program within the fire department. In order to provide this service, two paramedics must be on duty at all times. This, sometimes, has the tendency to create overtime. However, by providing this service, the Town is able to recoup some of these costs. While it does not completely pay for itself, it does provide additional revenues to help offset this cost.

In the Police Department, the Town has long had a minimum manning clause in the Union Contract that requires at least three uniformed police officers on duty at all times. In order to cover vacations, sick time, personal time and injured on duty time, overtime is necessary. We are currently in the process of determining if hiring more officers would be a more cost effective way to address this issue as it was for the Fire Department. I will continue to work towards controlling these costs.

Legal fees are just as important. As a Selectman, I must make decisions with my fellow Selectmen to protect and defend the Town in all kinds of litigation; This Town has spent over $500,000 protecting the Water Supply fighting the Cohasset Heights Landfill and many more dollars to defend our zoning bylaw. It is important to spend the necessary legal fees to protect the character and integrity of the Town.

Has the school committee's role diminished under the Education Reform Act?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Pat Martin

I find it sadly ironic that some of the problems the Educational Reform Act of 1993 was put in place to correct more than a decade ago are once again haunting school districts across the Commonwealth.

In the early 1990's when the state began the reform initiative, districts were in need of assistance with both their power structures and funding mechanisms. A recession on top of inequitable school funding had left many districts in dire straits. Education reform increased state aid to districts to help them implement mandates and ease economic woes.

Districts, like ours, have since adapted to the structural changes of Ed Reform which placed the administration of the schools into the hands of school administrators, mandated site-based management and focused school committee responsibilities on budget development and policy-making.

However once again, Cohasset, like districts across the Commonwealth, is struggling to provide mandates in a fiscal crisis while the state, this time, reduce financial aid. When state aid was suddenly and unexpectedly reduced last year, we cut approximately $350,000 out of our budget. This year, with more cuts promised, we cut an additional $460,000 out of our budget. And so, with increasing enrollment on top of new SPED and utility costs this year, we need a $400,000 override just to maintain our current level of service. These reductions in state aid, more than anything else I believe, have diminished the power of the school committee to even budget or plan for what is needed for our children. The "power" has now been placed in the hands of the voter to determine what is best for our district and our children. It is my profound hope that they will become educated to the facts and decide in favor of our schools.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Adrienne MacCarthy

My nnswer to the question is yes; the school committee's role has been diminished under the Education Reform Act. This was one of its primary objectives. This Act was passed in order to give the principals and the superintendents throughout Massachusetts more control over the operation and management of their respective schools. In short, it was designed to place the primary responsibility for educating our children in the hands of the educators. Until the legislature passed this act in 1993, a town or city's school committee essentially had unlimited power over the daily operations of the school system. And while this act did put more authority in the hands of the educators, it also holds this same group responsible for the performance of their schools through the implementation of a statewide series of tests (the MCAS).

It is only logical that the role of the Cohasset School Committee has also been diminished as a result of the Educational Reform Act. This however, is not to imply it does not fill an important role in the administration of our schools or the quality of the education our schools deliver. The School Committee's role is to set general policies and guidelines for the schools, hire/fire the Superintendent, negotiate contracts with the respective unions, and oversee the school budget process. School Committee members also provide an additional avenue for parents and/or citizens of the town to voice their opinions or seek information regarding the issues facing our schools. It is my belief that an effective and responsive school committee remains an essential element to the continued success of our schools.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Scott O'Grady

Make no mistake, the Education Reform Act of 1993 sharply and deliberately curtails local school committees' power to intervene in the operations of schools. Today, our school committee's powers and duties consist solely in hiring and firing the Superintendent, reviewing and approving the school budget, and establishing educational goals and policies. Education Reform reversed the relationship between the School Committee and the Superintendent, creating a strong Superintendent and a weak School Committee. The State's rationale included the desire to put educational matters in the hands of licensed professionals, and to remove the interference of amateur School Committee members from the decision making of those professionals. Through the strong Superintendent, the State could hold professional administrators accountable for school performance and conformity to State laws and regulations.

The unfortunate effect of this aspect of reform has been to put decision making in the hands of one professional in each district, and to marginalize not only the voice of the local community but of teachers and administrators subordinate to the strong Superintendent. What history has shown about the dangers of concentrating too much power in the hands of an individual applies to school districts. The challenge to the weak School Committee is to represent the community in effecting leadership in a system that is not, ultimately, answerable to it.

We can debate the desirability of the state's undermining of local control, but education reform clearly concentrates power over school operations in the hands of the Superintendent, who is answerable to the state as much as, if not more than, to the local school committee. The only decision of a Superintendent subject to review by the local community is in budgeting. On all other matters, the community has no input into the Superintendent's decisions short of the threat of termination.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Jamie Williams

I do not believe the role of the school committee has been diminished. The Education Reform Act of 1993 seeks to enforce accountability by better defining the role of school committees. It has decentralized the authority of the school committee by focusing it on policy making and oversight, giving the responsibility of Chief Executive Officer to the superintendent, and extending more authority to principles.

School committees are responsible for planning the direction the system takes and determining criteria for results. The committee's primary objective is to establish and review educational goals and policies in accordance with state law, which calls for higher student achievement and curriculum standards. The act also mandated statewide testing to give clear, concise, measurable standards for student and school achievement, resulting in the institution of MCAS testing.

The act designates three major categories of committee responsibility; 1) Collective bargaining, 2) Appointment and oversight of the superintendent, 3) Approval of a budget that ensures a balance is maintained between needs and resources.

Rather than seeing this as diminishing committee responsibilities, I believe they have been clearly defined. No further energy should be spent complaining about what cannot be done. The School Committee must resolve to do a better job of what it should and can do. My vision for our schools is to provide the highest quality education for our children. This can be realized through a master plan with a clear mission and objectives, a prioritized budget, results-oriented collective bargaining and a dynamic superintendent.

We must act in accordance with state law but we cannot continue to jeopardize our children's education through risky overrides. I have the experience in union negotiations, planning and budgeting that will deliver results and value for your tax dollars.

Do you agree with the planning board's decision to give Cedarmere a special permit when the proposed condominium project didn't get the OK to connect to the town sewer?

PLANNING BOARD/ Joe Nedrow

The only input I have to respond to today's question is what I have read in the Mariner over the past couple of months.

There appears to be an honest difference of opinion between the Sewer Commission and Selectmen and that of the Planning Board regarding the Cedarmere Development permitting process.

The resolution of these differences will probably be decided in the legal arena. According to news reports, much needed Cohasset tax dollars will be spent to argue both sides of this issue. Logic suggests the prevailing opinion will ultimately be the town's official position on this issue. Unfortunately our town's position will probably by the basis for a new round of litigation involving the developer and or abutters.

If chosen to represent you on the Planning Board, I can assure you I will work diligently to foster a better understanding and working relationship with other town Boards and Committees. We need to promote a unified and supportive consensus on important issues facing our community.

PLANNING BOARD/ Stuart Ivimey

The Planning Board's approval of Cedarmere followed months of intense review through hundreds of documents, hearings and countless hours of testimony. Despite this diligence by the Board, Cedarmere never proposed a feasible sewer or septic treatment plan. The senior overlay district zoning by-law clearly requires such a plan. The Board should require Cedarmere to satisfy this material provision of the by-law.

In considering any project involving sewering, the town must be mindful that for years many residents in priority areas have waited and been promised town sewer access. The town must honor on this commitment.

It is often wise for the Planning Board to grant conditional permits. Conditional approval places the burden upon the applicant to resolve outstanding issues; prevents the Board from deciding issues beyond its jurisdiction; and better positions the town if litigation arises. In Cedarmere's case, dozens of appropriate conditions were imposed upon the developers. Cedarmere's special permit, however, was issued before it resolved a fundamental material requirement — sewering. The Board should enforce all portions of the zoning by-laws with equal weigh when those portions are material to a project. It should not pick and choose which material portions to enforce when reviewing proposals.

The success of the Cook Estate project, which I fully endorse, may hinge on the ability of town boards to issue conditional approvals (given the September purchase deadline) because it will allow boards to act quickly. It is unlikely that sewer issues will delay this project because the town has already provided an engineering feasibility study for an on-site septic system. I look forward to the expeditious review of this project.

As a Planning Board member I will carefully consider all aspects of a project and devote full attention to all by-laws plus the concerns of residents (especially the abutters).

Next week's questions:

For the Planning Board: Avalon was approved over objections from the Planning Board. Should the Planning Board have more of a say in the Chapter 40B comprehensive permit process?

For Selectmen: The new review of the Town Manager Form of Government suggests the town has too many elected officials and recommends having the selectmen appoint the boards of assessors and health, and the recreation, sewer and water commissions. Do you agree?

For the School Committee: Is it time to revisit the METCO program in light of budget restraints and reduced state aid?

Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by 5 p.m., Monday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. Items may also be dropped off at Cohasset News on Brook Street. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Monday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

League to host candidates' forum

The Hingham League of Women Voters will hold a forum among Cohasset candidates for local office on Monday, March 22 at the Cohasset Middle High School at 143 Pond St., at 7:30 p.m. The candidates and the public are invited to arrive at 7 p.m., at which time the League will discuss the ground rules with the candidates, and there will be informal mingling.

The LWV of Hingham is a nonpartisan, political organization that encourages citizens to take an informed and active role in government. Cohasset residents are welcome to become members of the Hingham League.

The forum will be conducted in a manner that allows candidates an equal opportunity to inform voters of their position on important issues. The moderator of the forum will be a non-Cohasset resident. The format for candidates for contested office is as follows:

- Opening statement — 2 minutes, each candidate
- Questions from the live audience — each candidate, up to 2 minute answer
- Closing statements — 2 minutes, each candidate

This format will be followed for candidates for Selectman, for School Committee, and for the One Year Term to fill an unexpired term on the Planning Board. The question period will accommodate between two and four questions, depending on the length of the replies. Candidates running unopposed will be invited to make a two-minute statement at the conclusion of the first part of the evening, which should be at 9 p.m.

In the event that only one candidate for a single contested race can appear, the sole candidate cannot participate in the debate according to Federal Election Laws but can make a two-minute statement with the unopposed candidates. The event will be televised on local cable Channel 22.

No sense of guilt in voting for override building "on time and on budget." For Ms. Gomez to write that "we are stuck with paying the operating costs" is an insult. Would Ms. Gomez send her children to a high school that was so decrepit that it had buckets in the classrooms to catch the rainfall from the ceiling? Is it her contention that the facilities constructed or renovated were not necessary? I take offense to those who criticize what they do not know. As Benjamin Disraeli noted in one of his speeches, "How much easier it is to be critical than to be correct"

I have always tried be an informed voter and to this end, I make the time to attend both fall and spring town meetings. I do agree with Ms. Gomez in one sense when she claims that "education is the focus of my everyday life," I too value education. As such, I have always made the effort and found the time to keep up to date with the issues involving my children's education. It is not always easy with five children but I have been involved with the PSO over the years working with others to raise thousands of dollars that go directly into our children's classrooms. I have also served on a number of boards and committees for other organizations throughout the town. One of the benefits of living in a small town is that one person or group can make a difference. If there is an issue that has the potential to impact the quality of my children's education, I will make the effort to become an informed and involved citizen. When you make the commitment, you also see the efforts put forth by our town's elected committees. They do not take an override vote as lightly as Ms. Gomez would like us to believe. I watched the school committee review the school budget line by line, not the most exciting process ever, but it demonstrates how closely the budget items are reviewed. I am confident that the committee has exhausted all possible sources of revenues, budget cuts and any other options before looking to another override.

The budget process for the school is linked to the overall budget of the town. The budget process has been another target of criticism and there is the perception that our town's finances are not managed as well as they should be. I am not a CPA or a financial expert in the field of municipal financing so I went to the State's website (Mass.Gov) and researched our town. The one indicator I came across was the bond rating for each town as reported on the Department of Revenue page. Over the past five years, the bond rating for the town of Cohasset has improved three times. We are currently rated double A. From what I gather, the bond rating is directly tied to the investment communities evaluation and opinion of many items, including the town's financial management capabilities. Again, what is the fact versus the perception. Outside rating agencies have improved the bond rating for Cohasset three times over the past five years, yet Ms. Gomez doesn't want us to feel guilty if we don't bail out these groups (groups in Ms. Gomez letter refers to the School Committee, the Selectmen, and the Town Manager). We need the override. For those who are on the fence regarding this issue, I implore you to take the time to gather the facts concerning the school budget. Talk to the School Committee members, the selectmen or the advisory committee. They are your neighbors, your friends and residents of this town.

In closing, since Ms. Gomez letter made a number of references to the sense of guilt, let me add this from Voltaire on the subject of guilt, "Every man is guilty of all the good he didn't do."

Potential for cost savings was ignored

TO THE EDITOR:

How could we get ourselves into such a financial fix? There are many answers to that question going back into the 90's when certain factions were determined that we needed new schools with an elementary campus funded by pipe dreams of never ending state funds. The guilt mongers were successful in stirring up the populace through divisiveness and fear.

Bigger was better and we ended up with a 65 percent increase in our physical plant in administrative offices, meeting rooms, health clubs, soaring ceilings and very little new academic areas. The building committee leadership listened almost exclusively to their architects who were paid over $3.5 million by the Cohasset taxpayers. Very heated discourses were held over tax saving innovations e.g. normal height ceilings in the primary school rather than cathedral, using dual fuel burners rather than the architects' preferred very expensive natural gas and installing energy efficient lighting systems. No thought was given to the environment or the taxpayers.

As we can see from the burgeoning costs at the schools, they are turning out to be the maintenance nightmares and utility pigs they were built to be. Our leadership turned aside advice from experienced citizens who attempted to offer free cost saving suggestions. How much we could have had for academic programs if the schools adopted a 'lights out' policy after the opening of the new Osgood and were able to choose oil over gas with dual fuel burners. Our savings alone this year would have been shockingly substantial, in the tens of thousands.

Still our elected and appointed officials have managed to skew the truth and pump up the guilt. In addition to the discrepancies pointed out by Andrew Quigley last week, school committee member Rick Shea in his 3/04/04 letter on teachers' salaries indicated that only teachers with a Ph.D. receive the top salaries. FYI, the 1999-2002 contract dropped the Ph.D. requirement and amended Column IV to read "Column III plus 30 credits approved by the superintendent" (Column III = a Master's + 30 credits).

There is also the $1000/yr longevity payment Cohasset teachers receive starting their 15th year. Norwell has done away with longevity and early retirement incentives and other towns like Hingham ($500) and Hull ($400) offer considerably less for their longevity payments starting the 15th year.

For FY05 the school budget is finally reflecting a fully funded number for utilities. Analyzing the figures in Rick Flynn's 3/04/04 column the school needs an increase of $959,774 to fund just the increases in salaries ($355,452), SPED ($169K), utilities ($223K) and cleaning ($212,322). $324K from the town, $175K in salary savings from retirements and $460,774 cuts in other items to meet these $959K increases.

The most stunning statement in Mr. Flynn's column was that proposed teacher and athletic department cuts will still be necessary even with the $400K override. It is simply amazing that an almost $1 million increase in their budget is not enough to stop teacher cuts.

When the school committee decided on the full time business manager instead of adding the duties to the town CFO we were told it would be a cost saving in the long run. Unfortunately this position which, according to the Town Report, paid $93,724.04 for 2003 has been a drain in more ways than one. Two small examples are the lunch and childcare programs. For FY02 and 03 lunch had a deficit of $50K and is currently in deficit. An outside audit in 1997 pointed out to the schools that it illegal to run fee for service programs at a deficit and after all these years they still are unable to do it right.

The taxpayers are also unknowingly subsidizing a fee for service childcare business. It provides before and after school care on the school grounds and only covers the cost for supplies, salaries and benefits with the taxpayers picking up the tab for the rest.

In the last few years it would have been so easy to save several hundred thousand with no impact to the educational programs. But our officials haven't been interested even in turning out unnecessary lights throughout the night. What advantage is there when they can continually come and cry at the trough for more money 'for the children'.

Keep small class sizes

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing to comment on the issue of school class sizes. As a 7 grader in the Middle/High School, I agree with the Cohasset School Committee on the importance of small class sizes. A small class size is one of the greatest learning tools you can give to a student. It provides the student with an environment he or she and the teacher can do their best work, which is the most important factor in a student's education.

We sometimes get wrapped up in the importance of the MCAS. Doing well on the MCAS is an important goal, but it is not the most important goal. The most important goal of any school, in my opinion, is to educate the individual student. If we educate the individual and prepare the student for the real world then we can succeed in standardized testing. In large class sizes it becomes increasingly difficult to meet this goal. More time is spent taking care of the class in general than actually teaching. Quick learners feel slowed down and slow learners feel rushed. No one wins in a large class situation. As a student I feel that I can do my best in a small class, where the teacher can focus on the needs of each individual student. Cohasset currently does a great job of educating the individual student. It would be a shame if the override does not pass and Cohasset loses one of its great strengths.

Prop. 2-1/2 overrides and character

TO THE EDITOR:

It is disturbing to hear calls for "No more overrides!" Proposition 2-1/2 provides an alert to taxpayers that taxes are being proposed that exceed a benchmark (a complicated formula but essentially 2-1/2 percent of the increase in the tax base). It was not intended that overrides are "bad things."

Preserving the character of Cohasset is one of the community's top priorities; this means that Cohasset will continue to be a small town with a very high proportion of its tax base remaining residential. If those two factors are combined with cost-of-living raises and salary increases that exceed 2-1/2 percent, it means that override proposals have been, are and will be inevitable from time to time. Overrides are part of our checks-and -balance system and provide a healthy chance for taxpayers to consider recommendations to increase taxes.

We have just read the introduction to the Town Warrant and we are impressed that both the Municipal and School sides of the FY2005 budget have been filtered through ever-finer screening to try to maintain services, but little more. In the case of the schools, however, one can only assume that cuts already taken in teaching and administrative personnel will take their toll. With five grandchildren in Osgood, Deer Hill and the Middle High School, we have observed excellent teachers and a thorough and imaginative educational program. Cohasset must preserve its good schools.

Both the FY2004 and FY2005 budgets have been hostage to significant reductions in State Aid and mandated, but underfunded, Special Education requirements. With unfortunate timing, increases in operating costs for our beautiful new schools have kicked in. It is frustrating to find that those forces beyond our control will affect our pocketbook – about $129 more for the average tax bill for the override. But it would be foolish, we think, to express our frustration with a vindictive rejection of the override.

We urge that Cohasset voters support the recommendations of the Selectmen, School Committee and Advisory Committee to vote in favor of the FY2005 Operating Budget at Town Meeting and for the override in the April 3 Town Election.

Bilodeau tradition of excellence at CHS continues

By Mark Goodman
CORRESPONDENT

Over the last several years, the Bilodeau name has been a pretty popular one in Cohasset athletics and in these sports pages.

It makes sense, because for the last seven years, the boys basketball squad and at least one other team has had one of the three oldest brothers, T.J., Matt and Chris.

The Bilodeau brothers, including the youngest, Mike, who will be a freshman at CHS next year, have built a competitiveness level rarely seen at the high school level. That is in large part thanks to the frequent battles they have had with each other on the basketball court, says head coach and athletic director Ron Ford.

"If you can survive a Bilodeau backyard battle, you can pretty much survive anything," he said.

Chris, who is coming off a successful season in which he ranked second in the South Shore League in scoring, says he can recall being four or five years old when his father, Tim, put in a basketball court next to their home.

"That got interesting because we could play all the time," Chris said. "I think I built a lot of toughness because of it."

That toughness was tested this year, when he sprained an ankle at Carver on Feb. 6. Chris missed the next night's game at Archbishop Williams, but played through the injury during the team's final three games. Needing a win in all three to make the tournament, Cohasset was led by Chris' 63 combined points, including 23 in the team's "win of the year" against Hull.

In addition to that physical toughness, Ford says Chris brought a sharp mental edge to each game.

"This year, I felt like I had another member of the coaching staff on the floor," said Ford, who credited T.J. and Matt with teaching their younger brother some of the tricks of the trade. "He threw the team on his back and carried us this year."

Chris says he felt a certain responsibility to take a leadership role with the team after Matt graduated in 2002. He said both his older brothers, and Matt in particular, helped to prepare him for that position.

"I felt like I had to step up my game and my leadership," Chris said. "[Matt] was the point guard for two years. Whenever there was some pressure, we looked to him. I wanted to put that on my shoulders."

One of the most unique things about the Bilodeaus' high school careers is that all three captained two teams, each. T.J. was a captain for basketball and baseball, while Matt did the same for soccer and hoops. This year, Chris was a co-captain for basketball and football, where he excelled as a wide receiver and defensive back.

A lot of the brothers' success and leadership skills can be attributed to their parents, Tim and Kathy. It is beginning to become more and more commonplace to see parents coddle their kids and spoil them with success.

Not so with the Bilodeaus, Ford says, and he commends the parents for it.

"Their character is a credit to their parents," he said. "They never complain; they let the kids learn on their own. They're not afraid to let them fail and learn from those failures."

One place where the brothers will not be failing is in the classroom. The three that have passed through high school have done so with excellent academic performance. T.J. is currently attending Harvard, where he plays on the JV basketball team. Matt is now playing soccer at Williams.

Chris says he is still waiting to hear from several schools, including Babson, Bowdoin, Bates and Colby. Babson has recruited him from basketball, and Chris says he has been in touch with the football coaches at all of the schools.

Again, Tim and Kathy are a large part of academic success.

"My parents have always pushed us to do well in school," Chris said. "Everything we do on the court is an extension of what we do in the classroom. Getting an A is just like winning a game."

Chris says he tried to incorporate parts of his older brothers' basketball game into his own. While Matt was a quick, slashing type player, he said, T.J. was more of a shooter. Chris certainly did well at both this season, averaging over 21 points per game and falling just shy of 1,000 for his career.

And, as if the backyard games weren't enough, all three played varsity basketball together in the 2000-01 season. T.J. was a senior, Matt a junior and Chris a freshman, and Ford said that things could get a little intense at times.

"Our practices were pretty spirited," the coach said. "They had to be separated sometimes, no question."

And, as for young Mike? When asked to assess his younger brother's game, Chris said he is a great shooter who could be in for a great career at Cohasset if he continues to hone his skills year-round.

"I think he can be the best out of all of us," Chris said.

Perhaps that is an older brother trying to talk up his younger sibling a little bit. But if it turns out to be the truth, Cohasset can expect four more years of good things to come.

Nah, still wouldn't do it...really.

As far as I'm concerned, I've arrived at the pinnacle of sportswriting.

Flat out, there is nothing better than covering high school sports. This is a personal feeling that becomes crystallized all too clearly every postseason. Getting to not only watch, but report on the manner in which these high school athletes put absolutely everything they have on line to represent their school and their town— all the while dealing with the reality that the next loss will signal the end of an era, the final time they will be playing with individuals they've called friends and teammates dating back to their earliest memories— is a profoundly moving honor.

This kind of athletic backdrop can never be duplicated or come even close to being matched.

In terms of volume, it's difficult to imagine anything matching the widespread fervor this region experienced over

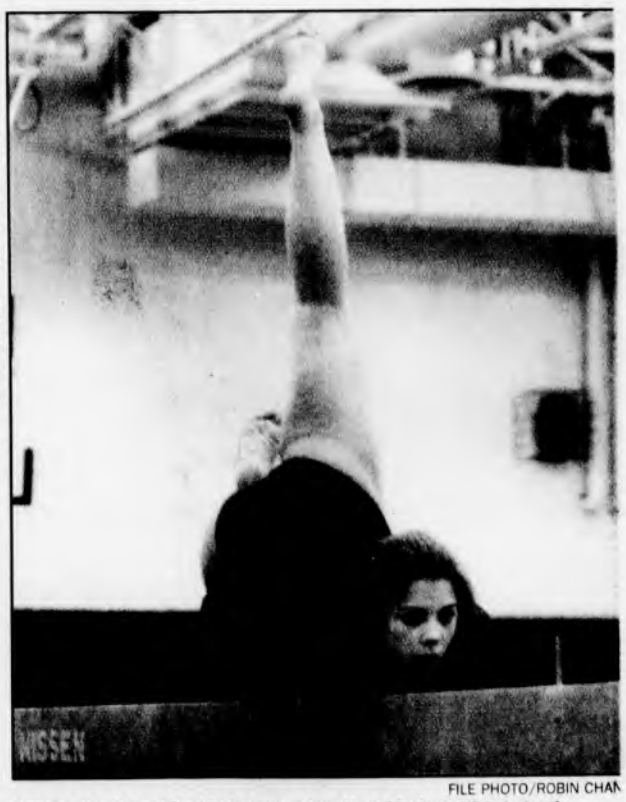
Cohasset boys win MaxLax title



After being the "bridesmaid" to powerhouse teams from Hingham and Scituate over the first couple of sessions of indoor lax, the Pro Division "Wompers" (Cohasset 7th and 8th graders) were determined to make the last session of the MaxLax indoor program one to remember. After completing a regular season undefeated in their bracket, the Wompers lost in Sudden Victory OT in the division finals to a tenacious Vipers team that was made up of top players from Hingham, Scituate, and Marshfield. However, their performance was good enough to earn a berth in the Champion's Series, which pits the top two teams in each division from each MaxLax location, against each other in a full day of spirited competition.

In their first game against a tough Dover-Sherborn group (the winners of the Norfolk location), the Wompers held off a surging D/S squad by putting together a dominating 2nd peri-

Cohasset's Nancy Durkin is now a two-time Mariner All-Scholastic selection.

Mariner All-Scholastic gymnastics team

Cohasset's Durkin named among area's elite

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

We decided to add boys to our team this year, probably a year too late, as the Braintree High boys wrapped up their second consecutive state championship this winter. All three of the all-around performers from that Wamps team—Dave Ellis, Matt Tocchio and Gene Ellis—were deservedly recognized with All-Scholastics honors.

Several of the young women you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

After consulting with area coaches, though, we do feel secure that we chose the top 11gymnasts in Marinerland for this honor.

gymnastics and already a two-time Mariner All-Scholastic ... improved in just about all events this season to lead the Lady Lakers to a 13-3 season and second place overall in the Old Colony League (behind unbeaten state champ Barnstable)...scored a personal best 34.6 in the all-around in win over OCL rival Marshfield...top four average scores this year were 34.15 in the all-around, 8.85 on floor exercise, 8.425 on uneven bars, 8.6735 on vault and 8.575 on beam... took fifth in all-around event at OCL meet (32.5)...qualified to compete in all four events at the state individual championships, her best score an 8.3 on floor...Pembroke resident will attend Pembroke High School the next two years...serious year round gymnast since the age of three who's achieved a USA Level 9 grade...after training for years at the soon to by closed GymPlus in Pembroke, she is now looking for a new gym...also does spring track at Silver Lake, specializing in discus and shot put throwing...a A student...hopes to carry on her gymnastics career in college...Silver Lake coach Lindsay Leigh-Consolati: "Kelly is a very committed year-round gymnast. She wants to be the best, and you see that in her work ethic and devotion to the sport. When she's challenged by someone, she really digs down for a little more."

Emily Farley - Junior
All-Around- Braintree

Emily Farley

Emily earns her second straight Mariner All-Scholastic selection...the third year gymnast improved in virtually all areas this season to help lead the Lady Wamps to a 10-2 overall record, including 7-2 in Bay State Conference competition, good for a second place tie...qualified for the All-State individual competition, and wound up with a personal best score of 35.1, which included a personal bests of 8.7 on bars and 8.875 on vault, to go along with an 8.8 on beam and 8.725 on floor...also set personal bests on floor (9.2) and beam (9.0) this season...Bay State Conference All-Star in the all-around competition...runs spring track at BHS...Honor Roll student...also play violin in the school orchesra...has been involved in gymnastics since the age of five, and performing year round since the fifth grade at the Ellis School of Gymnastics in Braintree...a level 9 gymnast...may attempt to continue gymnastics career in college...leaning toward majoring in journalism or law hopes to be a gymnast at the college level...Braintree coach Debbie Duprey: "Emily has a lot of natural gymnastic talent and ability and is elegant to watch."

Amy Caldwell - Freshman
All-Around- Braintree

Amy Caldwell

Two high school athletic seasons, two Mariner All-Scholastic selections, and now she has her sights set on spring track...the frosh phenom provided the second half of a dynamic one-two punch this season, along with junior Emily Farley, to lift the Lady Wamps to a 10-2 record, including 7-2 in Bay State Conference competition, good for a second place tie...had personal best scores this season of 9.0 on floor and vault, 8.55 on bars, 8.75 on beam and 34.85 in the all-around...Bay State Conference All-Star in vault...trains year round at her family's own Ellis Gymnastics School...a USA Level 8 gymnast...not bad, considering gymnastics are her number two sporting passion; soccer is number one...in fact, she has missed many gymnastics competitions due to her year round soccer commitments to the South Coast Scorpions club team and the Olympic Development Program (ODP) soccer league ...led the BHS lady booters to a Bay State Conference championship this past fall, scoring a team best 22 goals to go along with 10 assists, to earn her first Mariner All-Scholastics selection... is expected to quickly become a standout sprinter for BHS track team this spring...Honor Roll student...older sister Andrea, a senior who earns Honorable Mention accolades here, has also been a standout gymnast and soccer player at BHS...Braintree coach Deb Duprey: "Amy is an energetic and powerful gymnast who is fun to watch. She demonstrated a lot of talent as a freshman this year."

Casey Quinn - Sophomore
All-Around - Weymouth

Casey Quinn

With one of its standouts injured, Quinn bore the brunt of the pressure to perform on the Lady Wildcats squad this season and once again, she answered the call...Quinn shined at this year's Bay State Carey Championships, finishing fourth in the All-Around with a personal best score of 35.7...The sophomore also took second on the vault (9.05)...The BSC All-star broke a WHS record with her high score of 9.1 on the vault in a meet against Ashland/Holliston... Once fellow sophomore Jenn Lamm returned midseason, she and Quinn paced the Lady Wildcats in winning 8 of their last 9 dual-meets to finish with an 8-3 record and third place in the BSC standings...A year-round gymnast, Quinn still has two more seasons at Weymouth.

Jenn Lamm - Sophomore
All-Around - Weymouth

The Lady Wildcats suffered a big setback when Lamm injured her knee early in the season, but her return midway through the year sparked a comeback that saw the Weymouth gymnasts win 8 of their last 9 meets to take third (8-3) in the Bay State Carey standings...Lamm teamed with fellow sophomore Casey Quinn in providing one of the most effective one-two punches on the South Shore...The BSC All-star won the beam at the League Championships and also finished second on the bars...Her efforts this season also landed her a spot competing at the State Individual Championships...A year-round competitor, Lamm will return to the WHS squad next season.

Nancy Durkin - Junior
All-Around - Cohasset

Nancy Durkin

Responded to the challenge of moving into the number one all-around spot for the Nor-Coh team, following the graduation of three time Mariner All-Scholastic Meredith Bixby, to lead the joint school team to a perfect 10-0 record, a South Shore League championship and a berth in the state sectional championships...now a two-time Mariner All-Scholastic...qualified for state individuals in three events and scored an 8.3 on bars, 8.2 on floor and 7.9 on vault...South Shore League All-Star in all-around...trains year round at the South Shore Community Center in Cohasset...had achieved a USA level 8 rank, but now is a member of AAU Gymnastics...top scores this season were 8.9 on floor, 8.9 on vault, 8.5 on bars and 8.5 on beam...started in gymnastics at the age of three, and has been training year round since the age of eight with former...sister of former Mariner All-Scholastic hoceky and lacrosse player John Durkin...Cohasset/Norwell coach Kara Connerty: "Nancy really helped fill a huge void for us this year, and improved in just about all areas. She's very committed to gymnastics, and we'll be looking for even bigger things from her down the road."

Keri Gerrish - Senior
Bars - Hanover

Keri Gerrish

A standout on the Hanover squad throughout her four-year career, Gerrish was named a Pilgrim Conference All-star again this season...The senior competes in the All-Around, but has been a standout on the bars, making a trip to State Individuals on the event...Last year, she was a member of a Lady Indians squad that won the PC title (10-0), finished 12-0 overall, and took sixth at the South Sectionals...A three-time All-Scholastic, Gerrish is a three-sport athlete at HHS, also competing on the field hockey and softball squads.

Mollie Fanning - Junior
All-Around - Hanover

Mollie Fanning

Now in her third year performing on the Lady Indians squad...Fanning has been one of the program's top performers during her three-year stint with the team and that continued this season in the All-Around, where she was one of the Pilgrim Conference's best with a 34.0 average...Last year, Fanning competed on the beam at the State Individuals...Her performance last year helped Hanover land a PC title (10-0) and a sixth-place finish at the South Sectionals...The team was 12-0 overall...Fanning competes year round and will be a top returnee next season.

Boys

Dave Ellis - Sophomore
All-Around - Braintree

Dave Ellis

Quickly emerged as the Wamps top gymnast to lead them to a second straight state championship this winter... stepped into the huge shoes of Greg Monaco, Massachusetts' 2003 male gymnast of year and now a gymnast on scholarship at Purdue University...led the Wamps to a 7-0 regular season by winning the all-around competition in all seven dual meets...finished first in all but three individual events this season, with his second place finishes coming to teammate and fellow all-scholastic selectee Matt Tocchio...took second in the all-around competition at the state championships with a score of 50.1, finishing second to Stanford bound Jason Shen, of Newton North...broke BHS school record for floor exercise this season with a 9.5 score...had highs of 51.9 in the all-around competition, 9.0 on pommel horse, 9.2 on vault, 8.65 on high bar and 8.4 on rings and parallel bars ...trains year round at his family's own Ellis Gymnastics Center in Braintree...also a soccer player at BHS...Honor Roll student...Class representative...father Dave was a member of BHS's first state championship team...Braintree coach Dick Seibert: "Dave is just a very hard working, very committed gymnast. He made some nice gains from his freshman year and should only continue to get stronger and better the next two years. It's very exciting."

Matt Tocchio- Junior

Matt Tocchio

An all-around performer since his freshman year who has played a huge role in consecutive state championships, as well as the second place state finish in 2002...the only gymnast to defeat teammate Dave Ellis in dual meet events this season, doing so four times...finished third in the all-around competition at state championships with a score of 47.55, behind only Ellis and Stanford bound Jason Shen, of Newton North...at states, placed third on parallel bars (8.15), fourth on floor (8.85), pommel horse (8.2) and high bar (7.5), and fifth on vault (8.55)...personal best in the all-around is a 51.0...a year round gymnast who trains at the Ellis Gymnastics Center in Braintree...Level 2 gymnasts...plays Braintree Babe Ruth baseball...Honors Student...hopes to be a college gymnast...Braintree coach Dick Seibert "Matt has competed somewhat in the shadow of gymnasts like Greg Monaco and Dave Ellis, but he's been a huge part of our success. He's pushed those guys. When you can get that type of first or second place production it's just fantastic. He's also a great competitor who's always risen to the occasion when we've really needed it."

Gene Ellis- Senior (Capt.)
All-Around- Braintree

Gene Ellis

The captain and leader of the two-time state champion Wamp squad... took third place in the all-around competition at the State Coaches Invitational and fourth in the all-around at the Salem (NH) Invitational...was an all-around performer for the Wamps in his sophomore and senior years, but stepped down gracefully as a junior from that role to make room for Dave Ellis...took third in vault at the state championships with a sukahara move he'd worked on to perfect, scoring a personal best 8.65, along with a fifth on floor (8.7) and sixth on rings (6.65)...has personal bests of 44.8 in the all-around, 8.7 on floor, 8.6 on vault, 7.7 on parallel bars, 7.1 on pommel horse, 7.0 on rings and 6.3 on high bar...battled through a shoulder injury to perform well on vault and floor as a junior to help the BHS squad to a state championship... will represent Massachusetts at going to National Gymnastics championships in Texas in May...Honor Roll student...not a year round gymnast, but does work out frequently at Ellis Gymnastics Center...may try gymnastics in college...looking at Salem State, Bridgewater Staate, UMass-Lowell and UMass-Boston...undecided on major...Braintree coach Dick Seibert: "Quite honestly, I've never worked with a tougher kid than Gene. Even though he's not a year round gymnast, Gene has consistently given us scores that counted towards our wins in the last three unbeaten season (in dual meet competition). His abilities will really be missed, but so will his leadership and commitment to the team."

FROM MAXLAX, PAGE 19

od to cap off a rousing 13 – 10 victory to advance to the finals. Key to this win was the defensive prowess of Jake Cuneo, PJ McCaw, Justin Connors, and Wes Ulmer who shut down the D/S offense in the home stretch behind a solid goaltending performance by Nathan Porter. The Wompers offensive arsenal was clearly in play with points being scored by all of the regular starters including some collegiate level ball movement by Logan Chase and Teddy Galligan. However, it proved to be just a warm up for the scoring wizardry that they would exhibit in the Championship game to follow.

As fate would have it, the championship round would also give the Wompers a chance to avenge their only loss of the season, as the Vipers also advanced to set up a rematch of the previous week's game for "all the marbles". But on this day, the Wompers would not be denied their place at the podium. Throughout the first half, relentless defense on both sides, was matched by the precision passing and scoring opportunities that each team choreographed as they traded the lead 5 times to end the first half with the Wompers up by a single tally, 6-5. The scoring tandem of Mark Flibotte, Chris Mills, and Mike Grimm accounted for the majority of the points in the first half, aided and abetted by solid midfield play on both sides of the ball by Pete Ernst and Sean Silvia

The 2nd period opened with an energized Vipers team putting on a furious shooting barrage on goalie Nate Porter (MVP Honorable Mention), who stuffed several "sure things" to keep the game notched at a one point differential well into the last period. On the offensive end, Grimm turned it up a notch, accounting for 2 of the next 3 goals with the last one coming on a leaping dive and backhanded shot to beat the Vipers goalie on the weak side. In every game, there are usually a few dominant moments that decide the outcome. In this game, the last five minutes of play could have easily filled an ESPN Top 10 spotlight film. With the score 9 – 8 in favor of the Wompers, the Vipers used a man-down situation to tie the score on a beautiful feed from behind to beat Porter top shelf. On the next possession, a no-look feed from Chris Mills found Mark Flibotte cutting from behind, and he did his best "Bobby Orr" impression - dodging several defenders and finding the net after jumping across the crease to free himself to make the shot while still in the air. 11 – 10 Wompers with less than a minute to play.

MaxLax championship series MVP Mike Grimm.

The Vipers called a key timeout to set themselves up for the last possession and a replay of the previous week. Flibotte, who has developed into an unstoppable face-off specialist, won the ensuing possession and drew the ball to Grimm who swept in from the wing position. With the Vipers swarming over Grimm, he again showed why he earned the MVP honors, by pretending to be killing the clock as he set up his 7th point (5G/2A), which was a sniper shot from the top of the box the split the net and secured the championship 12 – 10 as time ran off the clock. The Wompers walked off with the Champion's Series trophies, but more importantly, both players and fans from both sides walked away with broad smiles and some incredible lacrosse memories. These guys are ready for Spring . . .

MaxLax Lacrosse wrapped up its 2004 indoor season with this Champion's Series. Next up for the MaxLax ProShots (Cohasset 8th grade select travel team) is participation in the Brown University Youth Invitational on April 3rd where they will compete against several RI and CT teams in the morning and then conduct an exhibition at the half-time of the Brown v Syracuse game. For more information on MaxLax summer programs – girls and boys instructional camps, clinics, and tournaments – please visit our website at www.maxlax.net.

the Red Sox last fall and the Patriots this winter. However, if it's pure unadulterated pride and passion from a sports following you want, the Sox and Pats have nothing on…say, what the Scituate High boys basketball team experienced over the last few weeks, turning a 13th seed in the Div. 3 south sectionals into a semifinals berth. Ditto for what the Norwell High boys team, the Braintree High hockey team and the Cohasset High wrestlers were treated to during their historic postseason runs.

I love the Sox and Pats as much as anyone. I was literally shaking as I watched the eighth inning of game seven with the Yanks last October, as I also was when Adam Vinatieri was lining up his second Super Bowl clinching kick several weeks back.

Still, in my quiet and reflective moments, it's pretty difficult to ignore how absurd these emotions are. In this age of the professional athlete, with salaries and free agency run amok, all we're really rooting for is laundry and corporate entities.

It is also in these quiet and reflective moments that I realize just how lucky I am to be doing what I'm doing.

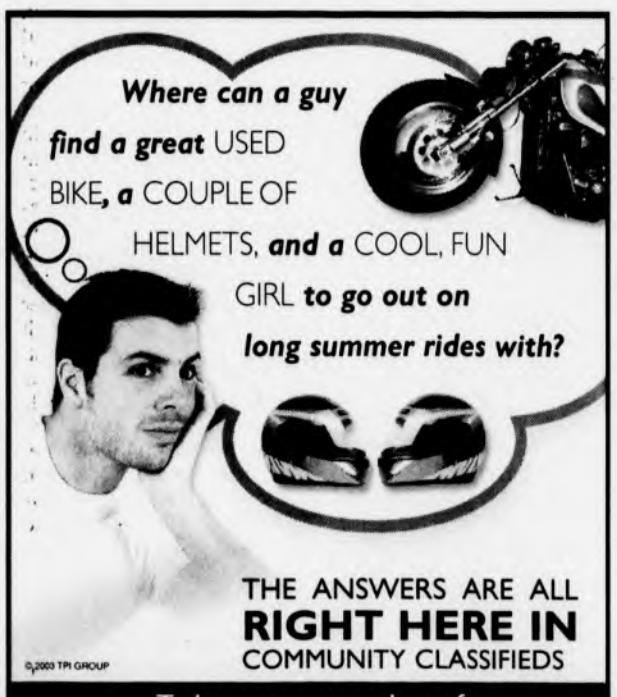
And I have tasted life on the other side. I covered the Celtics for five years, 1990 through '95, the end of the Bird Era— a pretty exciting time, to say the least. I've also covered the Red Sox, done interviews with Roger Clemens, Mo Vaughn and Nomar Garciaparra, to name a few.

Yup, it was loads of fun. I was living out a boyhood dream.

But, you know, I never felt honored to be doing that. In fact, I never even felt much appreciated. Those were jobs. OK, pretty cool jobs, but jobs still the same. And the longer I did them, the more they felt that way. There were always four or five other reporters there, looking to tell pretty much the same story I was. And if I wasn't there, someone else would have told it. And it's not like the athletes I was covering really thought all that much about what I was writing or the work I was putting in to frame things just so.

Conversely, in my current capacity, I stumble into a sense of honor on an almost weekly basis. I'm chronicling treasured personal histories, something I'm reminded of frequently by readers who feel I've dropped the ball or come up short of the mark. But even that's cool. It's great to know people care.

I felt honored to be there when the Scituate High boys team fell this past Wednesday to top seeded Norwell, just as I felt honored exactly two years earlier when the reverse scenario played out. The range in genuine, unrefined human emotion alone made it so in both cases.



I felt honored to cover the 2001 Norwell High hockey team that stunned us all by barely squeaking into the postseason and then marching all the way to the sectional semifinals, where it became the only team to truly throw a scare into Hanover on its unbeaten drive to a state championship.

I felt honored to cover the 2003 Braintree High boys lacrosse team, a program in just its fourth year that made it all the way to the state Div. 1 semifinals before falling to eventual state champion Beverly. I was also honored to cover the Braintree High boys gymnastics team that won its second straight state championship this past winter season.

I could go on an on and on…the 2002 Cohasset High hockey team that went unbeaten, the 2003 Scituate High hockey team, with all those great personalities, that made it to sectional semifinals, the 2003 Silver Lake boys soccer team that broke a school record for wins in the final year before Pembroke left the SL region, the three Cohasset High wrestlers (Matt Baroudi, Joey Kehoe and Phil Strazzulla) who won state championships in front of their hometown fans in dramatic fashion three weeks ago…

Of greater honor still has been the position I've been placed in to observe the individual growth and development of young athletes, both on and off the field of competition…

Girls travel hoop teams playoff bound

The Cohasset girls travel basketball teams for grades 5-8 concluded their regular seasons in fine fashion last weekend and now are looking ahead to their own version of March Madness this weekend, with the 5th and 6th grade teams hosting the preliminary playoff rounds.

The fifth grade team clinched third place in the 15-team Old Colony League with a victory over Abington Friday evening. Defense once again proved to be the key ingredient for the Fab Fives, as they held Abington to just three points en route to an easy victory. Although the Blue & White dropped their season finale to Hanover on Saturday, their 9-3 regular season record earned them the third seed in the playoffs. The Fab Fives will play sixth place Bridgewater Saturday at 1:00 p.m at Cohasset High in the quarterfinal round and, if successful, will proceed to the semifinal at 3:00 against the winner of the Braintree-Scituate contest.

The sixth grade squad capped off their highly-successful season with a pair of victories to end up with a sterling 11-1 mark and a first place ranking in their division. The Super Sixers will embark on their playoff journey Saturday morning at 10:00 in a quarterfinal matchup with Marshfield at Cohasset High. The Blue & White then will face the victor of the Whitman-Hanover game in the semis at 2:00 if they beat Marshfield.

The seventh graders completed a clean sweep of their opponents with a pair of wins over the weekend to end up with a perfect 12-0 record and the top seed. The Seventh Wonders will travel to Whitman for their playoff battle with Marshfield in the quarterfinals at 1:00. If they win that contest, they will face the winner of the Bridgewater-Duxbury game at 5:00.

The eighth grade team also completed a fine season with a record of 7-5. Although this qualified the Effervescent Eights for fifth place and a playoff spot, scheduling conflicts for team members will mean that they will have to forego their playoff encounters.

"The Cohasset teams have enjoyed a great season thus far," commented Cohasset coordinator and seventh grade coach Matt Salerno. "All four teams had winning records, two of our teams finished in first place, and their combined records were 39-9. We're looking forward to the playoffs and excited that Cohasset will be hosting the fifth and sixth grade preliminary rounds."

The championship games in all divisions will be played on Sunday at Bridgewater at times to be determined.

SPORTS NOTES

Kahns shines in college lax openers

This was quite a weekend on the lacrosse field for Cohasset's Kahn siblings.

Jackie Kahn , a senior at Swarthmore, was named a honorable mention for Player of the Week honors in the Centennial Conference after scoring three goals to go along with an assist in a win over Trinity. This performance also included five ground ball pickups and three draw controls.

Little brother Curt, a 2003 CHS graduate and two-time Mariner All-Scholastic in lacrosse, enjoyed a memorable debut at Trinity, to say the least. He had four goals, including the game-winner one minute into the second overtime, to lead Trinity to a 9-8 win over Bates in New England Small College Athletic Conference (NESCAC) men's play.

Kahn scored the clincher with a rocket shot from 15 feet away on an assist by senior captain attackman James Skiff, after the Bobcats had forced the game into extra frames with six unanswered goals in the fourth quarter. Trinity had taken an 8-2 lead after three quarters with six goals of its own in the third, after the teams had played to a 2-2 tie in the first half.

For these heroics, Curt was named NESCAC co-player of the week along with Tufts junior Brian Griffin.

Post 118 baseball workouts

Candidates for the 2004 Post 118 Legion baseball team are welcome to attend light workouts each of the next three Thursdays— March, 11, 18 and 25—at the St. Francis Gymnasium in Scituate, from 6:30-7:30 p.m.. There will be some throwing and light baseball workouts, with pick-up basketball games to follow.

Questions should be directed to coach Scott Arnold (781-545-1896).

Basketball boosters meet on March 23

The Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club will meet on Tuesday, March 23 at 7:00 P.M. in the Cohasset High School library. All those interested in being involved in supporting basketball programs in the town are encouraged to come.

We will review our successes this past season and plan for the needs of next year. With the elimination of Middle School sports, due to budget cuts, the CBBC would like to have a discussion on what can be done to keep basketball available for all students next year.

The CBBC runs the town wide youth basketball program for children in grades one through 6. Don DeMichael has coordinated the very successful recreation program with Jack Whorley and many parent volunteers. The boys 6th, 7th, and 8th grade travel teams have been under the leadership of Tim Bilodeau and the girls 5th through 8 grade travel teams have been lead by Matt Salerno and many dedicated coaches.

We are very grateful to our community and local businesses for their sponsorship and advertising in our basketball program book. Scholarships will be awarded to many of our senior basketball players at Senior Night in June with money raised from this fundraiser.

If you have any questions about the Cohasset Basketball Boosters or the March 23rd meeting, please contact Betsy Connolly at 383-1246.

AMBASSADOR POOLS

Post-prom party has become an annual tradition

By Mary Sheppard
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

For many high school seniors and their families, senior year is bittersweet. In addition to the heavy homework expectations and rigorous classroom schedules, there are SAT exams to take, early admissions to enroll for, college campuses to visit, and college essays to write. Then, maybe the second round of SAT exams and regular admission to apply for. Being a senior today means another year to keep your head down, continue to work hard, and keep your fingers crossed that a college of your choice accepts you. It is no longer a year given to ease up, relax and have fun before the next stage of your life begins.

Without the assistance of the parents, the junior class parents, the merchants and vendors, police and fire departments, the party couldn't happen.

There are events to look forward to as a senior, however, one of them is the senior prom, taking place this year on Friday, May 28. Following the prom, for the seventh straight year, a post-prom party at Cohasset High School will be in honor of the graduating seniors. For many students who have passed through the high school doors and experienced prom night, this party is the best part of that evening.

Post-prom party began seven years ago, when two mothers with graduating seniors felt the advantages of organizing and hosting a post-prom event would allow the seniors to spend that one last evening together as a class and be in an environment that was not only inclusive and fun, but safe.

"It made sense for them to have a destination after the prom," said Margaret Tufts of Woodland Drive. "They spend so much time and effort getting ready for that evening. After dinner and several hours of dancing, it's over. With the all night party at the school after, the night isn't over plus they're not dispersing in a million directions. It's an evening to make memories, one last time as a graduating class."

That first year, Margaret and Diane Dooley of Buttonwood Lane had to gain permission of the seniors to have the party before they began.

"It wasn't an easy sell," said Diane. "Each year, the seniors just did what they wanted, what they individually had planned whether it was a house party or two or just driving around in cars and hanging out. So, the seniors and their parents were very skeptical that this post-prom party idea would work because it seemed to them like we were telling them how to spend prom evening. We had to convince them that we were doing it for them, but we needed them to let us do it. A big part of that was convincing them that it was all about them — starting with photos of them growing up."

The two mothers weren't going to give a party and have no one show up. Through meetings with the seniors and vote sheets that were sent around, asking the seniors what they would like to see at a party for themselves, they eventually gained the trust and confidence of all involved, including the school administration and teachers.

"Curt Collins was principal then and he was very supportive of our idea. We had also engaged Hingham and Scituate high schools' ideas to see what worked and what didn't so we pretty much had an idea of what we wanted to do," Margaret recalled.

Nonetheless, the two mothers spent hours at a time for days and weeks, trying to configure space at the school.

"Each year there's a theme and decorations, entertainment and food. In addition to needing the space for all of that, we had to raise money, donations, and volunteers," said Diane.

That first year was hair raising, as doing something for the first time always is. Decorating the gym was still going on when the seniors left on prom night to go to dinner.

"We waved goodbye to the kids," smiled Diane, "then tore back to the school to finish everything."

"We hoped we could," added Margaret. "Next thing we knew, here come all these parents and friends, and just people popping in to take a look. Everyone stayed, pitched in and helped."

"One woman came in, looked around, and said 'I don't think you're ever going to be done', laughed Diane Dooley. "I followed her gaze and thought to myself, 'you know, she just might be right! But we finished with an hour or so to spare."

Post-prom party that first year was a resounding success. The proof was not only in the great time the seniors and their dates had that night, but the next day while putting the spaces back to their original form, the 'clean up committee' received many visit from the seniors themselves. They stopped by to take one last look at the party venue and to thank the two mothers who started it all.

"One junior asked me if we would do it the following year for his class," said Diane. "I thought to myself, what better reason to keep this party going each year."

The biggest challenges in pulling this party together is getting the entertainment from midnight 'til 5 a.m.

"Getting entertainment isn't difficult," said Margaret. "Getting entertainment is expensive."

Through fundraising efforts and ticket sales, the team put on a fun, creative show.

"Everything about the party, especially the theme and the entertainment, had to be a secret," said Margaret, "That's a big part of the fun. We couldn't let it slip even to our kids."

"Food is also a big challenge. The local merchants are always great with their donations of food and drinks," said Diane. "We couldn't do it without them."

Margaret said Stop and Shop upon learning what they were organizing gave her a shopping cart and told her to just come in and fill it up, aisle by aisle, and take whatever she needed.

"That was a great help," she said. "I filled the basket with things like cold cuts and rolls."

Post-prom party becomes a community event each year. Without the assistance of the parents, the junior class parents, the merchants and vendors, police and fire departments, the party couldn't happen.

"Being able to do this for high school seniors each year is something big in a small town, where everyone knows each other. Being able to count on help from willing and generous town resources and businesses is also big. But knowing how much the seniors appreciate the effort and the idea that they are so cared about is huge," said Diane.

In a bittersweet year of beginnings and ends, a memory like their post-prom party is a good thing for high school seniors to take with them as they begin the next stage of their lives.

"When I see the same level of anticipation and excitement to put on a perfect evening again this year for the seniors, I get excited. I never would have believed seven years ago that it would still be going on, "said Margaret. "It's really a feel good event because everyone gets involved, everyone bonds, and at graduation, there are so many parents you see and smile at because you share the memory of working on post-prom together. It becomes a wonderful memory for you too."

Wear in Quincy and Mr. Tux at the Hanover Mall.

Sean Connolly, a senior, is competing for the first time. "It's a good time and the girls really put a lot of pressure on you," he said.

Ryan Tufts, a senior, is back again. "I'm going to be a lot sexier, a lot hotter and fresher," he said.

Ian Hickey and Scott McArthur are going to compete as a duo and will sing "Summer Loving" from Grease.

There are 16 contestants in all. Tony Rolfe, social studies teacher and football coach, will serve as emcee.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

'The Thin Line' today at middle-high school

"The Thin Line" A one woman show on coping with eating disorders will be presented at the Cohasset Middle High School on March 18, at 11:15 a.m. in the Middle School auditorium. The Thin Line is a 30-minute story of one girl's struggles with her eating disorder and the struggles of those close to her in their efforts to understand and to help. The program provides compassion, understanding and the means to seek action against the deadly disease of eating disorders.

"The Thin Line" has been touring nationally to colleges, high schools, middle schools and conferences since 2000. This program weaves together the voices of four characters-a girl who is struggling, her internal negative voice, her mother, and a friend- showing how the disease affects not only the individual struggling, but also how it impacts his or her surrounding family and circle of friends. Following the performance there will be panel discussion and the audience will have a chance to interact with area resources and local counselors and medical experts.

This program is sponsored by the Social Service League of Cohasset and the Cohasset Middle High School. Middle School students will attend and the public is invited.. For more information call the Social Service League office at 781-383-0771.

'Raising Teens' workshop April 6 & 13

Parents of pre-teens and teens, mark your calendars! Parents' Forum, a popular non-profit group based in Cambridge, will present a 2-part seminar on Tuesday April 6 and 13 from 7-9pm at the Cohasset Library. Focusing on effective parenting skills, the sessions will cover relationship-building, strategies for better communication, and finding balance. This workshop is sponsored by Project Safeguard, a community consortium that includes parents, clergy, health education professionals, the PSO, and the Cohasset Public Schools. To reserve a space, mail a check for $20 payable to "Project Safeguard", along with your name and phone number, to: Project Safeguard, c/o Cohasset Middle/High School, 143 Pond Street, Cohasset 02025. For more information, call 781-383-6190.

Brass Kettle Brook Conservation Area is a woodland treasure

By Marylou Lawrence
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

At Town Meeting, voters will be asked to support the town's acquisition of about 70 acres of open land situated west of King Street in the vicinity of Lily Pond. Brass Kettle Brook winds through the property, thus giving it its name, the Brass Kettle Brook Conservation Area. Whitney and Thayer Woods, 824 acres of open space owned and managed by the Trustees of Reservations, is located immediately northwest of the property; private residences border the northern edges; Wompatuck State Park and an extension of Whitney and Thayer Woods border the southwest margin. The Town of Cohasset and the Water Department own most of the land between the property and Lily Pond.

Lily Pond, along with nearby Aaron River Reservoir, is the sole source of drinking water for more than 7,000 residents in Cohasset. Purchase of the Brass Kettle Brook land will protect this crucial watershed and establish an important conservation area between Wompatuck State Park and Whitney and Thayer Woods. In addition to offering many miles of walking trails, the National Heritage and Endangered Species Program (NHESP) has identified almost the entire property and much of its surroundings as core habitat for rare species.

Certified arborist Gary Barrow points out bittersweet.

The straight stonewall extending from Wompatuck State Park to King Street.

Early one morning last week, Gary Barrow led a small group of interested Cohasset residents along the trails that border Lily Pond and wind through portions of the Brass Kettle Brook Conservation Area. From an old Cohasset family, Gary is a certified arborist; he knows the property as a professional but also holds boyhood memories of its trails and scents and seasons recalled by a buckshot-pocked tree, hidden vernal pools, and the sound of a great horned owl. Trailing Gary through these forests may be somewhat like touring with Michelangelo through Florence 500 years ago.

More than 70 species of trees and plants inhabit these properties. Groves of pussywillows, red osier, dogwood, forsythia, and bittersweet create a border between the parking lot at the Water Department and Lily Pond's edge. Heading west out of the parking lot, the main path leading into the Robert S. Pape Reservation is lined with honeysuckle, wintercreeper euonymus, and dense thickets of bittersweet nestled under tall, stately red and white pine, black walnut, shag bark hickory, and white ash trees.

Around the sludge-holding area on the left of the path grow young pin cherry, sweet birch, and American elm surrounded by native buckthorne, elderberry, viburnum, arrowwood, and clethra. Walking towards the pond, off path, Eastern hemlock and American holly lead to a clearing which reveals the remains of an old foundation, origins of one of the pond's three icehouses. Historians might want to refer to Burt Pratt's interesting description of ice cutting in Cohasset in his "Narrative History of Cohasset, 1898-1950, Volume II," republished by the town in 2002. Page 16 shows a photograph of the Souther icehouse at Lily Pond.

About one half mile from the entrance to the reservation, surrounded by buttonbush and loosestrife hugging the shoreline, the old pumping station signals the end of the main path. A narrow trail, heading northwest, forks off the main path into the Brass Kettle area. Countless walking paths traverse the property, eventually leading the walker into Wompatuck or as far as Turkey Hill. A unique "codominant" birch and beech tree stands on the right side of the path, just before it forks off to Whitney Woods; one trunk rises smooth and gray, the other rough and mottled, while both root systems encircle each other like two old spouses.

Eastern red and white oak tower gracefully over witch hazel, alternate-leafed dogwood, and pink-flowering swamp azalea, which line the path as it nears an old spring where water once ran pure and sweet. Though the month is March, the American beech still wears its leaves, dried and whispering in the wind alongside quaking aspen and maple leaf vibernum. Liverwort and snake fern blanket the granite outcroppings, which stand sentry over low bush blueberries—a special treat for birds and hikers in late summer. Fiddlehead ferns wave their fronds over a large patch of teaberries, and locked arms of sweet birch, pignut hickory, and beaked hazelnut hug one length of the corridor.

Sassafras, black and red oak, speckled alder, gray birch, and tupelo reluctantly give high bush blueberries their spot in the sun. Large gatherings of princess pine softly carpet the ground while dense greenbrier keeps dogs and hikers on the trail. Moss covered stonewalls — some set perfectly straight, while others seem to amble at random — mark original property lines dating back to the 19th century. One wall is so straight, one would think it was built using a surveyor's sight line from Wampatuck Park to King Street. These grids were built when the landscape was kept clear of trees, and pasture covered the entire area. Only in the last 100 years have relatively young forests laid their claim to the soil.

Just to the side of a trail leading to the cart path that crosses Brass Kettle Brook, a vernal pool, edged with pulpy leaves, invites pause. A single layer of snowflake films its surface on this winter day. When the ice melts, the pool is a haven for riparian life and ducks can sometimes be heard quacking in the early morning. Indian pipes, spotted wintergreen, lady slippers, and winterberry add to the rich textures of sleeping winter life. On this gray 28-degree morning, there was no birdsong, but the habitat likely supports similar breeding populations as those recorded in contiguous conservation areas. Certainly grouse and partridge make the heavily wooded area their home and deer can be flushed next to the trail to Wompatuck.

To save this land from development, Friends of the Brass Kettle Brook Conservation Area are meeting every Sunday afternoon at 4 PM at the First Parish House. We welcome anyone who is interested to join us. Donations to help purchase these 70 acres are being accepted by the Cohasset Conservation Trust, P.O. Box 314, Cohasset. Donations are fully tax-deductible. Please note that the donation is for BKBC. For more information, please call Debbie Cook 383-6313 or

The Cohasset Historical Society spring lecture series continues the third Wednesday of April and May at the Historical Society headquarters in the Pratt Building, 100 South Main St.

The April 21 program will feature David Wadsworth's slide and lecture on "Minot's Light: One Hundred and Forty-Four Years of Service." Wadsworth calls on his vast knowledge of local history to recount the story of this 114-foot granite tower, which is often shrouded in salt spray, fog and mystery.

Leslie Silvia will discuss her mother's book, "Once Upon an Island" by Matilda Silvia, at the May 19 meeting. Peddocks Island, a 188-acre bit of land on the outskirts of Boston Harbor, was home to Matilda Silvia's family from 1904 to 2001. Her memoir of life on the island is rich in both local and family history.

All presentations will begin at 7:30. These lectures are open to the public and are free of charge. Light refreshment will be served and all are invited to attend.

Local DAR good are citizens honored

By Rebecca Bates-McArthur
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

On Sunday the Col. Thomas Lothrop-Old Colony Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution honored local recipients of the DAR Good Citizen Award. Sponsored through the chapter, the winners recognized were Andrea Anne Bechen from Whitman-Hanson High School; Ashley Elizabeth Lundgren of Rockland High School; Elizabeth Mazzilli of Weymouth High School; and Daniel Tarpey and Nicole Turgiss, both of Cohasset High School.

The DAR Good Citizen Award is given annually to members of the senior class of accredited high schools. The students are selected by the faculty and voted on by members of the senior class. They must have the qualities of dependability, service, leadership and patriotism. The program is also recognized by the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

DAR Good Citizen Award winners are Andrea Bechen of Whitman, Elizabeth Mazzilli of Weymouth, Dan Tarpey of Cohasset and Nicole Turgiss of Cohasset.

Cohasset's Brittany Novak wins $30,000 college scholarship

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Brittany Novak can see herself as a doctor one day, and the $30,000 Henry David Thoreau Scholarship she was recently awarded will help her follow that dream.

As the fourth senior from Cohasset in four years to win the award, Novak is continuing the tradition of having brilliant scientists graduate from Cohasset High School.

"I'm thrilled we've had four students in four years win," said David Magnussen, chair of the high school science department, and he gives much credit to the science department staff, which he said has made a commitment to offering a very broad range of courses, which Novak has taken advantage of.

"Brittany has gone very far," he added.

For a student to be considered for the scholarship, he or she must show interest in environmental studies and Novak has been involved in a number of projects on the South Shore. She has been very active with the Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR), located in the former Hagerty building off Parker Avenue. In the summer of 2002, she conducted salinity tests on Cohasset Harbor through the Summer Institute program. She conducted salinity tests all summer long, rowing to between six and eight different areas of the harbor, taking surface readings and readings seven feet under.

Novak also studied fecal coliform levels of various waterways in town, collecting samples and bringing them back to the lab at the CSCR. Her reports have been used by many town organizations, including the Board of Health, a board Magnussen said has been "the driving force" behind many of the projects Cohasset students carry out.

This past summer, Novak was involved with a different branch of the CSCR and worked with children in grades four through six who participated in the Seaside Adventure class. There were three two-week sessions, during which Novak and her students made and maintained aquarium tanks and explored along the marsh to find "creepy crawly" aquatic life to live in them. She also gave her students "informal rowing lessons," but above all made sure their students' two weeks were educational and fun.

"Lots of kids are planning on coming back this year," she said.

But Novak doesn't just devote her summers to the environment. This fall, she worked with the Hingham Trustees of Reservations on the Damde Meadows Salt Marsh Restoration Project at World's End Reservation. Damde Meadows was originally a salt marsh extending east to west from Hingham Harbor to the Weir River, separating Cushing's Neck from Planter's Hill and World's End. In the 1600s, settlers constructed two dams, one at the Weir River side and one at Martin's Cove, restricting natural salt water flow. Two new culverts were recently put in place, which are designed to allow enough water to flood the approximately 18-acre site and restore the salt marsh, while allowing the large pond area to drain at low tide. Novak studied the area vegetation and took surveys of the fish to see if there was any indication the culverts are working.

"This was a true scientific survey," said Magnussen, adding Novak was working with a real scientist and her 30 page report on the findings has been published as scientific data, and distributed to local and federal agencies.

With all her ecological work, it would seem Novak would want to pursue a degree related to environmental science. However, at the National Youth Leadership Forum on medicine she attended last summer in Washington, D.C., she said she got her first taste of medicine and is very interested in pursuing it as a career.

"I didn't get to see a surgery," she said, adding she would have really enjoyed doing so. She did, though, get the opportunity to attend different conferences on ethics, and learned more about the different branches of medicine she could pursue.

As a requirement for the scholarship, 25 percent of her coursework will have to environmentally related. If she had to choose right now, Novak said she would want to specialize in the human body. Because she recently had surgery on her ACL, she has been even more interested in the process of surgery.

"I read the report of my MRI and understood all of it," she said, adding her doctor was more than willing to answer all her questions and guide her through what the entire procedure would entail.

She said she would love to perform surgeries herself and is eager to start learning more about the human body and the way it works.

"I love devoting myself to things and, by being a doctor, I can help other people too," she said.

The scholarship, now in its fifth year of existence, provides $30,000 over four years to college students pursuing interests in the environment. All high school seniors in Massachusetts are eligible to apply. According to Northeast Educational Services, the organization that grants the scholarship, 10 to 12 scholars are chosen from a pool of about 200 applicants each year.

Brittany Novak, shown here at Cohasset Harbor, is the fourth senior in four years to win an environmental college scholarship.

Novak will follow in the footsteps of three other Cohasset High students; Ross Lieb-Lappen, now a first year student at Middlebury College in Vermont, Charlie Anderson, a sophomore at Bowdoin College in Maine, and Chris Golden, a junior at Harvard.

Like Golden, Novak applied to Harvard and was accepted. However, she said she is still waiting to hear from Yale before making her final decision.

Cohasset schools to hold instrumental music day

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It will be a concert unlike any other Cohasset has ever seen, as all 280 students who participate in the band at both the Deer Hill school and middle high school will collaborate for the first time during a concert to be held Thursday, March 25 at 7 p.m.

As part of "All School Instrumental Day," coordinated by middle-high school instrumental music teacher Stephanie Hoskin and Deer Hill instrumental music teacher Steve Biagini, students in grades four through 12 have been invited to take part in musical workshops and clinics during the day, rehearsal, then a performance by all to demonstrate what they learned during the day.

"Steve and I have been trying to work together to increase the size of the music program as a whole," said Hoskin, adding this combined performance will be the perfect opportunity to not only educate other students about what those in band have accomplished, but members of the community as well. This will be the first time the bands have performed together, which Hoskin said will be a wonderful experiment.

Starting at 9 a.m., all students will first attend a small concert, followed by workshops and clinics. Students will then be broken up into homogenous instructional groups, and those in grades seven through 12 will teach lessons to those in grades four through six, which will be followed by another performance. Hoskin said her students have been very diligently "preparing lesson plans and activities" in preparation. After the lessons, students will participate in a discussion about what they all learned throughout the course of the morning. After a lunch break, all band members will begin rehearsing for their evening concert.

The day has been funded through an educational grant, in an effort to help promote the value of music education in public schools, and to celebrate March as "Music in Our Schools Month."

The day has been funded through an educational grant, in an effort to help promote the value of music education in public schools, and to celebrate March as "Music in Our Schools Month." Hoskin said Curriculum Coordinator Ruth Fennessey deserves a lot of the credit for the program coming together, as she did a lot of the behind the scenes work, including applying for the grant.

In addition to promoting the value of music education, the day will also serve as a way for the younger students to become familiar with what goes on with the middle-high school music program, which will be especially helpful with the planned reorganization of schools in the fall. When students head back to class in September, those in grade six will attend the middle-high school rather than Deer Hill, and students from the third grade will leave Osgood to take their place.

"It will take some of the mystery out of what goes on up here," said Hoskin of the program, adding she hopes the day will help foster relationships and that her students will be able to serve as mentors for the younger students to make the music department a familiar place.

Hoskin said the program is a "collaborative experience," which both she and Biagini are proud to be a part of. She said bringing all 280 students together to perform will be a first for Cohasset, and she anticipates a positive end result.

The "All School Instrumental Day" concert will be held in the High School Gymnasium on Thursday, March 27, and will begin at 7 p.m. The concert is open to all friends and family, free of charge. Donations on behalf of the Cohasset music department are always gratefully accepted.

Mass. Architectural design gone to dogs

On March 21, designer doghouses conceived and built by Massachusetts architectural firms will be auctioned off to the highest bidder at Barkitecture 2004, a fundraiser for Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

The town of Cohasset, is home to some of the grandest of Massachusetts' mansions, but for one afternoon in the dreary days of March, it will also be home to 20 of the most palatial doghouses New England has ever seen. From 1 to 5 p.m., on March 21, Cohasset's Red Lion Inn will host a live auction of designer doghouses built and conceived by Boston-area architects to raise funds for Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

The event will also feature a cocktail reception and silent auction featuring the work of area artists, craftspeople and merchants.

Tickets are limited, and are $25 in advance and $30 at the door. For information, call 1-877-378-1195 or go to www.hsar.org <http://www.hsar.org/> for details.

Barkitecture is sponsored by Roberts Animal Hospital, Animal Care Center of Marshfield, Abington Savings Bank, McKee's Moving and Storage, and Petco and the Petco Foundation.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is a non-profit organization staffed entirely by volunteers, that rescues and places homeless animals, assists in the care and control of the local feral cat population, and raises funds to construct an animal shelter for the town of Hull. For information on HSAR, call 1-877-378-1195.

Kitchen tour to offer a feast for the senses

Designer fabrics, lush floral arrangements and table settings befitting the most elegant and formal of evenings to the most comfortable and relaxing of family breakfasts. Hors d'oeurves, finger sandwiches, pastries and sweets from the best-loved South Shore caterers. It's all part of the South Shore Community Center's Kitchen Tour 2004, Friday, April 2, from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

As individual as their owners, each of this year's six Cohasset kitchens reflects the vast and varied options available to today's homeowner when planning or decorating a kitchen as well as the individual style and flare of today's hostess.

Advanced tickets may be purchased at the Center or by calling 781-383-0088. Tickets are $25 and $30 the day of the tour. Ticket sales are limited, so early purchase is suggested.

Funds from the Kitchen Tour 2004 will be used to support the programs of the South Shore Community Center. The Center, at 3 North Main St., Cohasset is a non-profit organization dedicated to a wide range of educational and enrichment programs for infants to seniors.

For more information about the Kitchen Tour or for a free course schedule call 781-383-0088.

Historical Society indoor yard sale

Sunday, March 28, at the Pratt Building, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. an indoor yard sale will be held. Heads Up! When doing spring cleaning, keep it in mind. Saleable items: antiques, good used furniture, collectibles, jewelry, prints, paintings, etc. No clothes or magazines, please.

Drop-off, beginning Monday, March 22 through Friday, March 26, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

There will be a dance at the Garage on Friday, April 2, from 7 to 10 p.m. Everyone from Grades 6 and over is welcome. There will be a door charge of $5 per person. Snacks and refreshments will be sold as well.

Girls Night Out!

The Scituate-Cohasset Newcomers' Club is having it's monthly girls night out at 7 p.m. on Thursday March 25, at the home of Cathy Minich, 140 Turner Road in Scituate. Get ready to roll the dice and spend the evening with a group of friends playing BUNKO! Don't worry if you have never played before, there will be lots of first time players. Check out www.bunkonet.com if you want to learn more about the game. Everyone is asked to bring an appetizer or beverage. RSVP to Cathy Minich at 545-6424.

Pop into spring with flair with new musical

Variety is spicing up the spring musical this March at First Parish, the Unitarian Universalist church on the Common. Its "Poppin' into Spring" musical takes place on Friday and Saturday, March 19 and 20. This year's musical is different from its past cabarets. A totally new approach, beginning with the opening number of its "pops concert", introduces new instrumentalists from the church community, a new repertoire, and includes a pops "extra" with the special flair of a "black tie" affair.

For every person performing on stage there are at least three people assisting with production. The extensive amount of time invested by the church's extended choir shows a willingness and determination to provide a full and varied evening's entertainment.

These two evenings' performances take place in Trueblood Hall in the Parish House, 23 No. Main Street on Cohasset Common. Social Hour from 7 – 8 p.m. with drinks, hors d'oeuvres, and a display of the evening's Auction items and a raffle sale - Pops Concert begins at 8 p.m.

Reservations are strongly suggested. Please call the First Parish office (Sandy Bailey) at 781-383-1100 or the Bloomfields at 781-383-1360. Tickets are $25/person or $50/patron. Full tables for eight may be reserved at $200.

Team captains sought for Relay For Life

Every lap counts at the American Cancer Society's Relay For Life in Cohasset. Join a Relay For Life team and take part in a celebration of cancer survivorship. Local residents are encouraged to join with their community and take steps to raise the vital funds needed to help find a cure for cancer.

The Relay For Life in Cohasset planning committee is currently seeking local residents to serve as team captains and/or team members. Relay For Life teams raise money by gathering sponsors to support their participation in the Relay. Teams of walkers keep a continuous presence on a local school track throughout the overnight event, walking in shifts to raise funds for American Cancer Society programs of research, education, advocacy and local patient services. The first Team Captain's meeting is set for Wednesday, April 7 from 6:30 – 7:30pm at the Cohasset High School Cafeteria, Pond Street. Anyone interested in finding out more about Relay For Life and how to join is welcome to attend.

The Relay For Life in Cohasset is a community event bringing together teams of families, friends, churches, neighborhoods, and businesses all with the same goal of curing cancer in the new millennium. Residents from Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Scituate and other surrounding towns are encouraged to attend. The American Cancer Society'eighth annual Relay For Life in Cohasset is set for June 18-19, 2004 at Cohasset High School.

Last year, 13 events were held in towns across southeast Massachusetts raising close to $2.7 million for American Cancer Society programs of research, education, advocacy and local patient services.

For more information about Relay For Life in Cohasset or to find out how to volunteer, please contact Justine Vanderlugt at 781-383-2956 or the American Cancer Society at 1-800-ACS-2345 or visit www.cancer.org.

Artistic evening for art education

The South Shore Art Center is raising funds for the expansion of its Educational Outreach Program with a special evening entitled "From Denim to Diamonds"...Dancing and dessert at the River Club in Scituate, Saturday, April 3. The art center's popular Outreach Programs: "Looking at Art" and "Arts to Go" bring school groups to the art center or artists into the schools to enrich arts education with hands-on creative art experiences tied to current art center exhibitions. While school systems are struggling to maintain art offerings, the work of the Outreach Program becomes more important than ever. This gala will help bring the programs to more area schools.

Bellevue Cadillac, the renowned swing, jazz, and rock band with its get-up-and-dance repertoire guarantees a dance party not to be missed! A raffle for a diamond necklace and earring set donated by King Jewelers, a silent auction of jewelry donated by jewelers and artists as well as denim jackets artfully embellished by local artists promises something for everyone.

Volunteers working on the committee received an overwhelming response from area jewelers and artists eager to support this educational initiative. King Jewelers, Alpha Omega, Cohasset Jewelers, Long's Jewelers, The Lapis Tree, EK Designs, Silver Storm and others have all donated exquisite pieces to the raffle and silent auction. South Shore artists Irma Cerese, Jo Anne Chittick, Nancy Connolly, Tanis Gray, Virginia Holloway, Margi Lortie, Qingxiong Ma, Janis Mattox, Kari O'Donnell and Tref Borden are transforming blue jean jackets into one-of-a-kind wearable art pieces to be featured in the silent auction.

Guests are encouraged to dress in the "denim to diamonds" theme, and awards for creative attire will celebrate their efforts. The party begins at 8 p.m. Tickets are $45 for members of the SSAC, $55 non-members. To reserve a ticket call 781-383-2787.

Banner day is planned for 1058th homecoming

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The 1058th is coming home.

Although no official date is set, family members and friends expect the Massachusetts National Guard unit to be back in the U.S.A. in weeks rather than months.

"You won't have trouble finding me – I'll be the hysterical Velcro mom stuck to the front of the bus when it arrives."

— Marion White, 1058th support group

And what a homecoming is planned!

The 1058th support group will hang "Welcome Home" banners on every overpass along the Mass. Pike for the 135 troops who will be bused from Ft. Drum, N.Y. to Hingham with a state police escort. Then on each utility pole along Route 228 from Route 3 to Central Street, there will be an outline of a truck with a photo of a soldier inside. The Armory will be a sea of yellow ribbons.

"We are looking forward to this in a big way," says Marion White, president, or more affectionately "head mother" of the support group. "You won't have trouble finding me – I'll be the hysterical Velcro mom stuck to the front of the bus when it arrives."

The support group held a shed sale at the Armory on Central Street on March 6 to raise money for a welcome home dinner and party for the troops and their families slated for a few weeks after they return.

"We are so proud of them and everyone should be proud of the job they've done," said White, whose daughter is Specialist Kathleen White, 29.

The 1058th Transportation Company left in February 2003 for Ft. Drum and was deployed to Iraq a few weeks later.

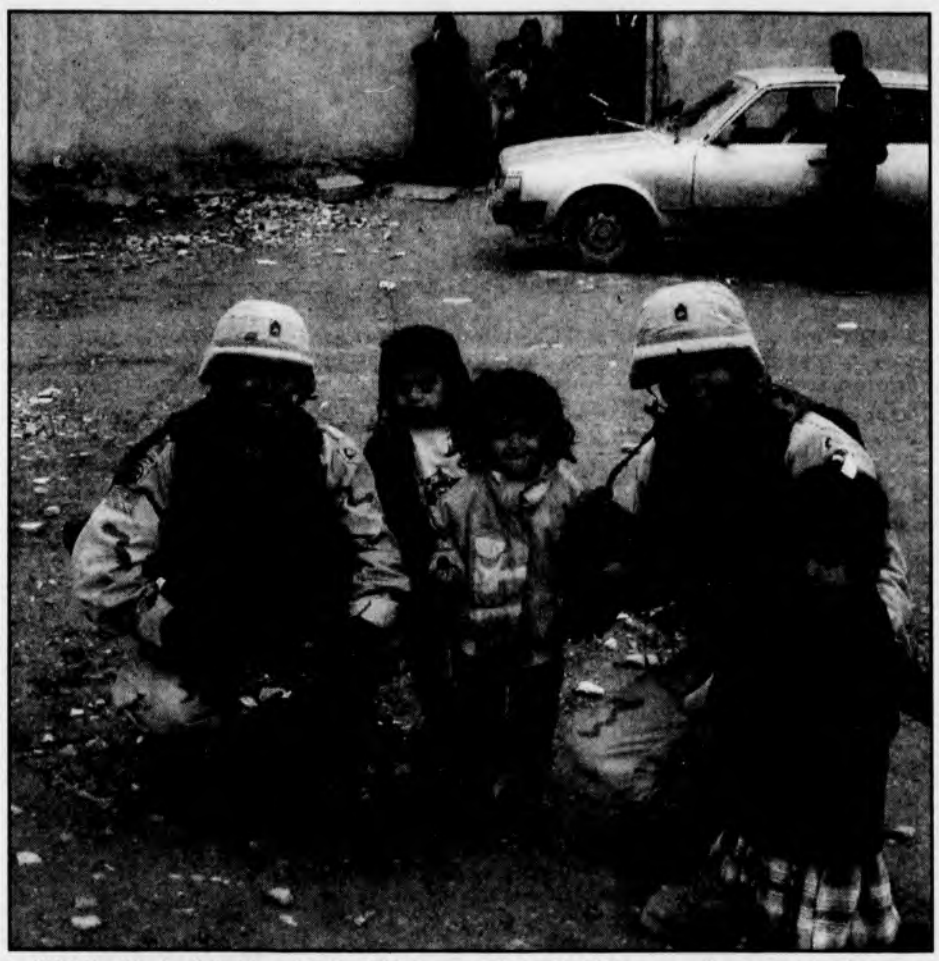
White explained when the 1058th got to Iraq there were no barracks, no showers, no phones, and no basic comforts for the troops. Today that has changed, so soldiers now headed to Iraq will have an easier time when it comes to living arrangements thanks to units like the 1058th that built the camps.

"No one will have to do that again – they've laid the groundwork for those who will replace them," White says

She said the job of the 1058th changed dramatically. "They went over as truck drivers (for supplies) and ended up driving gun trucks supporting convoys.

"Massachusetts should be so proud of them – these are weekend warriors and they stepped up to the plate. They are an inspiration to all and did it with honor."

White said it hasn't been an easy year for the families who are often on an emotional roller coaster.



"People ask, 'Isn't the war over?'" she says. "And I say, 'Of course it's not – my daughter is over there.'"

Duxbury resident Ruth Hearson's 27-year-old son, Specialist Michael Hearson is with the 1058th. She said her 24-year-old son, Stephen, often wears Michael's old T-shirts to feel closer to his brother. Michael has started sending boxes home rather than her sending care packages the other way, a sign the 1058th tour of duty is winding down.

Bob Fournier, who serves as the armorer at the Armory, said he is getting the building shipshape for the troops' return. Fournier served as a platoon sergeant with the 1058th in Operation Desert Storm in Iraq during the first Gulf War.

"They've done something we vets of the first Gulf War wanted to do and didn't get to do," he said, about overthrowing Saddam Hussein's regime. "We realized in '91 that at some point we'd have to go back.

"I have no qualms that it was the right thing to do – but if we'd done it in '91 they wouldn't have had to do it today."

SFC Jim "Smitty" Smith and SFC Bill Chiano with local children in a village outside Tikrit, Iraq. The soldiers are serving with the 1058th Transportation Company providing security for the 4th Infantry Division. The 1058th could return to Hingham as early as April.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

DAY CAMPS CAN BE A GREAT CHOICE!

Here are specific points to consider when choosing a day camp.

What training does the staff receive on safety, supervision, child development, counseling, problem solving, and other issues unique to working with young children?

Is the price all-inclusive or are there extra charges for:
- Transportation
- Overnights
- Swimming lessons
- Food service
- Horseback riding
- Group pictures
- Before- and after- camp extended care
- T-shirts
- Field trips

If transportation to and from camp is offered, where is the closest pick-up spot? Is it possible to meet the driver beforehand ? (at the Open House, perhaps)?

If before- and after-camp extended care is offered, who is with the children and what activities take place?

Is lunch served or do campers bring their own bag lunch? Are snacks and drinks provided?

If the camp offers swimming, do they offer swimming lessons or recreational swimming?

How does the daily schedule work? Are campers in a group with the same counselor all day?

Do campers move from one activity to another individually or as a group?

How much individual choice in programming do campers have?

To whom on the camp staff would you direct questions or concerns about your child?

Is an open house offered before camp starts so your family may meet camp staff and tour camp?

Are parents allowed to drop by for visits? If so, under what conditions?

The answers to these and questions from you and your child can help you decide which day camp is the right match for this summer.

CAMP gives kids a world of good.

WORSHIP NEWS

Irish harpist at Celtic Eucharist

Irish harpist Aine Minogue will provide the music for a Mothering Sunday Celtic Eucharist on March 21, at the 10 a.m., worship at Saint Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Ave. She will perform for the prelude and postlude of the service. During the worship she will sing Kyrie, Alliu Eanai, and Christe Redemptor. Her voice has been described as crystalline and mystical. At the conclusion of worship all are invited to gather round Aine and her harp to ask questions and watch her play.

The Celtic Eucharist is an annual celebration at Saint Stephen's. Some of the Celtic prayers used for the service date back to before the 14 Century. The Celtic Saint David offers a focal point in the worship for the church's commitment to support Saint David's Mission in Halifax. Saint Stephen's has pledged $50,000 over five years to help redevelop the Episcopal Church's ministry in that area.

Aine Minogue was born in Borrisokane, County Tipperary in Ireland. She has been featured on public radio and has produced six solo recordings. The LA Times said of Ms. Minogue that she "proves beyond reasonable doubt why the harp is indeed the instrument of angels." All are welcome to celebrate a Celtic Eucharist at Saint Stephen's Church on March 21.

United Day Of Prayer at Glastonbury Abbey

Each year Fr. Thomas Keating and Contemplative Outreach designate a day for people throughout the world to gather together for prayer, silence, and sharing. Fr. Keating has prepared a special video presentation for people attending these sessions, and there will be opportunity for discussion after the video.

This year the South Shore and Cape conference will be held at the Glastonbury Abbey Conference Center in Hingham on Mar. 20 from 9:30-3p.m. In addition to the video by Fr. Thomas, there will be several sessions of centering prayer, a walking meditation, and the opportunity to attend noon mass at Glastonbury Abbey.

It is not necessary to belong to a Centering Prayer group to attend this day, but familiarity and practice with centering prayer would be helpful. This day provides an opportunity for the global community of Contemplative Outreach to bond in silence. Morning coffee and lunch are included in the $35 fee for the day.

Please call Rosemary Edwards at 781-749-5377 or Ed McDermott at 781-925-2707 to reserve a place or to answer questions about this program.

Shawl Ministry to meet March 27

The next monthly gathering of The Prayer Shawl Ministry sponsored by Christ Church United Methodist of Hingham will be on Saturday, March 27 from 1 to 3 p.m. in the Gala Room of the Company Theatre. The Gala Room is on the second floor of the building to the left side of the theatre complex at 30 Accord Park Drive in Norwell. New participants are welcome and can be taught the needlework basics if necessary. Rev. Victoria Gaskell, pastor of Christ Church, will be the facilitator. Participants are welcome to create shawls for any person or project they desire.

For more information call the church office at 781-741-5030. Knitters should bring size 11 or 13 needles and 3 skeins of yarn. Crocheters need a size M,N, or P hook and 4 skeins of yarn. For suggested yarns and more information about The Shawl Ministry go to www.shawlministry.com. Directions to The Company Theatre can be found at www.companytheater.com. The Gala Room is not handicapped accessible.

Benedictine value of hospitality at Abbey on April 1

The Glastonbury Series presents "Listening To Other Voices: Monastic Spirituality in the 21st Century" featuring Lonnie Collins Pratt and Fr. Dan Homan, OSB.

They will speak on "Radical Hospitality: Benedict's Way of Love" on Thursday, Apr. 1 at 7:15 p.m. at Glastonbury Abbey Conference Center, Hingham. Free will offering.

The Benedictine value of hospitality is "The answer to modern alienation and injustice and a path to a deeper spirituality." Lonnie Collins Pratt is a Benedictine Oblate and Fr. Dan Homan is a Benedictine Monk. They have collaborated on four books, one of which is "Radical Hospitality."

Glastonbury Abbey is celebrating its 50th anniversary as a monastic foundation in Hingham. The Monks and extended lay community are committed to inter-religious dialogue and understanding.

Palm Sunday organ recital

G. Frederick Guzasky

As part of its Sunday Concert Series, St. Stephen's Church presents organist G. Frederick Guzasky in a recital on Palm Sunday, April 4, at 3 p.m. Guzasky is on the faculty at Bridgewater State College and an Affiliated Artist at M.I.T. in Cambridge. He is author of the "Gregorian Chant Handbook" and composer of a series of Russian Orthodox choral anthems distributed by the Musica Russica publishing company.

The program will be played on the church's 58 rank Aeolian-Skinner organ, built in 1964 - noted for its vast tonal resources and unusual placement around the church.

On the program, Guzasky will play the Bach Prelude and Fugue in D Minor, Rheinberger's Sonata in E Minor, and various selections of American organ music, a program he will present later this year in St. Petersburg Russia. The church is located at 16 Highland Ave and plenty of parking is available at the village or car park. Admission is free, but donations will be accepted. For more information, call 781-383-1083.

LISTEN To Life

by John Klefeker, BC-HIS
Board Certified-Hearing Instrument Specialist, MA Lic. #127

NO SHORTING THESE CIRCUITS

People with sensorineural hearing loss often experience discomfort arising from changes in sound intensity. Typically, tolerance for low-frequency sounds is different from tolerance for high-frequency sounds. Addressing these differences, hearing instruments may utilize any of the three different circuits that allow softer sounds to be heard more easily while avoiding discomfort from louder sounds. The first, linear peak clipping (PC), "clips" the "peaks" of input signals (usually intense vowel sounds). A noise saturation point is reached but the noise does not get any louder. The second type of circuit, compression limiter (CL), works much like a peak clipper except that the saturation point is never reached. Lastly, wide dynamic range compression (WDRC) amplifies soft sounds relatively more than loud input sounds.

It is often difficult for people with sensorineural hearing loss to hear certain consonants (th, sh, p, s, & f) or the comfortably loud sounds of normal conversation. At the same time, loud sounds may be heard the same as if no hearing impairment were present. Fortunately, there are wonderful advancements available in today's hearing instruments to provide the proper amplification for each situation. FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER invites you to see them at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. Call 781-337-1144 to arrange a free hearing test.

P.S. In one study, all three of the aforementioned hearing instrument circuits improved speech recognition of one-syllable words an average 29% and of connected speech by 10%-30%.

Anonymous tactics try to torpedo Harvey campaign

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

With the Town Election less than two weeks away, Lou Harvey says his candidacy for selectman has shaken up the establishment to the point where someone is trying to undermine his campaign.

Harvey, 465 King St., who is running as a team with Ralph Dormitzer, 111 Atlantic Ave., now finds himself having to respond to a four-year-old lawsuit accusing him of sexual harassment rather than addressing the issues that prompted him to run for office in the first place. The case was settled out of court last April.

An anonymous letter postmarked March 15 was sent to the Cohasset Mariner that included a photocopy of a lawsuit filed in December 1999 by a female employee fired from Harvey's company, Dalbar, Inc. A similar packet was either mailed to or dropped off at the Patriot Ledger, which published a story on the former employee's allegations on Saturday.

"There's little doubt there's a direct relationship to my campaign, otherwise what would the relevance be?"
— Lou Harvey, selectman candidate

The packet sent to the papers included a cover sheet printed in large font in italics stating: "This man thinks he should be a selectman in Cohasset, Massachusetts. Do you agree?"

Speculation about who sent the packets to the newspapers has been the subject of much talk around town all week.

Attorney Leonard H. Kesten of Brody, Hardoon, Perkins and Kesten represented the terminated Dalbar employee. Kesten is also retained by the town's insurance company, MIIA (a self-insurance pool of the Massachusetts Municipal Assoc.) to represent the interests of the town and Town Manager Mark Haddad, who is named in a civil suit launched by Sgt. William Quigley. Quigley, who has been the focus of an ongoing disciplinary hearing at Town Hall, is suing for invasion of privacy and interfering with his employment as a police officer. [Kesten said he is not representing Chief Robert Jackson who is also named in Quigley's lawsuit].

Kesten attended Day Three of the hearings Feb. 9 in the Selectmen's Office at Town Hall. Harvey, who is a critic of the way the town has handled the police matter, was also in attendance that day and the two men acknowledged one another.

"I walked in and I recognized him and he recognized me,"

Money matters

Dollars are focus of Town Meeting

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

There's a lot of money on the line at this year's annual Town Meeting and it's up to voters to decide what will be spent. Between the override, water department projects, sewer projects, and repairs, it seems funding is at the heart of many of the major issues to be taken up this year.

The meeting will start promptly at 10 a.m. on Saturday, March 27, at the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium. Discussion will focus on 27 articles, which are items of business detailed in the Town Warrant, mailed to all households. Extra warrants will be available at the Sixth-grade projects make the grade

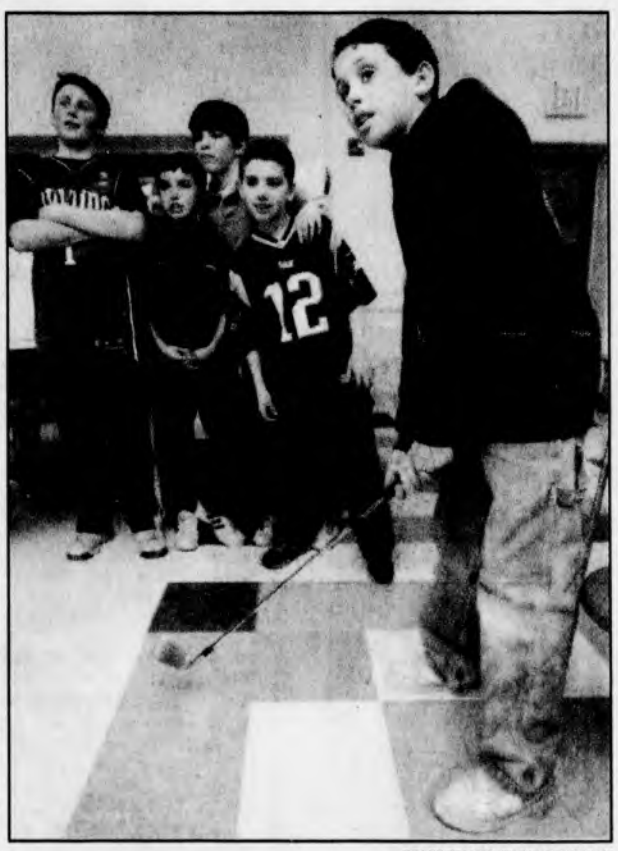
Students research topic of their choice

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM



With topics ranging from constellations and chocolate to Jacques Cousteau, Deer Hill sixth graders exhibited a diverse and interesting range of topics — each important to the student that chose it — as they displayed their Independent Study Projects to friends and family yesterday morning.

Each year, sixth graders are allowed to pick a topic and run with it, writing a research paper, and developing poster boards to display all they've learned through their independent study. This year's wide variety and in-depth study show the sixth graders will be more than ready to make the academic move to the middle-high school at the end of the year.

Taylor McQuade chose a topic very close to his heart. He said he decided to research the topic of breast cancer because his mother is a breast cancer survivor. "I learned a lot about the types of cancer and the types of treatments, and the way they find it," he said. Taylor's poster showed the different kinds of cancers as well as the different kinds of surgeries to remove tumors.

He talked about the difference between chemotherapy and radiation therapy, both of which his mother went through. He explained the difference between a mastectomy, where the entire breast is removed, and a lumpectomy where only the mass is

Local office seekers strut their stuff for cable-TV camera

League hosts candidate's forum

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Audience members wrote questions on index cards provided by league members. In addition to fielding questions, the candidates provided opening and closing statements.

Although it may not translate into votes and has nothing to do with the override and other issues — pharaohs and Cohasset genealogy provided a few light moments in Monday's candidate's forum at the high school library.

Selectman Merle Brown's family is about the closest to pharaoh status in Cohasset dating back to 1812 with a long tradition of public service. Brown, who proudly detailed his family tree during his opening remarks, is seeking a fifth term.

And political newcomer Scott O'Grady, who is running for school committee, didn't have the genealogy — but his son set him straight when the importance of preparing for the forum was weighing on his shoulders.

"I realized I had more questions than answers," said O'Grady, who felt discouraged and turned to his seventh-grade son, who was working on his social studies homework. "I said, 'son – how did I get myself into this? I am fully unqualified to tell people what to do.'" O'Grady said he son looked at him mortified and said, "What do you think you're running for – pharaoh?"

The candidates' forum was sponsored by the Hingham League of Women Voters, an organization that is also open to Cohasset residents. The event drew about 60 people and was televised live on cable-TV. Audience members wrote questions on index cards provided by league members. In addition to fielding questions, the candidates provided opening and closing statements. Unopposed candidates were allowed to introduce themselves and state their reasons for running at the end of the event.

Selectmen were on the hot seat first, following by school committee candidates and then by the two men running for a one-year unexpired term on the planning board.

The planning board contest for a one-year unexpired term provides one of the sharpest contrasts, with Joe Nedrow, a retired businessman and long-time resident and former school committee member, and Stuart Ivimey, a 40-year-old attorney, who's been in town five years. Nedrow chaired the senior housing committee that helped bring the plans for the Cook Estate, a senior housing development, to fruition and Ivimey has led the Community Preservation Committee for the past three years.

Ivimey said he grew up in a small town and watched that get destroyed by development and also lived in Colorado where he watched urban sprawl wreck the area. He said Cohasset was embarking on an era of unprecedented development. He didn't want to see Cohasset also be destroyed.

Ivimey described himself as a fair person who would do what is best for the town while being

Tree taken down was not memorial

The tree taken down on the island at the intersection of Joy Place and North Main Streets, also known as John Paul Lyons Square, was not a memorial tree and was not dedicated to anyone. The Mariner reported last week that former tree and park Supt. Paul Laugelle, who planted the pin oak in 1982, said it was not a dedicated tree. Since then, Glenn Pratt of the Veteran's Memorial Committee has been doing some research of his own, and has again confirmed the tree was not a memorial to Capt. Lyons, who the island is named for.

"I have personally spoken to Johnny Lyons' brother and sister and they both state that the only memorial to their brother, who was voted 'most athletic' by his Cohasset High School Class of 1962, is the plaque that was authorized by the town meeting and placed by the Veterans Memorial Committee in 1996," he said.

Pratt went on to say that the rumors being spread around town that the tree was planted in memory of Capt. Lyons, without being confirmed with the Veterans Memorial Committee, "Were irresponsible on the part of whomever made those statements. The discussions and press coverage has put the family through an unnecessary event, complete with neighbors leaving notes on the family home's door."

Last minute changes to the Town Warrant

Article 7, the Large House Site Plan review has been reworked by the Growth and Development Committee, and it will finalizing the article this week. It has had much language taken out which will change it from being a requirement to a discussion with guidelines.

Article 8, the Demolition Delay bylaw has not been taken off the Warrant as of yet, but it could be. Town Counsel believes the bylaw would require the Building Inspector to go against state law by allowing a building permit to be halted for 6 months, when there is a 30-day limit. However, other towns have adopted the same bylaw, and there has been no problem. Discussion will continue until Town Meeting.

Article 10, which deals with amending the Senior Multi-family Overlay Residence District bylaw, has had a wording change, which will preserve the Cook Estate property. Because Town Meeting voted in favor of the Cook project, and the 15 percent cap would have prevented the project from moving forward. The Planning Board did not want to present an article that would have gone against what the town approved.

Article 17, which will appropriate $3 million for Water Department projects will be presented after Article 11, in order to place it before other Water Department requests which rely on that money being allocated.

Article 22, which deals with the James Lane easement may be withdrawn, but it will depend on whether George Roukounakis accepts the town's offer for his 1,310 square feet. If he does not agree to the town's appraised price, the article will not move forward.

Citizen's petition on the police matter

The way Article 6 is currently written, it requests $10,000 to hire independent counsel to investigate the investigation of the police department and the alleged misconduct, actions taken to remedy the misconduct, and identify any abuse of power, fraud, or deceit that may have taken place.

However, Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris said as the board understands, that wording has been changed, but it has seen nothing in writing as of yet.

She believes the new intent of the article will be for selectmen to set up a committee to review the code of conduct for the police department. Given the fact that the board is currently in the midst of a 45-day "cooling off" period from the police matter, "It touches very much on what the board has said it will not discuss," said McMorris. Based on that, she said it would be her recommendation that the board vote to recommend indefinite postponement of the article.

The agenda item to discuss the Citizens Petition with its proponents was cancelled on the advice of Town Counsel, Town Manager Mark Haddad said.

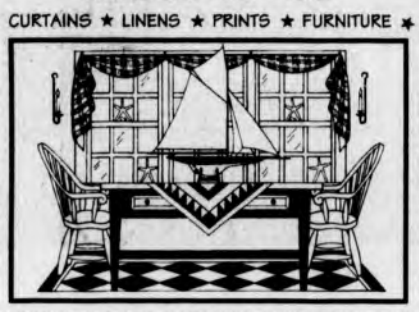
Cook project moving forward

Town Manager Mark Haddad said "things are progressing very nicely," with regards to the Cook Estate, and preliminary meeting with the Planning Board was very positive. Members of the Senior Housing Committee met to discuss the accepted Northland Residential development proposal, and have come up with some ideas they would like to see discussed.

Steve Bobo, Chairman of the Board of Health and Senior Housing Committee member, said he has some ideas for possible wastewater and storm-water management. He also said if it's at all possible, including drying rooms in affordable units where clothes could be air dried rather than in an electric dryer, could be a good way to conserve energy. He said his group also discussed possibly incorporating the Bancroft name into the name of the development, to pay tribute to the woman who made the project possible.

Bobo said a waiting list for the development is in high demand, and should be started soon, if possible. "None of these are hard and fast, and none need to be considered," he said, but added they are ideas that are important to the community and it would be nice if some could be incorporated.

Police overtime study is floated



Members of both the police and fire departments presented figures to the Board of Selectmen regarding overtime figures. The overwhelming numbers for the fire department are a result of South Shore Hospital eliminating paramedic service to the town, which has required the Cohasset department to take over that responsibility.

However, while the police department's figures are not as large as those of the fire department, is not as clear why overtime there is a continuing issue. Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris suggested the police department undergo the same kind of overtime review study as the fire department has, to see what changes can be made to help remedy the situation.

Water report sent to residents

On Monday, March 22, the Cohasset Water Commission mailed its 2004 Water Quality Report to all Cohasset residents. EPA requires all water suppliers to prepare and distribute this report by July 1 each year.

"We are pleased to report, again, that in 2003 Cohasset drinking water was in compliance with all applicable water quality standards," said John McNabb, Chairman of the Water Commission.

"We urge all Cohasset residents to review this Report," said McNabb. "We have revised our watershed map to focus on the watershed area in Cohasset, so Cohasset residents can more easily determine if they live in the watershed, with tips on what residents can do to protect the water supply."

"In 2003, we continued to take many significant steps to preserve and protect the quality of Cohasset's public drinking water supply," said McNabb, "including the annual flushing of the distribution system, the rehabilitation of about 1.3 miles of water mains by replacing undersized mains, and by starting a taste & odor study to identify the taste & odor issues so we can take measures to improve the quality of our tap water."

EPA regulations require all water suppliers to report all regulated contaminants which are detected in the drinking water. Check your report for details of what contaminants were detected in Cohasset; they were all within compliance of applicable water quality regulations, McNabb said.

"We are also making progress in our comprehensive systems improvement program, based on our long range capital improvement plans for the distribution system and treatment plant, and our Surface Water Supply Protection Plan," said McNabb. "Our aggressive system improvements program will continue after the March 27 Annual Town Meeting, where we expect to get authorization (Article 17) to borrow $3,000,000, which we are able to do without raising water rates, for the next phase of the improvements program in 2004. Also, we have qualified for a low interest 2% loan from the state Drinking Water SRF program, which if we get authorization from Town Meeting (Article 18) will allow us to borrow up to $23,000,000 over the next 5 years to continue our system improvements program at a lower cost to ratepayers."

Copies of the 2004 Water Quality Report are available at Town Hall, the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, at the Lily Pond Water Treatment Plant, and on the Water Department web site, www.cohassetwater.org.

Habitat welcomes new homeowners

South Shore Habitat for Humanity invites you to join them on April 3, at 43 Elm St., for a House Dedication Ceremony to celebrate the Ahrens family's new lives as Habitat homeowners.

Friends, family, volunteers, neighbors, and supporters of South Shore Habitat for Humanity will join Robert and Diane Ahrens at their current home in Cohasset, which they share with their three children, Caitlin (12), Casey (10), and Corianne (6). The ceremony will begin at 4 p.m. at 43 Elm St., with refreshments to follow at St. Stephen's Church.

The ceremony will begin at 4 p.m. at 43 Elm St., with refreshments to follow at St. Stephen's Church.

The Ahrens family has an especially unique Habitat story. They were selected out of 12 Cohasset families to become South Shore Habitat's 37th Family Partners in August 2003. Instead of building their own home, the Ahrens bought and immediately moved into an existing condominium in Cohasset that South Shore Habitat re-purchased from the previous owners.

Even though their home was already built, the Ahrens family was still required to complete 500 hours of "sweat-equity," which many families spend constructing their own homes. The Ahrens completed most of their hours working in Marshfield and Norwell on Habitat homes for other families. "Their energy, hard work, and positive spirit at Habitat's work sites make the Ahrens family great neighbors," says John Seavey, Family Selection Chair and Board Member. The strong partnerships the family has developed with different towns and volunteers truly embodies the spirit of Habitat for Humanity. Executive Director Cynthia Hargrove explains, "South Shore Habitat's mission is to build more than just houses; we also strive to build communities and lives." The Ahrens' Dedication Ceremony in April celebrates the completion of their "sweat-equity" hours and the beginning of official Habitat homeownership.

South Shore Habitat for Humanity uses a comprehensive evaluation process to select families based on need, income, and willingness to partner with Habitat. The Ahrens have purchased their home from South Shore Habitat and will pay for it through a long-term no-interest mortgage. South Shore Habitat recycles the monthly mortgage payments through a Fund for Humanity, which aids in the construction of additional homes.

South Shore Habitat for Humanity, a Habitat International affiliate founded in 1986, is a nonprofit, ecumenical Christian ministry dedicated to building simple, decent homes in partnership with families in need. Together with families, volunteers, churches, and community and business leaders, South Shore Habitat builds on the vision of making basic housing a reality for families in need. South Shore Habitat for Humanity serves 32 cities and towns south and southwest of Boston. Projects are currently underway in Braintree, Norwell, Marshfield, Easton and Hingham.

pat martin, school committee member

...on the issues affecting our schools

What's at stake in this election?

"...no one wants to pay more taxes. The excellence of our public schools is my highest priority and what makes Cohasset a great place to live. Year in and year out it's reflected in our property values. I believe this needs to be protected.

The question is, do we respond with political rhetoric or deal honestly with our challenges and our choices?"

What about fiscal management?

"...all of us involved in this process are parents, taxpayers and homeowners. I stand by the fact that we've invested every dollar the town has entrusted to us in quality education and we have seen the results. We have been subject to the scrutiny and oversight of the selectmen, the advisory committee, the department of education, as well as outside audits. There is 100% agreement on the budget we're recommending. Our key challenge will not be met by making promises, but by finding effective ways to respond to increasing enrollment and shrinking state aid.

Why support this override?

"...because we have made cuts totaling over $700,000 in the last two years. If we cut any more, we start to compromise on the core deliverable, which is quality education for our kids. I believe our job is to present the town its legitimate choices. To me, this override asks the citizens of Cohasset to make the decision regarding what they are willing to support.

My budgeting priority will remain protecting the learning environment. When we are forced to cut back, I will always start as far away from the classroom as possible."

What lies ahead?

"...more hard work, more challenges, because everything matters; budget management, maintaining and protecting the town's investment, negotiating and responding to continued growth... we succeed when we work together and stay committed to providing quality education.

There are no magic bullets or quick political fixes... over the last six years we've built new schools, fought to keep class sizes small, navigated over $850,000 in losses from the state and have managed to maintain excellence in the face of a statewide fiscal crisis... I think we're in a place to consider ourselves fortunate. We have the opportunity to maintain a quality system. There are many towns who will pay more just to maintain mediocrity."

recalls Kesten, adding they exchanged a perfunctory greeting. At the time, the room was full of town officials and interested citizens there to attend the hearing. Kesten said he recalled responding to someone who asked, "How do you know him?" by simply stating "I know him professionally," he said. "I never told anyone about the lawsuit." Kesten doesn't recall who asked him how he knew Harvey.

The town's handling of the police disciplinary matter that also involves Officer James McLean was one of the reasons Harvey and Dormitzer got into the Selectman's race. The men pulled nomination papers on Feb. 12, joining incumbent Selectman Merle Brown and candidate Rob Spofford in a four-way race for two seats on the board.

Sgt. Quigley and Officer McLean have been on paid administrative leave since Oct. 20 amid allegations of abuse of police power and conduct unbecoming an officer. They deny any wrongdoing and want to get back to work.

Harvey said alerting the press to the lawsuit was a deliberate attempt to sabotage his campaign.

"There's little doubt there's a direct relationship to my campaign, otherwise what would the relevance be?" said Harvey. "It is disappointing the depth to which some people would sink."

Harvey said the Harvey-Dormitzer campaign is about advocating for change. Those who want to maintain the status quo obviously feel threatened, he said.

Although it did not come up in the form of a question at Monday's candidates' forum sponsored by the Hingham League of Women Voters, all the selectmen candidates disavow the 11th-hour tactics demonstrated by dredging up the lawsuit.

In his opening remarks at the forum, Selectman Merle Brown, who is seeking a fifth term, said he had nothing to do with the anonymous packet. "I don't believe in that type of thing, it's a terrible thing to do," he said.

Selectman candidate Rob Spofford said Tuesday the voters of Cohasset deserve better than the negative campaigning that has recently occurred in the race for selectman.

"I have and will continue to run a positive campaign that focuses on my strengths and ideas for helping our town and preserving the high quality of life that we enjoy in Cohasset," Spofford said. "I hope that we have seen the end to accusatory politics so that voters can best judge us on things that matter, such as our records and accomplishments."

Dormitzer said the incident illustrates why he and Harvey decided to run. "This goes to the heart of what Lou and I think is wrong about this town," Dormitzer said. "Respect, civility and decency — those are the things that have begun to erode."

Kesten said the lawsuit received some Boston press at the time it was filed; the lawsuit is a public document and is available at Middlesex Superior Court and on the Internet, he said. Neither he nor Harvey would disclose the terms of the settlement citing a confidentiality agreement.

Harvey emphatically denies the allegations of sexual harassment. Kesten says it is undeniable that his client was fired within 48 hours of Harvey learning she was making a sexual harassment complaint against him. The parties agree since the case never went to trial, a jury never decided who was telling the truth.

"My client is fully prepared to waive the agreement so the public knows the terms of the settlement," said Kesten, who has written to Harvey's lawyers to that effect. He described his client, who was identified in the Ledger story, as distraught because she thought she was all behind her.

Kesten said neither he nor his client had anything to do with sending the packets to the press. He said it is none of his business who gets elected in Cohasset.

"I have no beef with Harvey," he said. "The lawsuit was resolved amicably. It is not my fault or my client's fault that someone found it."

"If Harvey is elected, I look forward to working with him," Kesten said.

Selectmen are mum on issue

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Selectmen were not quick to respond to questions this week regarding the recent unveiling of sexual harassment charges from the 1990s against selectman candidate Lou Harvey.

After reading an article in a local paper Saturday which stated Harvey had been previously sued for sexual harassment, Russ Bonetti, a Harvey/Dormitzer supporter who lives at 20 Parker Ave, asked the board if it had a stance, "On what is obviously an attempt to influence the election." Selectman Fred Koed said perhaps that question should be posed toward the newspapers, including what their intent was in publishing the articles.

At the time, the Mariner had not printed any story about the incident. Koed mentioned that Selectman Merle Brown, who is running for re-election for his seat on the board, had made a statement the night before at a panel discussion regarding the issue.

Bonetti said he understood Brown had made a statement, but "I'm asking again, in an open meeting," whether the board has taken a stance.

"I think there's some responsibility for the newspapers to back off," said Koed, adding he doesn't know whether the press "sat on" the information to bring it out just before the election.

Bonetti said the board to date has responded very openly on what they perceive to be unfair press about the ongoing police matter, and asked again whether it would make a statement about the charges against Harvey.

"We have no control over it," said Selectman Michael Sullivan, to which Bonetti said no one was suggesting that is the case. "I don't know why they did it, and you're asking me to put myself into the mind of another person," said Sullivan. "What do you want us to say?"

Bonetti said he would have expected the board to make a statement saying this sort of tactic is unacceptable, or that it would expect people to be more civil. However, Sullivan responded by saying, "I don't know who did it."

Selectmen Chairman Ronnie McMorris said the whole tone of this year's election is much different than it has been in the past. "It's unfortunate to see the tone the election has taken. It's unprecedented in the time I've been in Cohasset," she said.

Bonetti asked again if the board had a collective statement on the issue, to which McMorris said she had made her statement and moved to adjourn the meeting.

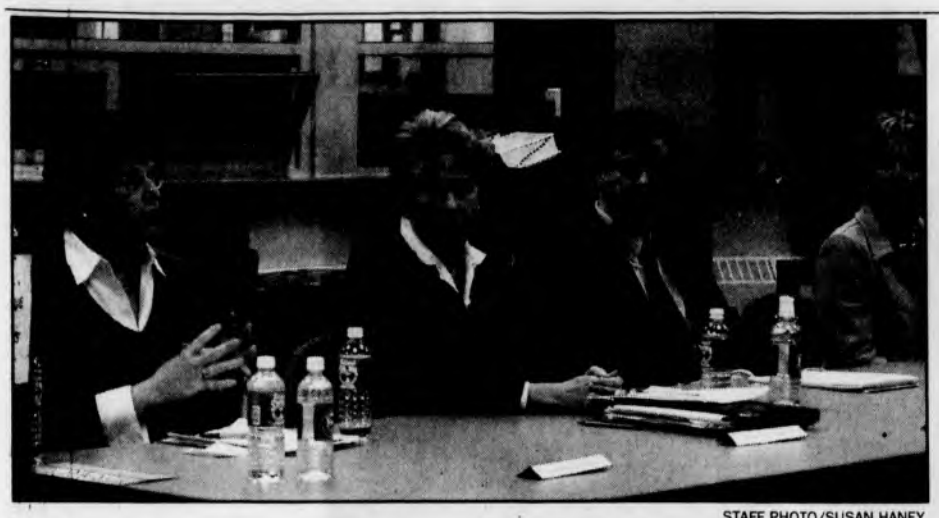
The Villages at Deer Hill
(Cook Estate)

Northland Residential Corporation is pleased to have been selected by the Town of Cohasset to develop he Town's 95 unit senior housing complex on the former Cook Estate on Sohier Road. We are looking forward to working closely with the Town over the next few months to create an optimum plan encompassing both age-restricted townhomes and affordable rental apartments.

We are honored and excited to be part of such a unique and timely opportunity. Cohasset has already approached the property's master use plan with tremendous care and concern. The Town is to be commended for its thorough and objective approach to the planning and the selection process.



Since being designated as the point developer for the Cook Estate, we have already begun to receive calls from potential buyers. Obviously, this project needs to successfully move through a detailed local and state permitting process. Subject to the receipt of all required permits, we will be creating a list of potential buyers who wish to be registered on a waiting list.

If you have an interest in receiving ongoing details on the townhomes and/or apartments at the Villages at Deer Hill, please feel free to contact Lynne Pedersen, Vice President, Director of Sales & Marketing.

Lynne can be reached at (617) 641-6705 or at lpedersen@northlandresidential.com mindful of the rights of abutters and developers.

Nedrow, who said he has a proven track record on the school committee during difficult times in the '80s, wants to serve on the planning board to see the Cook Estate senior housing project to fruition.

Both men think existing homes should have priority to hook up to the town sewer before new developments. With Avalon, the Cook Estate and Cedaremere on the horizon, both candidates are also concerned about the influx of new housing in town.

Nedrow said he was concerned about rental housing because renters can be more transient and not feel as connected to Cohasset.

Ivimey said if all three projects come on line, the town would see a radical change in a short period of time

O'Grady, one of four school committee candidates for two seats, noted that everyone from parents with children to senior citizens has stake in the schools. He said he would fight for openness and community input.

Incumbent Pat Martin, who is seeking a third term, says she is proud of the work she's done and thinks experience in light of the challenging budgetary times is what the board needs. There are no easy solutions, she said.

Candidate Adrienne MacCarthy touted her experience on the School Building Committee and her long record of volunteerism in the schools, including service on the PSO. She said maintenance of the town's $52 million investment in new school buildings would be a priority.

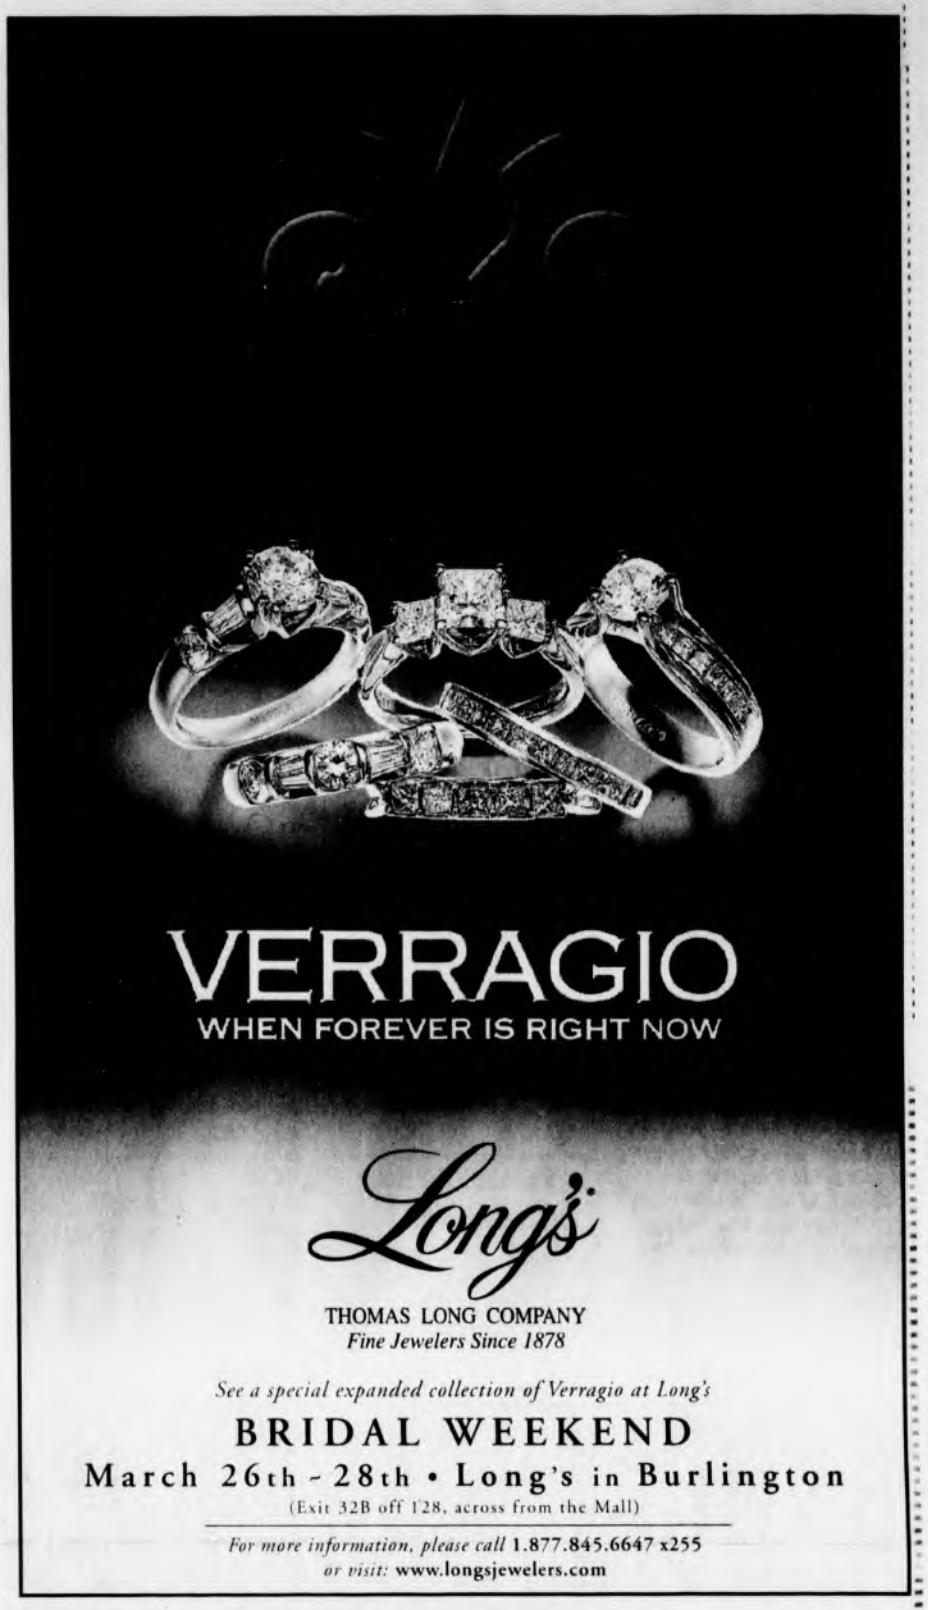
And Jamie Williams, who is also seeking a first term, said she wants those in kindergarten to have the same quality of education in Cohasset as those in the class of 2004. She said although she thinks there is little waste in the budget, she would unravel the line items and look for efficiencies.

Although their approach, decisions and priorities may differ, the school committee candidates all said they didn't want to see any further erosion in the schools and said a Cohasset education is top notch.

The candidates in the four-way selectman's' race — comprising Brown, Rob Spofford, Lou Harvey and Ralph Dormitzer — all touted their background and experience in both the business world and community service.

Spofford, as chairman of the school building committee, said he was proud of being able to bring the school building projects in "on time and on budget."

Harvey said it was time to look at the budget process differently. He said the town needed to look ahead and should have a grasp on next year's budget before this year's is complete.



Dormitzer said the town had to bring down its rate of budget increase — which he said is out of line with towns like Duxbury and Norwell — through a consistent long-term approach.

Brown said there wasn't a lot that could be done to bring down the budget increases because Cohasset is a small town with little commercial tax base.

The selectman candidates were also asked about the school projects, affordable housing and controlling growth and the draft report on the Town Manager form of government.

Unopposed candidates at the forum included Tracy Weaver (library trustee), Nathaniel Palmer (water commission), Mike Westcott (planning board, 5-year term) and Rick Shea (school committee, one-year term).

The election is April 3. Watch for candidate profiles next week.

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

PUT A SPRING IN YOUR STEP

Hey Cohasset, Spring is slowly sneaking into our surroundings and weather, it feels really good to hear 50's being mentioned on the weather. It also reminds me to encourage all of us to take the time to stop and "smell the flowers" as the saying goes. Between school, the MCAS testing that happens between now and May for many of our children, the many sports and activities that are starting, work and just plain life, we all forget at times to just plain stop and enjoy what is here. I am sure that so many of you feel like I often do at the end of the day, "I wish I had more time to do.....". Maybe we all just have tore-prioritize some things and make that time happen. I know that I do.

MAKING DEADLINE

On that note, I need to make a general plea to everyone who sends, emails or calls in items for the column(thank you to each and every one of you) is to please make sure it is to me no later than Mondays by 5 p.m.! I write the column on Monday evenings and will no longer be accepting anything on Tuesdays due to my time constraints and being able to get it into Mary Ford in time for deadline. I am not able to check all my messages on Tuesdays and try to re-format everything as it then means more work and space is needed, etc. If I receive your items after 5 on Mondays, it will appear in the following week's column.

TABOR HONORS

Zoe Murray, daughter of Richard Murray and Deborah Meehan, and Isabelle Bertolami, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. John Bertolami have been named to the honors lists at Tabor Academy for the first semester. Zoe, who achieved honors, is a senior and Isabelle, who earned commendation, is a sophomore at the four-year private school in Marion, Mass. Congratulations to you Zoe, this is fantastic news.

PLAYGROUND BRICKS

Project Playground, a committee Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum continues to sell engraved bricks and granite pavers. All funds raised by the Brick by Brick program will help build the playground which is being built adjacent to Our World Children's Global Discovery Museum and the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Bricks are $100 engraved and Quincy Granite 15 in. x 15 in.; pavers are $500 engraved. This is a creative and enduring way to honor families, children, grandparents, teachers or members of the community. To participate in the Brick by Brick program, please call Debbie Kuppens at (781) 383-6399.

The first phase of the walkway is complete....please stop by Our World and check it out! Deadline for the next brick order will be April 15.

REMEMBERING BARBIE

On Friday, April 30 from 7p.m. to 12a.m., a tennis tournament will be held at the Kingsbury Club in memory of Barbie Gurnis. Proceeds from the event will be used to support the Duxbury Bay Maritime School's "Crossroads for Kids' Maritime Adventures" program. Maritime Adventures takes campers from Crossroads for Kids at Camp Wing in Duxbury and exposes them to sailing, rowing and marine ecology.

Perhaps more importantly, the program also exposes them to the life-long lessons of responsibility and respect that are gained through these activities. According to Ingrid Drago, "Anyone who knew Barbie knows that she was an incredible athlete. She had many passions and sailing was always at the top of her list. Teaching sailing to kids who might not otherwise have that opportunity would have been something she felt was important. We are happy to have this positive way to remember a special friend."

The round robin style of play will be from 7-9p.m. and a reception will be held from 9 a.m.-12 p.m.. Players of all ability levels are welcome and encouraged to play. Food, dancing and a silent auction will also be part of the evening. Tickets for tennis and the reception are $75 per person; tickets for the reception only are $50 per person. Tickets are available at The Kingsbury Club, the Duxbury Bay Maritime School or through Karen Butcher (934.7135), Ingrid Drago (585.8976) or Jamie Therrien (934.3223). For more information or to donate silent auction items, please call Karen, Ingrid or Jamie.

ROTARY ROAD RACE

Need a spring running goal? Spring forward! The Cohasset Rotary 10K Road Race By-the-Sea is an inspiring spring racing target for all runners in the northeast. This race runs a magnificently beautiful shoreline loop that will motivate every runner. The 28th annual Cohasset Rotary 10K will spring into action on Sunday, April 4 beginning at 1 p.m. Starting and ending at the historic Cohasset Common, this race is a symbolic and practical beginning of the spring racing season for several reasons, including the date — the first day of Eastern Daylight Savings Time.

This 10K makes an ideal motivational tool for those who want to get into racing shape for the season. It is especially friendly for beginning runners and veterans alike, sporting a very flat and scenic course. The race will benefit the many local, regional, and international charities for which Rotary Clubs are famous; and this type of racing will give your heart rate and your heart a lift. The race is sanctioned by USATF-NE. Beautiful long sleeve T-Shirts are guaranteed for the first 800 registrants to check in. There will be free refreshments for all registered runners. The Road Walk (Fun Walk 5K or 10K) starts at 10 a.m. from Sandy Beach. Register to run or walk or check for more information at <http://roadracebythesea.com/> or www.coolrunning.com. Online registration is $15 or print out applications from the website and mail-in registration is $16. Mail-in registrations must be post marked by March 27. On site registration at $18 will be held at the South Shore Community Center, 3 North Main St., Cohasset, MA on Saturday April 3, & Sunday April 4, 9 a.m. till noon. Pre-registration is strongly recommended. For Race questions call 781-383-9030 or send email to info@roadracebythesea.com

Goodwin Graphics knows how to make a message stick

Local business is homegrown

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Ron Goodwin, Phyllis McCormack, George Ayoub, Pam Colley and Carrissa Ayoub look out the window of Goodwin Graphics on Route 3A.

Ronnie Goodwin is a man who leaves his mark all over town. Whether at Hingham Lumber, Cohasset Collision, Cohasset House of Pizza, JJ's or Good Sport — over the years, Goodwin Graphics has helped local businesses advertise themselves via their T-shirts, sweatshirts, jackets and other company garb.

Goodwin Graphics at 164 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) has been "naming" clothing since 1976. Over the years, many businesses and town organizations have used Goodwin Graphics, which helped turn a late-night T-shirt venture into a lucrative graphics business.

While working as a carpenter in the 1970s, Goodwin began selling T-shirts on the side.

"At the time, there were only one or two print shops in the area," recalls Goodwin, who wondered if there was a way he could print the T-shirts himself and make more of a profit. He began experimenting with inks in his parents' basement, and through much trial and error, started printing T-shirts, which eventually grew into the business he owns today.

Currently, Goodwin has 251 different accounts with various businesses in Cohasset and his customers usually place orders for more than one item.

"We have a pretty diverse customer base," he said, adding at one time, Bank Boston was one of his biggest clients, before it merged with Bay Bank. He printed between 20,000 and 40,000 T-shirts for the company — one for each employee, which were packed up and shipped all over the world. He said Merrill Lynch was also a good customer; and at one time had company jackets printed that were sent to the far east.

But Goodwin said he focuses on smaller businesses these days and has branched out over the past two years to include "non-wearable" items. Through a partnership with the Advertising Specialty Institute (ASI), he began selling items such as rulers, pens, and coffee cups with printed logos, which are great marketing tools for his clients. Those items are shipped to him from the ASI, but he still prints all his wearable items in house.

"We can put together really creative programs for customers," said Goodwin, adding having logos on merchandise and clothing are one of the best forms of advertising. In fact, he said having wearable merchandise is almost like investing in a walking billboard.

But it's not just his clients that benefit from his business. Goodwin donates to many groups around town, and has scrapbooks full of cards and letters thanking him for his help.

Over the past 25 years Goodwin has become an expert in the methods of printing. He uses two different techniques to apply graphics, the first of which is called spot color printing, where each color is printed separately from the others. The second, process color printing, uses four specific colors: cyan, yellow, magenta, and black, which are printed as layers of dots that combine to look as if another color has been printed. For example, a design may look like it has a solid purple flower, but if the image was enlarged, it would look like cyan and magenta overlapping dots.

Goodwin said 10 years ago, people in the printing business would have said the four-color process was impossible. Even now, "I'll bet 80 to 90 percent of the other businesses would say they can't do it," Goodwin said, adding, "It gives us a competitive edge."

The ink Goodwin uses is plastic based, and not water based, which means it does not dry out easily. In fact, the only way to dry the ink is to heat it at a high temperature. Items are placed on a conveyor belt and run under a heater which reaches between 315 and 375 degrees.

By heating the ink, it bonds to the fibers of the material, ensuring the graphic won't peel off, explained George Ayoub who has worked at Goodwin Graphics for eight years. He said many other companies do not use the same method and after one trip through the washing machine, inks begin to peel at the edges.

After working in the printing industry for more than 20 years, Ayoub is very familiar with what it takes to ensure a quality print job. Ayoub was formerly employed by Sears and Roebuck, and with such a large retail store, it's necessary to sometimes print thousands of shirts an hour. He said he printed a good number of children's apparel items, especially those featuring Care Bears and Strawberry Shortcake. He said he still remembers the number of the color blue used to print Grumpy Bear. "It stays with you," he said.

Ayoub also used to work for Reebok, and printed the shirts for the 1996 Olympics held in Atlanta. He also used to print for the Boston Red Sox and said he printed shirts for the 1986 World Series against the New York Mets, that the team unfortunately never got to wear. "I still have one though," he said.

Goodwin and Ayoub said roughly 80 to 85 percent of all print jobs that come through the door are done by hand rather than by machine. Ink is squeezed through a screen onto the fabric and Ayoub places the item by hand onto the conveyor belt to be heated. However, with larger jobs, or where deadlines are a concern, they will use the machine, which allows the production of about 100 shirts in 17 minutes. However, "Even if you're only printing a dozen, they all have to look good," Ayoub said, adding the best way to ensure a clean print is to make it by hand, and that's what keeps customers coming back.

OPINION

Negative campaigning

"It is not the critic who counts; not the man who points out how the strong man stumbled, or where the doer of deeds could have done them better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena."
— Theodore Roosevelt

We all owe the Hingham League of Women Voters a debt of gratitude for hosting Monday night's candidates' forum.

It was encouraging to see a good-sized crowd of about 60 at the event itself and to see all the candidates for contested seats in one place.

One had to come away with a sense of pride in Cohasset knowing there are so many qualified individuals willing to throw their hats into the ring and risk possible defeat.

The forum provided the vehicle for the public to size up the candidates. We hope Monday's forum and our Question of the Week will help Cohasset voters make an informed decision at the polls.

It takes guts and a good dose of courage to run for election and expose oneself to potential potshots.

Here in Cohasset it is sad someone — and we are very comfortable in our belief that it was not one of the opposing candidates or a member of their campaign teams — decided to sling some serious mud at the 11th hour of the election season. The effort aimed at discrediting one of the selectman candidates was cowardly and unwarranted.

We may not all agree on how to approach the issues, but if Monday's forum proved any thing: it is abundantly clear that each candidate — whether opposed or unopposed — loves Cohasset and wants to insure it continues to be a wonderful place to live.

There is no place for dirty politics in a Town Election after which we all need to go back to being neighbors and friends once the ballots are counted.

Please note, the selectmen will debate tonight at 7:30 p.m., which will be shown live on cable-TV. Call-in questions will also be accepted. Be sure to tune in.

And don't forget to attend Town Meeting at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Sullivan gymnasium at the middle-high school. It's where a lot of important issues that have a direct affect on your quality of life will be discussed.

Absentee ballots available

Absentee ballots for the Annual Town Election on April 3, are now available at the Town Clerks office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Friday, April 2, at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. You may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

Absence from the town during the hours the polls is open.
Physical disability.
Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed, and the signature of the applicant.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by April 3, 2004 to be counted.

The Accu-Vote optical scan system will be used. Instructions to voters are printed on the ballot and any pen or pencil may be used. To vote, completely fill in the OVAL to the right of your choice. Secrecy sleeves are available at the check in tables. The ballots can be inserted into the machine face up, face down, etc., and will be read. It is the usual policy to flip the ballot over so the blank side shows as they insert it into the machine. Voters who are uncomfortable with this should use the secrecy sleeve.

If you are permanently physically disabled and cannot cast your vote at the polling place, you may file a letter from your physician with your town clerk, stating that you are permanently unable to cast your vote at the polling place because of physical disability. A completed application, for an absentee ballot for you to sign and return will be mailed to you by the town clerk at least 28 days before every primary and election.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Town boards do an excellent job

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter is in response to the many letters over the past few weeks that have clearly taken the opportunity to attack our Selectmen and School Committee on their, incorrectly perceived, lack of fiscal responsibility of budgeting for 2005. I firmly believe that every person is entitled to their own opinion. I also firmly believe that if you are bold enough to stand up and publicly criticize people like our Selectmen and School Committee members, who each essentially volunteer their time and efforts to the betterment of our wonderful town at the expense of spending this valuable time with their families, then you should also be brave enough to stand up and offer your own self and your own time to these committees rather than just sitting by on the sidelines criticizing from afar those who have dedicated themselves and their own personal time to help run our very special town.

My wife, Linda, and I moved to Cohasset because we think this is one of the most beautiful places we have ever seen, and because of the high quality schools and the commitment the town has made to the schools. We fully plan on raising our children here and having them attend the Cohasset school system when they finish up with nursery school. I, too, do not want to pay more taxes but I clearly understand that normal increases in costs, combined with the lack of $436,000 of previously committed State aid, have significantly impacted our annual budget for 2005. The simple truth of this matter is that the School Committee has already illustrated its action of fiscal responsibility by making cuts to the school budget of $400,000. These cuts will happen no matter what and are not impacted whether you vote No or Yes on the Override. Due to normal economic conditions, annual costs are rising. Proposition 2 1/2 has been in place since 1980. Therefore, over the last 23 years we and every other town in Massachusetts have had over twenty years of time to find the "hidden fat" left in our town budgets each year. We should consider then that there is probably no "hidden fat" in our budgets and that we are probably running our town on the most cost conscious and leanest of budgets with very little room for error or loss of any level of committed State aid.

Back to the situation at hand with the Override Vote. The School Committee, Selectmen and Advisory Board have each independently voted unanimously to Vote Yes on the Override. Each of these committee persons are your neighbors, friends and/or relatives who have spent the most amount of solid quality time reviewing, analyzing, and debating these issues on our behalf , and they have all decided unanimously for a recommendation of a Yes Vote on the Override. Think about it. If you have not had the opportunity to spend the countless hours, days, weeks and months at nightly meetings studying, analyzing and debating each and every single line item of the 2005 budget, why would you now second guess your trusted neighbors, friends and/or relatives who have spent the time doing this and are entrusted with Cohasset's best interest at heart.

Energy systems at new schools

TO THE EDITOR:

As the school construction project nears completion, the School Building/Facilities Committee would like to share with residents some thoughts about energy costs and steps our committee took to design and implement energy efficient systems at Deer Hill and the Middle High School

High energy costs are an issue for everyone. We do not have to remind the public what is happening to fuel prices. This is one of the factors contributing to increased operating cost at our schools. Additionally, the size of Deer Hill School has increased by over 65 percent, and the Middle High School has more than doubled in size.

Air quality is an important concern. The Building Committee, through its architects and engineers, installed an efficient, modern fresh air system for the buildings, providing students and staff with. a healthy environment.

Our decision to convert from oil to gas was based on economy, concern for the environment, and lower maintenance costs.

All building systems - including lighting, heating, and air conditioning, were designed with the optimum energy-saving technology available. During the building process, resident construction professionals reviewed the plans, added helpful commentary, and supported the design. The state School Building Assistance Program allows for a flat rate per square foot within the project for construction and renovation costs. Cohasset's proposal was at the minimum limit. The Building Committee applied for and received a grant under the National Grid Design 2000 Program, which. reimburses schools for installing better, more efficient lighting and mechanical systems. The town of Cohasset received more than $50,000 in reimbursements and now benefits from continuous savings in energy as these systems operate.

Both Deer Hill School and the Middle High School had exceeded their 50-year life expectancy. The town of Cohasset is fortunate to have initiated a building renovation and construction program when it did. "Had we waited, Cohasset would possibly qualify for only a 40 percent reimbursement, rather than the 60 percent reimbursement we are now receiving.

Members of the School Building/Facilities Committee are proud of the new schools we have built for the town of Cohasset, which have been completed on time and within budget.

Scott Collins, Vice Chairman,
School Building/Facilities Committee

More teachers should be top budget priority

TO THE EDITOR:

Classroom student-teacher ratio combined with a rich curriculum is the principal determinant of a quality education. While it is easy to point to the $40 million that the town spent on school buildings over the past two years as evidence of the level of Cohasset's commitment to the quality of our schools, the truth is that buildings make an infinitesimally smaller contribution to the quality of education than classroom student teacher ratio and curriculum. In order to know the best way to reach an individual student, the teacher must know each student. Ted Sizer, a former dean of the Harvard School of Education and founder of the Coalition for Essential Schools has studied class size extensively with his colleagues and found that in the K through 9th grade levels the ideal class size is 12 to 15 students with an upper limit of 20 students.

In the current school year, the classroom student teacher ratio is 20:1 in the Osgood School and 23:1 in the Deer Hill School. These ratios are already too high: at or above the upper limit and well above the optimal range. Despite increased enrollment, next year's budget — assuming that the override passes — actually calls for cutting 3 teachers in Osgood and Deer Hill Schools! This would increase the classroom student teacher ratio up to 26:1. To put this decision into context, in a $12 million school budget this move saves $105,000 or approximately $36 per taxpayer — less than the price of a dinner for two at The Red Lion. School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn stated two weeks ago in his article "At the elementary level some class sizes will be increasing from 20 to possibly 26 students, which we as a committee think is too high." Yet he and the school committee did nothing to prevent this; in fact they voted it into the Budget! If the schools need more money in their Budget to fund their core educational mission, they should communicate their value proposition directly to the people of the town and ask for more money rather than just cut costs at the expense of educational value and present it to us as a "fait accompli".

Should the override fail to pass, the decisions which the schools are likely to make could include catastrophic cuts in homeroom, art, music, computer, library, physical education, math and English teachers. These cuts could result in a classroom student teacher ratio of up to 30:1. Furthermore, these cuts by the school could mean the complete elimination of activities that they classify as "enrichments" but any reasonable person would consider the core and most memorable part of the educational experience. Already there is neither drama nor foreign language instruction until seventh or eighth grade. Can you imagine kindergarten through sixth grade without music, art, drama, foreign languages or physical education?

Going forward, it is critical that every item in the school budget be considered in the context of achieving the greatest educational value for the dollar. Let us look at a couple of school expenditures that were approved within the last two weeks. In the last school committee meeting, with no debate mind you, a motion was approved to purchase a new bus for $60,000. The old school bus needed frequent repairs and if we had one less bus students would have a slightly longer ride. However, did anyone ask the question what is the relative educational value of one bus versus approximately two full-time teachers?

At another point in the last two weeks, there were teacher meetings. While a half-day of meetings was scheduled as a half day of school, for the full day before, all of the second grade teachers had an additional teacher's meeting and all of students in the second grade— 6 classes — had substitute teachers. A yes for sewer money for Little Harbor/Atlantic Ave.

COMMENTARY

RICHARD E. T. BROOKS

At Town Meeting on Saturday, March 27, we will vote on an article with significant potential impact on the entire Town, and especially on the 450 homes in the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue Sewer District. The article, sponsored by the Sewer Commission, requests a relatively small amount of money for continuing the ongoing planning and engineering of a future sewer system for that area.

We must vote yes, or the probable adverse financial impact on the Town and the residents of those homes would be substantial!

By way of background, in response to a longstanding Superior Court consent order against Cohasset by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts for significant and ongoing violations of the Federal Clean Water Act, the Town planned to install a sewer system in the Little Harbor area to correct the escalating pollution of the harbor and sections of waterfront, including the decades-long ban on harvesting shellfish from Cohasset's waterfront areas. The Atlantic Avenue homes were added later, because the problems there were similarly serious.

The pollution arises from increased home building, runoff of ground pollutants from fertilizer and roads, and, most notably, the substantial aging and failure of perhaps hundreds of existing on-site septic systems. These systems were built 40 to 60 years ago, in an area where impervious ledge and outcroppings are dominant features of the terrain A few of the properties still are serviced by ancient cesspools, usually at or near the shoreline, and leach directly into Little Harbor and the shorefront, as do many of the failed, aged septic system leach fields. Further, many of these old, small summer cottages were replaced or expanded prior to Title V with much larger homes-indeed, "mansions" as they are now referred to!

Under current regulations, designed to protect all bodies of water and the beautiful coastline, these old leach fields could not today be located close to the water being susceptible to flooding during exceptional high tides and storms.

The sewer system plan was developed in 1997 by the Town, partly in response to the concerns of a group of Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue residents known as "Citizens for Equitable Environmental Solutions" (CEES). The plan avoided imminent action by the Massachusetts DEP, under the 1975 court consent order, to levy fines against the Town, as well as an order for mandatory, immediate Title V inspections of all septic systems in the area. These inspections could have forced costly replacement of non-compliant systems, whether or not the house was to be sold or expanded. This would have cost many homeowners between $25,000 and $100,000, depending on location, ledge, proximity to the water, size of lot, etc. A significant number of people would have had to build new systems or face possible loss of occupancy permits.

It is difficult to contemplate the noise and disruption caused as a result of blasting away huge amounts of ledge to excavate new leach fields for hundreds of homes within a short period of time.

If the Town votes to continue progress towards the sewer system, the current hiatus on mandatory septic system inspections will most likely continue. If the Town fails to vote for continued progress on this future sewer system expansion, in effect reneging on the 1997 agreement with the state DEP, continuing with the Clean Water Act violations, and continuing to ignore the court consent order, all heck is going to break out since the patience of the federal and state regulators has been exhausted.

I know something about the cost and disruption of installing a new septic system. When I bought my house in 1998, the sellers had to install a new "FAST" system that came with a price tag of $85,000. Some of the neighbors said that the blasting seemed endless and, of course, the noise carried great distances via the solid, expansive ledge!

While my system would readily pass a current Title V inspection, I support the planned area sewer system because it is a permanent solution to wastewater disposal-not an interim solution. Further, it is clear that most, if not all, harbor and shoreline fronting properties would need to install a "FAST" or equivalent type of treatment system for the wastewater in order to comply with the rigorous Town, state, and federal regulations which also require that these systems be inspected/tested four times per year by a qualified third party firm under an owner-paid contract.

Note that a large portion of the cost of these systems is the underground piping and pumping systems to direct the treated effluent to a, usually, newly located and built leach field that is at least 100 feet distant from the water.

As a CEES member, as are many of the residents in the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue area, I urge all voters to come to Town Meeting and help achieve an overwhelming approval of the Sewer Commission's article. This very modest funding will keep the project moving and demonstrate the Town's good faith regarding the 1997 agreement.

While it is most critical for the residents of Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue, it is in the best interest of everyone in Cohasset who values clean waterways, an evolving wastewater management plan that eventually should extend to all citizens, and healthy communities where the risk of illness from exposure to untreated sewerage is permanently eliminated. CEES members, over 100 families, have all contributed funds in support of implementation of the 1997 agreement with the state. From our fellow townspeople, we solicit only your concern, your understanding, and your vote for the Sewer Committee's article at Town Meeting.

Concerning the recent lawsuit filed against the Sewer Commission, the developer contends that any available treatment plant capacity should be granted to the 100-plus proposed new homes to be built at Cedarmere, off Beechwood Street. The Commission turned down the developer's application primarily because the actual capacity of the central plant has not yet been verified, and because the development is not located in the Central Sewer District which is a criteria for eligibility.

Common sense dictates that (1) the Town honors its agreement with the Commonwealth, and (2) the focus of the Sewer Commission be on alleviating the long-term pollution problems of existing homes. It is distressing that local developers do not seem to care if the Town is fined for noncompliance with an outstanding Superior Court judgment and consent order. Nor do they care about an equitable wastewater management plan or if hundreds of their neighbors are forced to replace their septic systems within a very short period of time with major disruption to their finances and the surrounding environment.

Existing problems and commitments clearly should take highest priority, as should serving the needs of the many hundreds of existing residents who have been waiting their turn for some years for this much needed sewer system expansion, and all the while paying the highest in taxes in support of prior sewer system expansions and other priority needs of the Town. Only then, as sewer capacity allows, should we turn our attention to proposed new home developments and the future new residents who as yet have not had the "opportunity" to contribute financial support (taxes) and sweat equity for the benefit of all the existing residents of our great Town.

Please save the date of Saturday, March 27, to come to Town Meeting. Vote to continue the progress of an equitable wastewater management plan that was forged in prior Town Meeting votes by the Sewer Commission, concerned citizens' groups, and all Cohasset residents.

HEALTH NOTES

The facts about Medicare benefits

By Steve Bono
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Recently, many people received a short pamphlet in the mail alerting us about provisions of the Medicare Modernization Act of 2003. There has also been much rhetoric about how good or bad it is by those seeking to make a point. Nevertheless, it's here, and since it affects many of us, we should understand its provisions and know something about it.

According to Medicare's excellent web page http://www.medicare.gov/ MEDICARE is an essential health care program for people age 65 and older, people with certain disabilities, and people with End-Stage Renal Disease. At the outset, it should be said that if you are happy with the Medicare coverage you have, you can keep it. Or, you can choose to enroll in new options described below. No matter what you decide, you are still in the Medicare program.

Beginning in June, 2004, Medicare-Approved Drug Discount Cards will be available which may help save on prescription drugs. Medicare will contract with private companies to offer new drug discount cards until a Medicare prescription drug benefit starts in 2006. In May 2004 continuing through Dec. 31, 2005, Medicare will send you information with details about how to enroll. You should compare prices you pay for current prescriptions with your present plan and see if there will be a saving.

Also, in 2004, Medicare rules and payments may give more health plan choices and better benefits. Implementation is said to depend on location. Call your existing plan provider to find out about changes your location.

Generally, new preventive benefits will be covered, including:

- A one-time initial wellness physical exam within 6 months of the day of enrollment in Medicare Part B.
- Screening blood tests for early detection of cardiovascular (heart) diseases.
- Diabetes screening tests for people with Medicare at risk of getting diabetes.

These benefits add to the preventive services that Medicare already covers, such as cancer screenings, bone mass measurements and vaccinations.

In 2006 Prescription Drug Benefits will be added to Medicare. These plans will be prepared by local healthcare providers who will be advertising in our area. All people with Medicare will be able to enroll in plans that cover prescription drugs. Plans might vary, but in general, this is how they will work:

- You will choose a prescription drug plan and pay a premium of about $35 a month.
- You will pay the first $250 (called a "deductible").
- Medicare then will pay 75percent of costs between $250 and $2,250 in drug spending. You will pay only 25 percent of these costs.
- You will pay 100 percent of the drug costs above $2,250 until you reach $3,600 in out-of-pocket spending.
- Medicare will pay about 95 percent of the costs after you have spent $3,600.
- Some prescription drug plans may have additional options to help you pay the out-of-pocket costs.
- Those with incomes no more than $12,569 for a single person, or $16,862 for a married couple, might qualify for a $600 credit on their discount card to help pay for your prescription drugs. Many don't qualify because of their enrollment in plans which exempt their participation.

Medicare plan choices will also be expanded in 2006 to include regional preferred provider organization plans (PPOs). Regional PPOs will help more people with Medicare have multiple choices for Medicare health coverage. PPOs may help save money by choosing from doctors and providers on a plan's "preferred" list, but usually don't require you to get a referral. PPOs are among the most common and popular plans right now for working Americans. All of these options are voluntary. You can choose to remain in the traditional Medicare plan you have today. If you already have prescription drug coverage through your current health insurance, or you already get discounts on your prescriptions, review your coverage closely to see if you may be able to save money on your prescription drugs by enrolling in a Medicare-approved drug discount card.

when a teacher is ill there needs to be a substitute, but do we need them on so many other days as well? Did anyone ask the question what is the relative educational value of using substitute teachers to the tune of $121,500 in the 2005 Budget versus approximately four full-time teachers?

The number of children in special education in grades K-6, while it has risen and declined in between, is basically unchanged from 1996 (100 in 1996 and 106 for 2005 in the official School Budget forecast). In spite of the fact that it is the only enrollment number that hasn't changed, the special education budget has increased by 24 percent in the past two years and, in next year's budget, the school is adding two special education teachers and a second school psychologist at a cost of $129,000. The argument is that by spending this money, more special education students will be encouraged to stay in the school system as opposed to using outside services and that the psychologist, in particular, will save $95,000 which, while estimated, is not included as a credit in the budget. Perhaps if class sizes were smaller, the school would need fewer psychologists and many of the children currently requiring special education could actually receive a better education than they are with the existing approach! Did anyone ask what is the relative educational value of spending $129,000 for a psychologist and two additional special education teachers versus approximately 4 fulltime regular teachers? If we accept the school's logic that hiring a school psychologist will save $95,000 in outside services, shouldn't this savings be included in the budget to keep the 3 fulltime regular teachers?

In its current budget, the school committee has included over $323,000 in items that were under funded in every budget prior to this year. $100,000 of this $323,000 figure is comprised of the $75,000 additional amount included in the aforementioned substitute teacher category and smaller amounts in staff development categories. Furthermore, heating and electricity costs are increased by $223,000 in the 2005 Budget based upon this year's overrun. While some of this increase in energy expenses can be attributed to the larger school buildings, it is likely that much of this increase is due to the fact that many of the buildings were heated this year while they were open to the outdoors during construction and due to the record-high energy prices this winter. Even Osgood, which was not expanded in the past year, saw a jump in heat and electricity costs from $13,500 to $33,500 and we have all seen it in our heating and electricity bills. Certainly for the good of our economy and our wallets any reasonable person would expect energy prices to moderate by next year! I am not going to criticize a desire to be honest in budgeting. However, it would have still been prudent and accurate accounting to include a percentage of these previously under funded amounts in the budget as opposed to including the entire worst-case scenario. Did anyone ask the question what is the relative educational value of including these previously under funded items and worst-case scenarios in the budget this year for the very first time versus firing three fulltime teachers? In a $12 million budget isn't it likely that less than 1 percent could be found for three teachers by being a little less aggressive in estimating worst case scenarios for energy costs?

On the town side of the budget we are spending $400,000 to refurbish Alumni Field and an additional $110,000 to refurbish and add sprinklers to the Beechwood Ballpark and Town Common. While these are in the capital budget, is it appropriate to be spending $510,000 on landscaping when we are firing three teachers to save $105,000? In the operating budget we have overruns of $125,000 in Legal Expenses, $175,000 in public safety overtime and who knows how many $100,000's to cover the officers on administrative leave, the legal battles and the police hearings. Is it appropriate to be spending this money when we are firing three teachers?

I believe that there is a need for a fundamental change in the way that decisions are being made about our schools. There is a need for a strategic vision, a long-range plan, proactive decisions and some critical thinking. Supporting the override is the least that our community can do but this alone is not enough. There is a need to focus on improving the student-teacher ratio and improving the curriculum. Every expense needs to be placed in the relative context of how it will contribute to the central mission of our schools: educating our students. I am sure that by placing our decisions in this context that we can find room for at least three teachers in an amended budget for 2005, perhaps more. If you agree that teachers are needed, come to Town Meeting to support the amendment of Article 3.

Drama workshop and override vote

TO THE EDITOR:

Okay, I admit it. This letter began as a way to acknowledge an extraordinary group of Cohasset High School students: The Cohasset H.S. Drama workshop and its rise to the 2004 Massachusetts Drama Festival State Finals. What I found myself realizing was the striking parallel between their story and the implications of the upcoming Proposition 2 1/2 override.

Perhaps the difficulty with getting one's teeth around yet another override "sandwich" is not just how we still seem to be hungry when we've finished, but how very abstract it all seems. We speak of quantities of text books, maintenance, and number of 7th grade teachers etc... I see real faces, real students, whose accomplishments are palpable.

No matter that Cohasset's Drama students were underdogs in an unequal playing field of better funded schools. What does matter is that they had the opportunity to be in the field at all (we see that they took care of the rest themselves). The Cohasset Arts Boosters is primarily to be thanked for this. If we are unwilling to try to mitigate the financial gap between the reality of what things cost and the truth of what we have, I am afraid the result will trickle down to these real faces. By shouldering our financial burdens collectively, citizens would continue to be able to individually sponsor invaluable Booster organizations such as the Arts, Sports etc.

After each Festival round, judges provide "notes" to each participating school. One of Cohasset's Semi-Final notes concluded with, "No flash, no gimmicks... just some real people. Never fails." I invite the entire Cohasset Community to take a bow. These students' achievement is our collective achievement. It is not just theirs that I speak of. But of each real face, each real student that we help enter the broader community we call society. As with all aspects of life, seldom can one do everything. But we can try to do what we can. To this end, it seems invaluable that we support an override that will enable these very real faces the opportunity to excel.

Oh yes, to Jenna Emmons (Director), Austin Breslow, Ali Earon, Brenna O'Donnell, John Keniley, Katharine Murphy, Emily Savage, Nicole Durant and Krissy Watts — we are so very proud of you.

Anonymous mailer should come forward

TO THE EDITOR:

Regarding the anonymous packages to the Mariner and the Patriot Ledger containing documents pertaining to a nuisance corporate lawsuit filed against Lou Harvey 5 years ago, I think it's a shame to see these kind of tactics used in a small town election for several reasons.

First, our town is as close as we get to direct democracy, with town meeting and a five person Board of Selectmen. Our goal should be to have the greatest possible participation in town politics. From anonymous attacks such as that of last week to ranting personal letters to the Mariner and the strong-arm tactics that we've seen in the police scandal, this year Cohasset has seen more than its share of attempts to discourage involvement. Second, in such a small town we are not only neighbors but also friends and parents of children who play together — who would wish such a divisive culture on our happy home?

It would be nice to believe that the person who assembled and forwarded the documents simply wanted an explanation. If that's the case, let me say that I am

MacCarthy coffee and dessert tonight

What a week! Adrienne MacCarthy would like to thank the Hingham League of Women Voters for providing Cohasset Candidates with a great night to present there platforms and field questions from the audience. This event offered a great opportunity for the voters of Cohasset to get to know the candidates.

Tuesday evening, Adrienne was out there again, meeting with new faces at the home of Susan and John Donohue. Again, Adrienne talked about her accomplishments, so far, and the level of commitment she plans to make to the school committee, if elected.

Thursday, March 25, 7-9pm, Adrienne will attend a "Coffee and Dessert," hosted by Anna Abbruzzese and Sarah Murphy, 90 Old Pasture Road. If you haven't met Adrienne, please join us.

Spofford to visit neighborhoods

In an effort to hear the concerns of Cohasset citizens and to share his message of positive change and public service, Selectman candidate Rob Spofford will spend the last week of the campaign going door-to-door through many Cohasset neighborhoods.

"Public service is about committing yourself and your principles," Spofford says. "It's imperative that we work to protect what distinguishes us as a community, and part of that is how we interact as neighbors. I want to meet as many Cohasset voters as possible. It's another way of carrying through on my commitment to this town and its residents."

Voters can also meet Spofford at a reception hosted by Agnes McCann, Sunday, March 28, 4-6 p.m.

"As a fiscal conservative, I believe we must balance expenditure against need," adds Spofford. "My approach as a Selectman will be to listen, qualify and make informed and independent decisions."

O'Grady to host library reception

Scott O'Grady has arranged for an informal gathering, with refreshments, at the new Paul Pratt Memorial Library, in order to continue the conversation begun at the candidates' forum. Please join O'Grady and other interested voters on from 7-8:30 p.m. Thursday, April 1, in the library meeting room. O'Grady looks forward to meeting people who share his interest in the continued excellence of our schools, and discussing how best to meet the challenges of the future. Please feel free to contact O'Grady with comments or questions at:

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. BHRC records local senators' votes on four roll calls and local representatives' votes on three roll calls from prior sessions. There were no roll call votes in the House or Senate last week.

Senator Robert L. Hedlund (R-Weymouth) (617) 722-1646 Room 413F

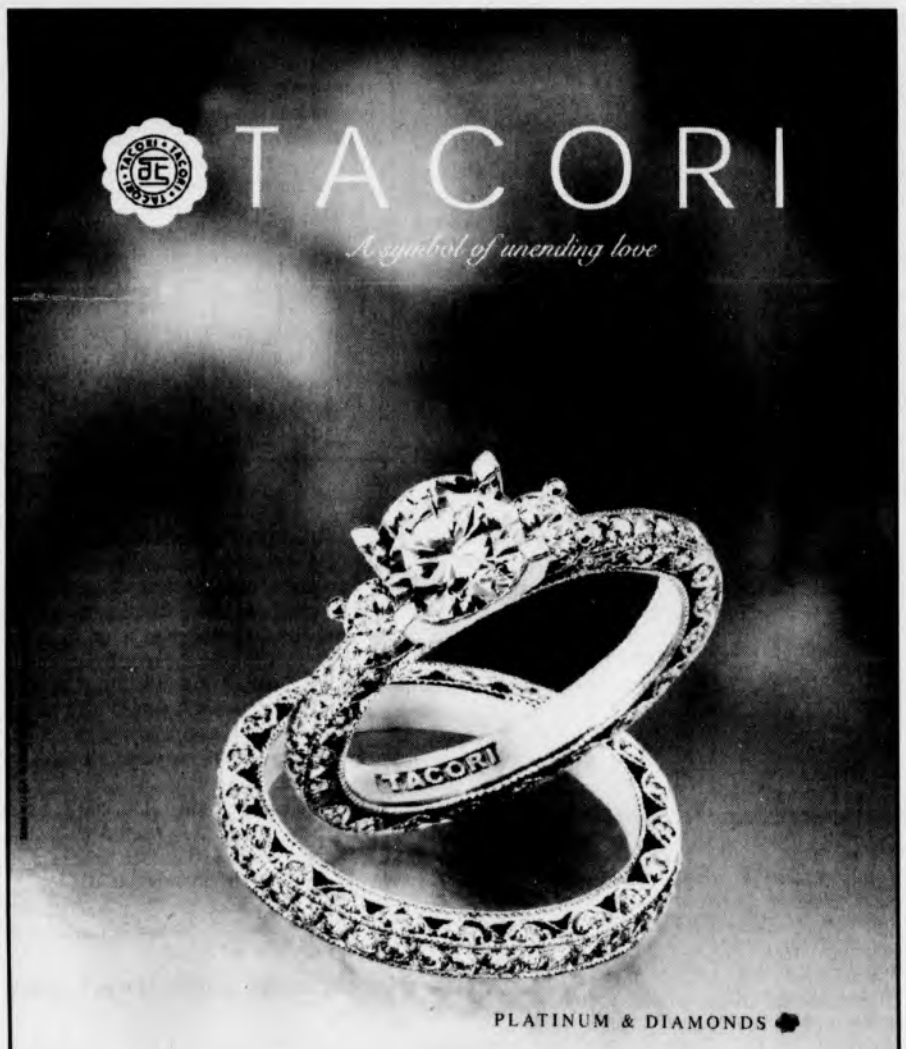
Representative Garrett J. Bradley (D-Hingham) (617) 722-2120 Room 472

$300,000 FOR "FROM THE TOP" CLASSICAL MUSIC PROGRAMS (H 4330) — Hedlund: DNV Bradley: Y

House 131-25, Senate 31-6, overrode Gov. Romney's veto earmarking $300,000 from the Massachusetts Cultural Council's (MCC) budget in order to fund From the Top— a Boston-based, non-profit organization. The group's projects include producing a nationally syndicated PBS radio show taped in concert halls across the nation and featuring performances by and conversations with pre-college age classical musicians. The group also conducts cultural leadership workshops and training to help these musicians act as role models and to work in their local schools and communities across the nation encouraging other young musicians, promoting interest in music and making their own local radio shows similar to the PBS one. Override supporters said these projects are highly successful and often help underserved, inner city students. They noted that the $300,000 was previously funded through the now-defunct Education Capital Trust Fund and said this earmark simply provides the same amount of funds through the MCC. Override opponents said the legislature should not earmark MCC funds and noted that From the Top has already received an $8930 grant from the MCC this year. They argued that these decisions should be left up to the council's unbiased panel that reviews grant applications and said that it is unfair to give From the Top a $300,000 grant when other arts projects are being denied much smaller grants. (A "Yea" vote is for earmarking $300,000. A "Nay" vote is against it).

$300,000 FOR MASS. CULTURAL COUNCIL (H 4330) — Hedlund: DNV Bradley: Y

House 138-18, Senate 32-5, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of an additional $300,000 for the Massachusetts Cultural Council (MCC). Override supporters said this $300,000 is additional money to fund the earmark that would be given to From the Top. They noted that it is important to provide this additional $300,000 for the MCC so that the $300,000 earmarked for From the Top would not come out of existing funds that provide grants for other projects. Override opponents again said it unfair to circumvent the grant process by providing $300,000 to From the Top while other organizations and communities are required to go through the entire grant process to request funding for much smaller projects. (A "Yea" vote is for the $300,000 for the MCC. A "Nay" vote is against the $300,000).



$419,000 FOR RECOVERY AND SELF ESTEEM PROGRAMS (H 4330) — Hedlund: DNV Bradley: Y

House 114-43, Senate 34-3, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of $320,000 for Gavin House, a substance abuse recovery home and $99,000 for Self Esteem, an organization that provides self-esteem education to high-risk, underserved populations and the professionals who serve them. Override supporters said this funding is essential to operate these highly successful Boston-based organizations that serve people from many areas of the state and have made a major difference in many people's lives. They noted that the Gavin House has been holding bake sales because it desperately needs money. Override opponents said the professionals in the Department of Health's Division of Substance Abuse Services should decide which projects receive funding and argued that the legislature should not interfere by earmarking funds. (A "Yea" vote is for the $419,000 earmark. A "Nay" vote is against it).

$7.4 MILLION FOR ENVIRONMENTAL CLEANUP (H 4330) — Hedlund: N Bradley:

Senate 26-12, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a section earmarking $7.4 million from a $700 million environmental bond package from 2002 that allows the state to borrow funds to finance various environmental projects. The $7.4 million would be used to ensure the cleanup of all contamination on the site of Norfolk's former Pondville Hospital. Override supporters said that many years ago the state dumped hazardous materials on this formerly state-owned property that is now privately owned. They argued that the state has a legal and moral obligation to clean up the site and noted that the private company is likely to create jobs and help seniors by developing the land and constructing assisted living facilities or senior housing. Some override opponents said the legislature should not earmark these funds and should leave these decisions up to the professionals in the executive branch. Others argued that this override has all the characteristics of a sweetheart deal that benefits private developers and urged the Inspector General to look into the matter. Some said the override is a futile action because the executive branch has the final authority to issue bonds and actually fund these projects and has done so for very little of the $700 million. The House already overrode the veto of the earmarking. (A "Yea" vote is for earmarking the $7.4 million. A "Nay" vote is against earmarking it).

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

The new review of the Town Manager Form of Government suggests the town has too many elected officials and recommends having the selectmen appoint the boards of assessors and health, and the recreation, sewer and water commissions. Do you agree?

SELECTMAN/ Rob Spofford

While I am willing to listen to arguments of proponents of the recommendation, at this early stage in the discussion process, I do not feel such a change is in the best interest of the Town. The idea that members of the currently elected Boards of Health and Assessors along with the commissioners of Water, Sewer and Recreation be appointed by the Selectmen is based on the consultants' view that this change will lead to better "coordination of finances, administrative practices and general Town policies". If this recommendation were adopted, it would mark a significant change in how the Town is run and consolidate substantial power with the Board of Selectmen.

Coordination among our Boards and Commissions is very important and to a large degree is achieved with our current structure. Where improvement is needed, I would prefer to see us work on enhancing communication among our Boards rather than take away the right of the voters to elect candidates for these offices. As someone who believes in the power of democracy, I feel that we should only remove the role of the electorate to choose their representatives when there is a vital need in doing so. In my mind, this is not the case in Cohasset.

The complex challenges that Cohasset is dealing with are not the result of the Selectmen not having enough power over other Boards and Commissions. We are fortunate to have many qualified and talented people who are willing to volunteer their time to the Town. I believe voters should be able to decide who among these volunteers should represent them on the Water, Sewer and Recreation Commissions as well as the Boards of Assessors and Health.

SELECTMAN/ Ralph Dormitzer

In 1997 Cohasset voted to change its governing structure to the town manager form. This change significantly reduced the power of the selectmen and advisory board by vesting budget responsibility, general management, and personnel matters in an appointed town manager, retaining for the selectmen only the right to hire and fire the manager and to set policy.

This town manager act resulted in an extraordinary concentration of power in the hands of a single individual, one who has no direct accountability to the voters. For all practical purposes, the town voted for a corporate form of government but without mechanisms to protect against abuse of power.

What was retained was the right of the voters to choose selectmen, sewer and water commissioners, planning board, school committee, board of health, assessors, library trustees and others. These positions have been good for the town. Almost without exception, the independent boards have made the most important contributions to the town — our water supply system, our innovative sewer system, our new schools, our new library, independent judgment, etc, etc.

The just released draft review of the Mass Municipal Association of the town manager form of government in Cohasset, however, would abolish most of these boards, leaving only the selectmen, school committee and library trustees elective. I do not support this recommendation. Not only would it concentrate power still more, it would strip some of our most effective boards of the responsibility and authority for the functions they manage.

My personal view is that we should do just the opposite of the MMA recommendations, re-empower the boards and examine how to make town government more directly responsive to the people, not less. When and if the MMA recommendations come up at town meeting in the future, I hope you will vote against them.

SELECTMAN/ Merle Brown

The new review of the Town Manager form of Government suggests the town has too many elected officials and recommends having the selectmen appoint the boards of assessors and health, and the recreation, sewer and water commissions.

The report to which you refer was conducted by the MMA Consulting Group, Inc., a professional organization that has considerable expertise and experience in these matters. Their report was based on their review of the Town Manager Form of Government as it exists in Cohasset today. The report mentions that the Town of Cohasset is a well run Town with a minimum amount of employees.

The review recommends that a board, commission or official whose primary responsibility it is to perform a planning and administrative function should be appointed and not elected. The report goes on to say that taking this action requires careful consideration by the Town. I have to agree. To answer this question without first having a formal discussion with all affected would be inappropriate. I would have to listen to each member of the board, and commission before I could make any intelligent decision on this. As a Selectman, I would want to discuss this in great detail with other members of the Board of Selectmen as well as the advisory board. I would also like to hear from the Committee to Survey Structure and Functions of Town Government. It is after this in-depth analysis I feel a proper decision could be made.

SELECTMAN/ Lou Harvey

Absurd!

The recommendations to unelect the boards of assessors and health and the water and sewer commissions are based on fatally flawed research and should not even be considered.

The absurd report on Town government does not deserve the respect usually afforded to research reports. Absurdity permeates the fundamental tenets of this research: methodology, findings, conclusions and recommendations.

Absurd methodology. The data collection was introspective but the results are intended for external use. This is like asking a student to grade his own paper and using these grades to judge his performance.

Absurd findings. These findings would not have passed the most accommodating standards for reliability and reasonableness. Basic research requires that findings be compared to independent sources to assess that they are in line with reasonable expectations.

Absurd conclusions. The central conclusion of the report is that concentration of Town government power is desirable. There is no basis for this conclusion in the research performed and it belies the success of our constitutional government and assumes that a despotic system is preferable because it is more efficient.

Absurd recommendations. Robbing the residents of Cohasset of their right to hold officials accountable through the ballot box is irrational. Ultimately what is proposed will prevent residents from registering their displeasure with a member of a board or commission by voting him/her out of office. Resident's actions will be limited to the board of Selectmen, which amounts to throwing out the baby with the bath water.

This report is wrong and should simply be discarded.

Is it time to revisit the METCO program in light of budget restraints and reduced state aid?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Scott O'Grady

Metco is a voluntary grant program designed to expand educational opportunities and reduce racial imbalance. It has broad community support in Cohasset, where our schools have participated since 1972. The Cohasset PSO sponsors a Host Family Program that matches Boston students with a local classmate. Boston students attend at every grade level in Cohasset, and they and their parents, I think, should be considered members of our school community.

The program delivers on its goal of expanding educational opportunities — Metco students are more than 20 percent more likely than their Boston educated neighbors to attend a four-year college, and equally more likely to succeed on the MCAS exam. Metco also delivers, in a small way, on reducing racial imbalance. I know that my children have confronted diversity issues at school, and they and their classmates from Boston, with the help of caring teachers, have grown to become more sophisticated, less provincial, citizens of a diverse world.

The problem with Metco is money. State funding for Metco has actually decreased since 2001, with a corresponding drop of $15,000 in Cohasset's grant for FY 2004. The State Board of Education has since agreed to restore funding to 2003 levels, but the State's continuing commitment to the program remains questionable.

We need to make it clear to the State that funding cuts to Metco jeopardize Cohasset's continued participation in the program. This is the kind of worthwhile program that can only be funded at the state level, not through local property taxes. It is unfair for the State Board of Education to continue to shift spending burdens onto the towns — Metco, because it is a voluntary program, is very likely to become a casualty to this trend.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Jamie Williams

Since 1968, Cohasset has participated in the METCO program which is designed to expand educational opportunities and reduce racial imbalance. Since METCO offers an invaluable opportunity for an ambitious student, a unique experience for host families and added diversity to the community, the program should not be judged solely on budgetary factors.

The question "is it time to revisit the METCO program" is worthy of consideration by the school committee with community input. I advocate we undertake a review of METCO to determine the results of this voluntary program as a whole, its long-range affect on enrolled children and the value of diversity it offers our community. In addition, I believe that all special programs, including Before and After School Programs, KEDS and the South Shore Collaborative, be evaluated to determine effectiveness and potential for new revenue streams.

Currently it is difficult to identify the specific dollar amounts allocated to METCO (and other special programs) because expenses are spread across various budget line items. We need to unravel the school budget, and unbundle expenses and funding in order to evaluate these programs. Once we have concrete program and budgetary facts we can weigh them against the approximately $300,000 of additional funding Cohasset contributes.

I don't believe we can consider METCO as expendable purely because of our own fiscal crisis. We must be informed citizens in order to justify effective programs and fund them appropriately. A vote for me will initiate a plan of prioritized goals and objectives. Working in partnership with the community, our teachers and our various town boards and officials, we will focus on the education of our children as top priority. The School Committee is assigned the responsibility of visionary for our schools. We need to continue those programs that provide value for our students.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Adrienne MacCarthy

I believe it is the responsibility of the school committee to revisit each line item in the budget during the drafting of each new fiscal year budget, regardless of fiscal restraints and/or levels of state aide. I believe one of the committee's primary obligations to the town is to ensure each budget item is justified, adds value to the educational process, and that we are acting in a fiscally responsible manner.

The METCO (Metropolitan Council for Educational Opportunity) program has been in our town for 33 years. The purpose of this program is to provide an opportunity for diversity in public education. METCO enables students of various cultural and ethnic origins to attend schools in a variety of host communities bringing new learning experiences and creating fresh insight for both urban and suburban students. I believe in the value of the METCO program. I think that many in our community would agree that Cohasset's ongoing participation in the METCO program continues to fulfill the program's mission statement. The METCO program is not the issue; rather it is how the State funds this program that creates problems for the METCO host communities.

Funding for this program has always been provided for by the State. However, METCO students are the only students in the Commonwealth funded at a rate that is below the State's mandated per student minimum. How the State can dictate a funding level and then fail to deliver this same level of funding is an issue that needs to be addressed by all communities participating in the METCO program. We can and should be pressuring the State to address this inconsistency. As I previously stated, I am for operating our schools in a fiscally responsible manner, but I also think this should apply to the State as well.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Pat Martin

To me, the METCO program is one of the many things that make the Cohasset school system special. It provides diversity and enrichment to our students and families as well as the community. It has served this purpose for over 30 years and provided countless youth with the opportunities afforded to those with an excellent education, Along with diversity, METCO brings revenue into the Cohasset school district. As part of its state funding, we receive "tuition" for each student sent to us. This money funds our METCO Coordinator, an aide and transportation that we share with Scituate. Some remaining money is apportioned toward teachers salaries. If we were to lose METCO, our budget would need to make up the shortfall of funds put towards teachers salaries. Many, however, still point out the inequity regarding the $2,456 amount we receive for each METCO student and the much higher per pupil cost for Cohasset residents.

Recently, thousands of METCO supporters, including a group from Cohasset, descended on Beacon Hill to ask legislators to increase funding for METCO. METCO has been cut or level funded by the state the last 8 out of 10 years. We have yet to hear whether the program will receive the additional money it requires. It is our fear that the state will follow its current path of providing less than necessary support and once again leave communities to grapple with the difficult choices confronting public education.

With only a 7 percent commercial tax base in Cohasset, our choices are that much more difficult. Currently, we need a $400,000 override just to maintain programs. Should the override fail, everything will need to be revisited. The question will then become, "What is more important; art, music, sports, technology, small class sizes or METCO?" Are you ready to decide?

Avalon was approved over objections from the Planning Board. Should the Planning Board have more of a say in the Chapter 40B comprehensive permit process?

PLANNING BOARD/ Joe Nedrow

Four of the last five questions asked of the Planning Board candidates involved decisions made by the Planning Board that were opposed by other Boards or Committees. These were decisions regarding the Master Plan Draft, Senior Overlay District, Mansionization, Cedarmere, and this week's question regarding Avalon. These differences of opinion, and lack of a united town position, send mixed signals to those individuals involved in the issues discussed. These actions encourage third-party remedies either through the legal system, or confusing debates with conflicting recommendations at Town Meeting.

Many of these differences can be attributed to misunderstanding and confusion resulting from the differences between the statuary responsibilities and authority of the elected Planning Board and the role and authority of appointed committees. These appointed committees are made up of mostly self-initiated individuals who have an interest and or experience in a given area. This process works well for our town, and we all have benefited from the contributions of our fellow citizens time and talents.

Problems seem to occur when the elected bodies, whose decisions are mostly driven by statutory and regulatory guidelines, conflicts with appointed committees whose decisions are driven by individual and group interest and/or commitment to specific goals or objectives.

As a town we need to develop a process where these differences are subjected to a "second effort" to resolve before going to Town Meeting or issuing a final decree on behalf of the town. The Avalon situation is just another example of the need to work more diligently for a united position.

PLANNING BOARD/ Stuart Ivimey

The Planning Board must be proactive whenever the town faces a 40B application. Its ability to impact a 40B application is, however, limited by the statute, which vests sole authority to approve or reject a 40B application with the Zoning Board of Appeals ("ZBA"). A 40B applicant is not required to obtain the Planning Board's approval before the project can move forward.

Despite these limitations the Planning Board should conduct its own careful site plan review of the proposed project and critique it. The Planning Board should then prepare a written report for the ZBA which sets forth the Planning Board's conclusions, recommendation and concerns. This report should focus on whether the proposed development improves Cohasset or whether it is a detriment. In addition, the report must recommend the various conditions that the ZBA should incorporate into its decision.

By acting in this proactive manner the Planning Board make valuable contributions to the 40B application process. The assistance and expertise that the Planning Board is able to provide the ZBA is unmatched by any other town board.

If I am elected to the Planning Board, I will act as an advocate for protecting the town's character and recommend only those projects that improve Cohasset.

Next week: Candidate profiles

This was the last week for Question of the Week. Candidate profiles for those in contested races will appear next week.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

March 25 election supper is planned

The annual Election Supper, a springtime tradition for decades, will be held at the Beechwood Congregational Church on Church Street. Candidates for town offices and voters/diners are invited to get together to discuss politics before and after dinner on Thursday, March 25 at 6:30 p.m.. Dinner will include stuffed chicken breast, dilled carrots, peas, cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes, cake and ice cream as well as beverages. Before dinner, all candidates will be introduced to those in attendance. Tickets are $8 for adults and $4 for children. To make reservations, call 781-383-1298.

March 25 debate for selectmen candidates

Again this year, Cohasset resident Noel Collins will moderate a 90-minute televised debate among the four candidates for two seats on the board of selectmen.

The debate will get underway at 7:30 p.m., tonight (Thursday, March 25) in the selectmen's office at Town Hall and will be televised live on cable-TV. Town Manager Mark Haddad will run the camera and Roger Hill will take phoned-in questions.

Candidates Robert Spofford, Merle Brown, Lou Harvey and Ralph Dormitzer have confirmed their intentions to participate.

In addition to questions from the audience and those called in by TV viewers, a panel of journalists from the Cohasset Mariner, Patriot Ledger and TinyTown Gazette will also pose questions to the candidates.

well aware of how frequently this type of lawsuit occurs, and I've seen the distracting and expensive effect that it can have on businesses. Anyone who has run a company recognizes the threat that a former employee can pose, and lawyers will tell you that they recommend settling such lawsuits to minimize their impact on the business.

Then I find myself wondering aloud who could possibly have been behind the anonymous mailing last week—who would take the time and expend the effort to assemble such documentation and mail it to the newspapers? Who would be such a coward as to send the documents anonymously, disrupting the peace of our political process without revealing his/her name for debate?

So whoever the anonymous mailer is — step forward, let us know your concerns so that they may be addressed in a public forum, and revive the positive nature of Cohasset's political process.

Heartfelt thanks for Beatles event

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter should have been printed weeks ago, but was delayed due to technology problems at the Mariner.

Many of you may not have realized that the Beatles were in town on Saturday, Feb. 7, playing at the Red Lion Inn! I would like to thank John, Paul, George and Ringo — a.k.a. Rick, Vic, Jim, Peter, John and Lenny — for their fabulous performance and one of the most fun parties in Cohasset ever! Most importantly I would like to thank Gitte Shea for inviting folks all over Cohasset, Hingham and Scituate to dance the night away while contributing to a cause very near and dear to my heart.

As many of you may not know, my beloved brother-in-law Jack Pickett, avid sportsman and chef-owner of the Blue Moon Cafe in Stowe, Vt. and his friend Todd Owens, Appalachian Mountain Ranger were burned over 85 percent of their bodies this fall when a propane hot water heater exploded in Jack's new home. They were both air-lifted to Mass General Hospital where they were kept in comas in sterile bubbles for eight weeks.

After undergoing over 15 grafting surgeries apiece, both Jack and Todd are back in Vermont continuing with extensive outpatient therapy. The generosity of Cohasset folks, most of whom don't even know my brother-in-law, is simply overwhelming to me and I can't thank you all enough. It's so true that we all "can get by with a little help from our friends." Thank you, Cohasset.

Cohasset basketball coverage appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to the Mariner for the excellent coverage of Cohasset basketball this year. Mark Goodman did a fine job reporting each game as did all of your sports writers. They provided exciting details of the boys and girls games and athlete profiles. It was the first time since 1988 that both teams qualified for post season tournament play and the Mariner helped spread the thrill through the community.

No place for dirty politics in election

TO THE EDITOR:

The weekend(March20-21)Patriot Ledger published a story based on material received "anonymously" which noted that an employee of his Company had accused Lou Harvey, a candidate for selectman, of harassment.

Coincidentally, the accuser's lawyer currently represents the Town of Cohasset in the Police Department controversy swirling around officers Quigley and McLean.

Four qualified candidates are running for two openings on the Board of Selectman. We should consider their position on the issues and vote accordingly. There should be no place for dirty politics in a Cohasset election (or any election for that matter).

Yes vote is urged for large land acquisition

TO THE EDITOR:

As a member of the Open Space Committee and resident of Cohasset, I am writing to encourage the citizens of Cohasset to support Articles 12 and 13 to acquire the Brass Kettle Brook Conservation Area to help protect the town's water supply. The land area is between Lily Pond and Whitney Thayer Woods on King Street. Funding has been pledged by the Community Preservation Fund, Cohasset Water Department, Cohasset Conservation Trust, and the Trustees of Reservations. and there will be no impact on resident's taxes.

The town's water supply is in jeopardy. A recent limnology study found that the pond is in eutrophic state, and if not managed and improved it will cease to be of any use as a water source within a few decades. Eutrophication is when excess nutrients from fertilizers, pesticides, and other pollutants cause an increase in plant and animal biomass. Increased amounts of phosphorous, in particular, causes algae blooms to occur. Algae blooms deplete the water of oxygen, which is required by microorganisms in the decomposition of organic matter. In short, the reservoir is filling in with organic matter. The average depth of the pond is now less than 6 feet and getting shallower each year, thus reducing the storage capacity.

Human activity in a watershed can lead to a number of changes in the landscape which can be detrimental to the water supply including 1) conversion of natural land cover to urban use 2) changes to soil infiltration, compaction and erosion rates, and 3) alteration of hydrologic pathways. Forested riparian zones act as a buffer, which help diminish excessive runoff of water and pollutants such as fertilizer, pesticides, and other chemicals. When forests are removed, the potential for flow of pollutants into streams in greatly increased. Fertilizers, pesticides and other pollutants can be transported into streams that flow through or very close to agricultural or urban land more easily than streams that flow through forest

Undeveloped land around a reservoir and tributaries is essential to preserving the water supply. In 1989, New York City was faced with funding an affordable way to comply with the Federal Safe Drinking Water Act. With an estimated cost of $8 billion to build the necessary filtration plants, due to degradation of the water supply, and the eventual dredging of several reservoirs, the city proposed a comprehensive watershed protection program. One of the primary elements was the Land Acquisition and Stewardship Program. Over the next 10 years, the city spent approximately $280 million to acquire undeveloped land near reservoirs, wetlands and tributaries. Many of these parcels would be opened for hiking, cross-country skiing, and snowshoeing enhancing the recreational value of the area. The entire watershed protection program cost the city approximately $507 million, a substantial savings compared to the cost of a filtration system and dredging of reservoirs. An added benefit is that the watershed ecosystem gained long-term protection. Similar programs have been adopted in other areas such as Los Angeles, and Georgia.

Like the citizens of New York, Cohasset residents will also benefit from the Brass Kettle Brook Conservation Area. The trustees of Reservations will be developing walking trails so that residents will be able to walk/mountain bike from Lily Pond to Turkey Hill in Hingham.

Protect our water source and vote yes to Articles 12 and 13 on Saturday, March 27.

Thoughts on town management report

TO THE EDITOR:

Floating around town is a consultants report on town management which gives generally high marks for effectiveness of management and cost control. Also being floated is a citizen's critique of the report; a critique which implies that our departments and commissions are at odds with each other, management ineffective, costs out of control and similar exaggerations of the realities.

Are costs really "out of control" just because we have voted several overrides, and because our taxes keep increasing? Would they have been magically decreased if the various elected and appointed officials had been replaced, or will they be magically decreased if replaced in the future? Probably not, because the root causes remain. Some of them are:

(1) The culture of the town, which is to want quality services, and to support that wish list by voting positively.

(2) Lack of an industrial and significant commercial base to assume some of the tax burden.

(3) Lack of truly constructive alternatives (and/or alternatives acceptable to the majority of voters). The perennial critics have ever-diminishing influence because of their tiresome negativity.

Concerning efficiency of management, certainly problems which used to fester for ages now are addressed promptly and effectively (sometimes a shade too precipitately, but the trade-off is way on the positive side). In days of yore, whether to replace the horse trough or the three-holer at the schoolhouse might have been the large issues. Nowadays municipalities are burdened with mandates, rules, union negotiations, legal challenges etc such that a full-time manager is essential. And he or she had better be decisive and well-trained if the work load is to be handled. It's a job that requires a combination of determination and diplomacy, but it's not a job for pussy-footers!

We have various elected boards that act independently of the selectmen, rather than being appointed and hence somewhat more likely to be receptive to centralized direction (sort of like dancers around a maypole without any ties to the pole). The management report suggests that more be appointed instead of being elected. Why would this be less democratic, as the critique asserts, when the selectmen still serve at the pleasure of the electorate? Or, if less democratic, isn't that offset by better-focused town management? Exercise of democracy shouldn't result in needlessly counter-productive inefficiencies in serving the public.

Perhaps the management report takes a too sunny view of us, but the critique's implication that we are bankrupt of inter-department civility, of responsible representatives, of fiscal common sense, etc. is much further from the reality.

Bernard's thanked

TO THE EDITOR:

A much appreciated annual event took place recently at Bernard's Restaurant in Cohasset. Bernie O'Neil is Chef/owner of Bernard's in Cohasset Village and each year he offers a cooking class and donates 100 percent of the proceeds from the class to the South Shore Community Center. As always, the evening was a big hit and the South Shore Community Center would like to thank Bernie for his generosity and continued support of the Center.

Sad about loss of tree

As a resident of Gammons Road and a frequent user of Joy Place, I was unpleasantly surprised to see the red oak at the top of Joy Place cut down.

It appeared to be very healthy, this is no rot, and it was a size that was at this time appropriate for its location. It did not obscure views either exiting or entering Joy Place.

After a meeting at the Selectmen's office it has come to light it was an Adopt and Island Program that precipitated some ones actions to destroy this specimen. Are there not specific rules and regulations that are defined in this program? And is there not a responsibility of the adoptee so follow rules and regulations that define this program, if such exists. And are adoptees not held responsible to follow the rules in this program? And where is this program described?

Is this another example of acting and then thinking an apology is sufficient?

Isn't it too bad that such a simple and worthwhile community program could cause so much confusion and expense because of personal interests gone astray.

Vote yes on override

TO THE EDITOR:

After reading Mrs. Gomez's letter to the editor in the March 11, Mariner. I am troubled by Mrs. Gomez's comments that indicate that she and many of her friends believe this override wouldn't be necessary if the School Committee and other public officials had done their job(s). Mrs. Gomez's letter is well written and polite, which sets it apart from most letters on this issue, but the bottom line is the same. We wouldn't be in this pickle if we had done things differently.

To Mrs. Gomez's comment that other towns do not have overrides, I beg to differ. Cohasset is not the only town caught in a vicious cycle of overrides. That doesn't make overrides okay, it does tell you that other towns that value education are grappling with the same issues. How often the overrides occur and the amount of the overrides is largely dependent on the composition of the tax base, which for anyone who has successfully avoided this ongoing saga, is and will continue to be a very real problem for Cohasset.

Parents of pre-school age children can vote no this year with the knowledge that the fall out won't immediately impact them. It will also send a "message" to our public servants who, some feel, are over spending, under performing and unable to "think outside the box." Her reasoning, however, is based on the erroneous assumptions that there are "creative solutions" that have not been pursued and that no one has bothered to try to boil the budget down to "educational priorities" that would be based "more purely on teaching." Anyone truly interested in the course of public education in Cohasset would do well to gain an understanding of the impact state budget cuts have had on Cohasset's operating budget and compare these cuts with the myriad of costly state reforms and initiatives that impact the operating budget. The legacy of mandates never funded or at best under-funded, is regrettable. One might also want to tune in to a School Committee meeting and learn a bit about the nuances of running a school district. The more one knows, the more one realizes that the situation is a complex one, deserving of something more than empty rhetoric and a "throw the bums out" campaign cry. And should you have clear, quantifiable ideas that balance educational excellence with cost containment, be forewarned. Cuts that seem reasonable to you and your like minded friends are unimaginable to your next-door neighbor.

However you decide to vote, please do not base your decision on information provided by citizens who perpetuate destructive myths about the competency and trustworthiness of our public servants, the dedication of our teachers, and the current condition of our schools. Speaking as a substitute teacher, our schools are acceptably clean. Speaking as a parent of children in each of our three schools, our faculty is dedicated and competent. Speaking as a former school committee member, our current school committee is an intelligent, fiscally seasoned group who make tough decisions with no little or no public support.

While I am not thrilled to pieces with yet another override, I do understand why we are asking for one and no one is forcing my hand or making me feel the least bit guilty. I am simply unwilling to cavalierly place blame and jump on the bandwagon of candidates who have yet to go beyond rhetoric and offer specific, quantifiable alternatives to the override. Until such time as an intelligent alternative is presented, I will vote yes. I consider it money well spent.

Promote what we have

TO THE EDITOR:

We have attended meetings regarding the revitalization of Cohasset. We have heard discussions about the revitalization of the Village. We're told that the Village and the Harbor need to be connected so that tourists and visitors can find their way around from place to place in our village/town. We're told that our sidewalks, streets and intersections need to be redone - that our parks need to be renovated - that our overhead wires should be buried - all these plus many more improvements to be done so the tourists and visitors will feel welcome.

Is this what the tourists want? We think they'd like to see Cohasset as Cohasset - an ex shipbuilding port - an ex port of call for schooners carrying lumber and freight of various sorts - and currently a very active fishing and lobstering port. Yes We think they'd like to see Cohasset as it is - a small, active, liveable, bustling quaint New England Town.

We have a lot to offer the tourist/visitor who chooses to stop along their way off the beaten path. We have a carillon that is world famous. We have a long history that includes Captain John Smith and his discovery of Cohasset. We have, off our shore, Minot's Ledge Light. A lighthouse known as "the most dangerous lighthouse in the United States." And along with this we have the history of its construction which is fascinating. We have historical churches - the First Parish that goes back to the break between Cohasset and Hingham - the Episcopal Church noted for its history, beauty and the carillon. And other churches with their own contribution to the town's history. We have our Maritime Museums - our "Captains Walk" which takes the tourist/visitor from the Village to and around the Harbor. This walk, ably handled by the towns curator, delves into 10 different historic landmarks around the Harbor. And there's more, lots more.

So let's exert our efforts to promoting what we have and through our own Board of Selectmen, Town Manager, DPW and other boards make improvements, cosmetic or other, needed to spruce up Cohasset as we choose. We don't need an outside source to tell us what we should do. We've lived here and know the town.

Getting in swing

Defense, hitting need to improve for CHS nine to make playoff run

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

To date, in terms of weather patterns in these parts, this spring has been pretty comparable to the 2003 edition: generally lousy. And preparations for the spring sports seasons have, subsequently, again taken a big hit.

As far as Al Gallotta is concerned, however, the difference between this and last spring is night and day.

"I know the kids and they know me, and that puts me light years ahead of where I was a year ago at this time," said Gallotta, who begins his second season as the Skippers' skipper. "We have a veteran group, so I think that translates well to us being able to hit the ground running pretty quickly."

Gallotta was hoping to get his baseball hopefuls out of the Cohasset High gym this past Tuesday for just the second outdoor workouts since camp opened last Monday.

While acknowledging the inherent difficulties in trying to evaluate players in a confined gymnasium, the second year CHS head coach has taken note of a number of positive developments.

"We've got some players who definitely look bigger and stronger," reported Gallotta. "The arm strength appears better for a number of last year's varsity players, and I can see a few players from last year's JV team who look ready to make the move up."

It seems safe to assume Gallotta, also a math teacher at Cohasset High, is not all that surprised by much of what he is seeing. After all, he's spent the last six months or so personally tracking the progress of his athletes. Less than two years removed from his retirement as Athletic Director at Archbishop Williams, a post he held for 25 years, the single sport coach is enjoying his new life off the sidelines and in the stands.

"I watched a lot of football, soccer, hockey, basketball and all the last several months," said Gallotta, who also served as a baseball coach at Archies for 27 years. "It was nice just being able to sit back and take it in as a fan. It was also fun watching the way a few of my baseball

EXTRA POINTS

MIKE SPELLMAN

In this ever changing, increasingly complex world, it seems the number of absolutes are dwindling quickly. Ergo, it can be quite heartening to, every now and then, stumble onto one.

Question: When is it proper to openly second guess your kid's coach?

The answer: never. Nothing short of abusive behavior should be second guessed.

Your kids not playing enough, your kids not being used properly, the strategy needs re-thinking: these are opinions. We're all entitled to those. For the good of everyone, though, PUH-LEAZE, keep them to yourself.

The reason I bring this up at this time is I have just made it through a winter season of listening to a heretofore unprecedented level of parental griping and sniping. Fortunately, the majority of the time, I was just another face in the crowd, so I did not have to hear it directly.

Please, folks, the job these coaches have is hard enough. Just getting a large group of teenagers to listen to them is a Herculean challenge, and that becomes infinitely more difficult when Janey or Johnny is hearing at home that the coach doesn't know what he/she is talking about.

I think we can all agree that the kids of today are, in general, far more disrespectful and dissatisfied than their counterparts of, say, a decade ago. Hearing what I do in the stands these days, this gradual decline of civility in our youth becomes quite a bit easier to comprehend.

Maybe not all of you are repeating what you're saying in the stands, but just putting the word out there is not only hurtful, but potentially harmful to all con-

Mariner All-Scholastic hockey team

Cohasset's Carpenter, Devine and Straughn, named among area's elite

The size of this All-Scholastic hockey team—28, the biggest team we've ever had outside of football-- is testament to how difficult this selection process was.

What can we say? It was a banner season on the ice in Marinerland, with nine of the 12 teams we cover qualifying for the state tourney. The highlights also included Hingham, for the third year in a row, qualifying for the Div. 1 A "Super 8" Tourney, Braintree marching all the way to the Div. 1 South Sectional finals and Abington completing an unbeaten season in South Shore League play.

Honestly, several of the young men you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement. We would have loved to have added many of them, but we had to cut things off somewhere.

In the end, we limited ourselves to a team of just 28, and, after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the most deserving hockey players in Marinerland for this honor:

Boys tennis future looks bright with nine freshmen, fast emerging sophs

By Mark Goodman
CORRESPONDENT

If this year is any indication, the Cohasset boys tennis program is in for a bright future.

Nine freshmen have come out for this year's team, and three of the four spots that head coach Kent Parrot has already confirmed in his lineup belong to sophomores.

Leading the way at number-one singles will be one of those sophomores, Nils Sceery. He is coming off of a strong freshman campaign, and the coach is looking for even bigger things this season.

"Last year, he emerged as a pretty formidable number two or number three player," Parrot said. "Not just for us, but for the league in general, he'll probably dominate. I think he can make the individual tournament this year."

Norwell coach Jay Swartz, who has directed his Clippers to 10 consecutive South Shore League titles and a mind numbing 104 straight league wins, agrees with that assessment. He's already called Sceery "easily the best player in our league this year."

Number-two singles will be played by Danny Sullivan, another sophomore, while number-one doubles will probably see the duo of senior Andrew Wise and sophomore Chris Pescatore. Wise will serve as the team's captain this season.

"He's the only senior we have," Parrot said. "He has two seasons of experience. We're going to look to him to lead us and do a good job."

The other spots are up for grabs, according to the coach. He said it is going to be a challenge to pick his number-three singles and number-two doubles, particularly the latter.

"Doubles have a lot to do with chemistry," Parrot said. "I have 10 to 12 kids to choose from, and it will be a real challenge to find the right combination. It should be a very interesting selection process."

28th annual Cohasset Roadrace By-The-Sea and roadwalk

Need a spring running goal? Spring forward! The Cohasset Rotary 10K Road Race By-the-Sea is an inspiring spring racing target for all runners in the Northeast. This race runs a magnificently beautiful shoreline loop that will motivate every runner.

The 28th annual Cohasset Rotary 10K will spring into action on Sunday, April 4 beginning at 1:00 p.m. Starting and ending at the historic Cohasset Common, this race is a symbolic and practical beginning of the spring racing season for several reasons, including the date—the first day of Eastern Daylight Savings Time. This 10K makes an ideal motivational tool for those who want to get into racing shape for the season. It is especially friendly for beginning runners and veterans alike, sporting a very flat and scenic course.

The race will benefit the many local, regional, and international charities for which Rotary Clubs are famous; and this type of racing will give your heart rate and your heart a lift.

The race is sanctioned by USATF-NE. Beautiful long sleeve T-Shirts are guaranteed for the first 800 registrants to check in. There will be free refreshments for all registered runners. The Road Walk (Fun Walk 5K or 10K) starts at 10:00 AM from Sandy Beach.

Register to run or walk or check for more information at http://roadracebythesea.com/ or www.coolrunning.com . Online registration is $15.00 or print out applications from the website and mail-in registration is $16.00. Mail-in registrations must be post marked by March 27, 2004. On site registration at $18.00 will be held at the South Shore Community Center, 3 North Main Street, Cohasset, MA on Saturday April 3rd, & Sunday April 4, 2004, 9 A.M till Noon.

Pre-registration is strongly recommended.

cerned. Too many seeds of discontent are being planted. Who knows which of, and to whom, your words are being repeated.

Besides that, chances are you're wrong.

The coaches you see before you have impressed a superintendent, an entire school committee and, generally, a screening group made up of sports parents, enough to be hired. Are they always right? Of course not. But they're almost certainly better qualified than any one of you sitting in the stands to evaluate what's really pertinent. And, even if you don't agree with that premise, there's no denying they're in a better position than you to do so.

We all want desperately to believe our son or daughter is one of the best. I'm speaking as one of you now; I've been guilty of it too. Obviously, though, we can't all be right—there can only be so many "bests".

Coaches spend literally hundreds of hours evaluating the talent they have, and they're not just looking at abilities to do this or that with a ball or some other sporting apparatus. They're considering matters such as team chemistry, blending of talents, attitude and work ethic. In other words, they're looking at not only issues most of us can't see, but issues most of us aren't equipped to see.

So is it arrogance, impudence or simple stupidity that compels so many on the sidelines to speak?

I'll go with my stock answer: a little bit of all of the above.

Getting in swing

players have developed as athletes."

Gallotta said he was no where near ready to make personnel decisions at the time of our conversation, but figures things will come quickly into focus, the hope being that the team will spend most of this week outdoors. Still, he'll probably be somewhat under the gun, with the first game slated for next Wednesday, a hosting of Holbrook at Milliken Field (3:30 p.m.) for a non-league tussle. The Skippers will travel to Norwell High the next afternoon for their South Shore League opener.

Fortunately, he feels he's got some good people around him to help with those decisions.

Bob Rodgers—yes, the one of NESN fame—takes over the junior varsity program this season, allowing last year's JV coach, Damien D'Angelo, to become an assistant with the varsity team. Rodgers was head coach at Silver Lake, a Div. 1 program, for 11 years before increased demands from his job as NESN's studio host for Red Sox telecasts forced him to give that up. And D'Angelo, a teacher at a Cohasset elementary school, was a head baseball coach at a Connecticut high school for three years.

"Those are a couple of other good sets of eyes I've got now," said Gallotta, who thanks the boosters, as well as his players, for raising the funds needed for the third hire. "The kids playing baseball should feel very fortunate to have these two coaches aboard. They should both be a tremendous benefit to the program."

The team lost five seniors to graduation, with captain Mike Snowdale, the team's lone all-star, and Chris McKenna, a sensational defensive centerfielder who wound up leading the team in hitting after a strong finish to the season, seemingly leaving the biggest holes.

Fortunately, none of the five lost to the caps and gowns were key contributors to the pitching staff. Coach G believes pitching will be an area of strength this spring that might help the Skippers improve on last year's 7-13 finish and possibly even qualify for the state tourney for the first time in recent memory.

Junior Ted Straughn, looking bigger and stronger and coming off an All-Scholastic hockey season, is back to reclaim his role as staff ace. The fireballing righty struck out 60 hitters through 40-2/3 innings last season and had an ERA of 3.36. Inconsistency of control was a problem for Ted, however, as was reflected by his 48 walks.

"Ted has the potential to be a very good pitcher; he just needs to throw strikes more consistently," said Gallotta last spring. "But he was just a sophomore. There's reason to believe he'll get better."

Senior John Downing finished second on the team in innings pitched last season. He was particularly effective in the early going, mixing a good breaking pitch with very good control. He struggled a bit down the stretch, but, as with Straughn, it is expected he'll only improve.

Gallotta might have discovered a couple of new pitchers in the final two games. In a 3-2 win over Holbrook in late May, then-freshman Chris Bryan threw a complete game two-hitter, striking out eight to earn the win.

Senior tri-captain Mike Dooley, back for his third season as starting shortstop, took to the mound for his first varsity start in last season's regular season finale, and he too wound up going the distance to lead the way to an 8-4 win over Millis, striking out five while scattering six hits.

Gallotta admitted later that perhaps he should have given Dooley his pitching shot earlier, but claimed his reluctance had much to do with concern over what might happen if he removed Dooley from shortstop, the busiest defensive spot on the field. The coach feels he has more options at short this spring, among them sliding over senior captain John Andrade from second base, so Dooley could very well wind up in the regular pitching rotation.

"At this time, after Teddy, the pecking order is really up for grabs between Mike Dooley, John Downing and Chris Bryan. If Chris is ready, that would probably give us a big lift defensively, because it would let us solidify our defense.

With Bryan on the mound, Dooley would be free to play at short, allowing Andrade to remain at second, Downing would likely play third base and Straughn, a very good defensive outfielder, could be used in either center or left.

Junior Matt Casey, coming off a very good season of wrestling, could start in either center or right, depending on how Straughn is used. Gallotta felt Casey was the best player on last year's JV team, and likes the progress he's made to date.

The third outfield spot, at least for now, appears to be junior Tim Pilczak's job to lose, and senior Dan Tarpey could also see time here or at DH. Pilczak, who like Straughn, is coming off a big season on the ice at CHS, has also played second base, so he could see some time there when Dooley or Downing take the mound.

The team's third tri-captain, senior Jeff Barrett, is expected to take over the first base reins. Junior Jim DeGiacomo is expected to back him up.

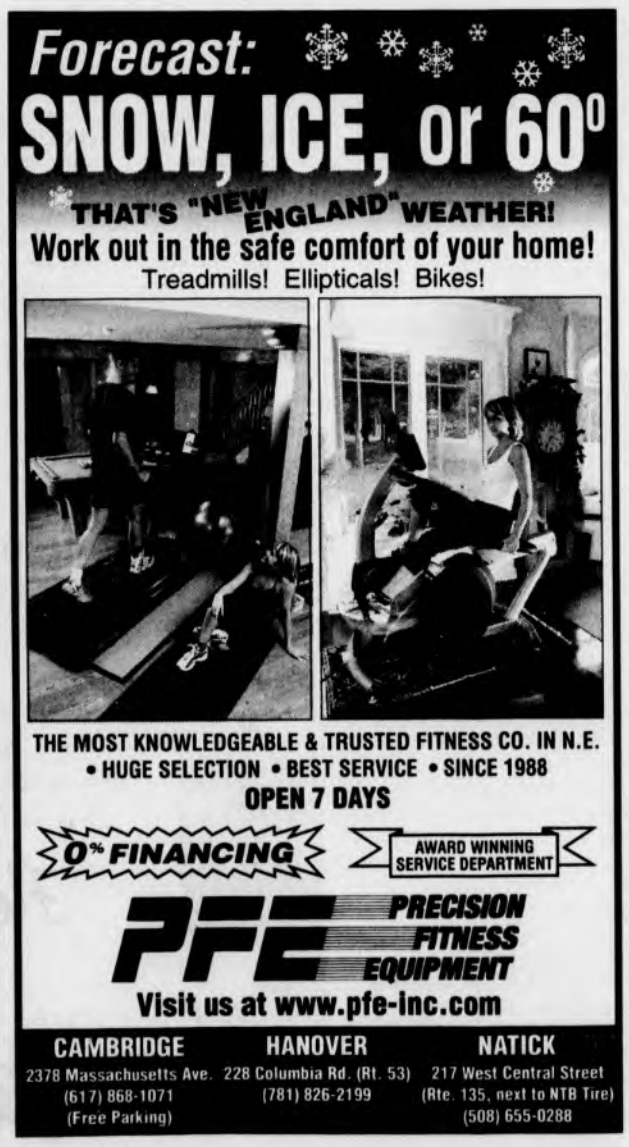
Junior Louis Blanco returns for his third year of varsity service behind the plate, with junior Jack Caroll the favorite to spell him on occasion.

Consistency is the first key to this season, in Gallotta's mind. After what his team went through last season, that seems understandable.

The Skippers started and ended the season on a strong note, but really struggled in between, losing all but one in a 12-game stretch before ending the season with consecutive wins.

"We had five or six guys hitting over .300 over the first six or seven games, and then reality seemed to set in," said Gallotta. "We didn't face as many tough teams and top pitchers in the early part of our schedule. And then, I think we saw a lot of really good pitchers once we got into our league play."

The team batting average wound up being .217, with McKenna leading the way with a .302 average.

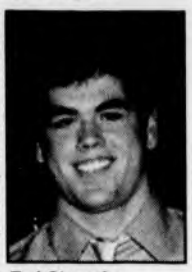


Dooley was a rarity on this team. He started the year slowly at the plate, but came on strong at the end, finishing second to McKenna in the team batting race. Straughn (.283) and Blanco were the only other Cohasset hitters to finish on the right side of .200.

The South Shore League graduated a good deal of top pitchers last year, though. And that, combined with the high number of returning varsity players the Skippers feature and the switch-back to aluminum bats, has Gallotta feeling pretty confident that his team will light up the scoreboard a lot more in '04.

Beyond that, though, he makes no promises or even predictions.

"I can understand that people looking at us from the outside in might figure we should get to the state tourney this year," said Galotta, who took many Archbishop Williams teams to the tourney, "but I've always approach a season just trying to make sure the kids are ready to give 100 percent and play every day. If they can do that, the other goals you have generally take care of themselves."



Carpenter, Devine and Straughn, named among area's elite

Ted Straughn - Junior (Capt.)
Wing - Cohasset

Ted Straughn

Was named team co-MVP after a sensational 31 point season (15 goals, 16 assists) for the 11-6-3 Skippers…a big, aggressive, strong skating and extremely hard working player…had two hat tricks this season…not bad considering baseball is his first love and he plays little off season hockey…South Shore League all-star…a three year varsity regular…played the last few weeks of the season with undiagnosed mononucleosis…also a standout baseball and football player at CHS…President of his junior class…good student…was the starting fullback for SSL champion football team this past fall…was top pitcher and run producer for baseball team last spring…played AAU baseball the last several years a member of the South Shore Seadogs and was also a member of the Cohasset-Scituate American Legion team since his freshman year…hopes to play Cranberry League baseball this summer…hopes to play college baseball…brother of former Mariner All-Scholastic hockey and baseball player Tim Straughn, now a sophomore at UMass-Amherst… Cohasset coach Ben Virga: "Ted is the consummate leader. He's as good a team captain as I've ever been around. He works so hard and is such a positive influence with everything he does. He leads by example and words. He's a coach's dream. And he's not a bad hockey player either. Imagine if he played the game year round like most of your top players."

Rob Carpenter - Senior Center - Cohasset

Rob Carpenter

Returned to Cohasset from doing his junior year at BB&N prep school to lead the Skippers in scoring with 32 points (12 goals, 20 assists) and into the postseason in what many thought would be a rebuilding year…shared team MVP honors with Ted Straughn…a sensational skater and puck handler in the open ice who could finish, but was even better at finding the open man…South Shore League all-star…suffered a partial shoulder dislocation early in the first round playoff win over Blue Hills but still played in the season ending loss a few days later to eventual state champion Bourne…a Mariner All-Scholastic Honorable Mention as a sophomore after a 28 point season… also a standout in football and lacrosse at CHS…Honor Roll student…Peer Counciller…enjoys playing bocce ball…hopes to play college hockey…Stonehill is his number one choice…Cohasset coach Ben Virga: "Getting him back this year was like a team in the NHL trading for a 50-goal scorer. I think, without a doubt, he was the most talented forward in the South Shore League. Whatever college coach gets him is going to be extremely happy, because I see him just getting better and better. He handled his return very well. He was a senior and a leader, but he never stepped on anyone's toes. He was a had worker in practice, very unassuming and a positive influence with the whole team."

Mike Devine - Senior (Capt.)
Defense - Cohasset

Mike Devine

This two-time Mariner All-Scholastic selection is just a superb all-around hockey player…an electrifying skater and puckhandler and a force at both ends of the ice…made good use of his hard, accurate slap shot…was much more physical than his wiry frame implied…two time South Shore League all-star…finished wit h17 points (9 goals, 8 assists)… made a brief jump to forward this season to jump start the offense, but coach Virga quickly realized how indispensable he was on the blue line…four year varsity regular…was far and away the 11-6-3 Skippers leader in ice time…winner of the coveted CHS Norm Delaney Award…also a standout in golf and lacrosse at CHS…National Honor Society member…plays hockey year round as a member of the South Shore Dynamos…hopes to play college hockey…looking at Stonehill, St. Anselm, Babson and Bentley…leaning toward majoring in Business…Cohasset coach Ben Virga: "If ever a hockey player deserves to have his number retired at Cohasset High, it's Mike. He played at least every other shift, and there were some long shifts in there, but I can honestly remember just one mistake he made all year. To me, that's just amazing. The best word I have to describe him is a warrior."

Mike Devine (#9) eams his second All-Scholastic selection after another stellar year on the blueline for the Skippers.

Jesse Ferraro -
Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Hanover

Was a big part of a Hanover offense that was feared by many on the South Shore this season…Ferraro is making his second appearance on the All-Scholastic squad…Playing on the first line, Ferraro was second in scoring for the Indians (16-5-2), tallying 39 points on 18 goals, 21 assists…Helped the independent Hanover team reach the semifinals of the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney, where they fell to a tough Franklin team…Was a two-year captain on the Indians team.

Greg Leary - Senior
Forward - Hanover

An Honorable Mention to the All-Scholastic squad last season, Leary is making his first appearance on the team…One part of a talented offensive Indians squad, Leary led the team in scoring with 49 points on 28 goals, 21 assists…His presence on the ice was undeniable as he was part of an offense that scored 106 goals this season…Helped lead the Indians back to the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney after a year's absence…There, the Indians reached the semifinals before falling to Franklin.

Brendan Mulligan - Senior
Forward - Hanover

Another talented forward on the Indians team, Mulligan is making his first appearance on the All-Scholastic squad after receiving an Honorable Mention last season…Mulligan was a strong skater on Hanover's (16-5-2) talented first line and often got the attack started…Also a talented lacrosse player at HHS, Mulligan was named to the All-Scholastic team last spring.

Mike Genovese - Junior
Forward - Hingham

Was among the leading scorers on the Hingham squad this season, playing on the first line…Genovese put up 26 points on 13 goals, 13 assists this year, helping the Harbormen reach the Super 8 tourney for the third-straight season…Was stellar in all three games against Duxbury this season, scoring a total four goals, 2 assists against the Green Dragons…Had a goal and an assist in the team's Super 8 victory over Duxbury…Just a junior, Genovese is the third in his family to be named to the Mariner All-Scholastic team. Hingham coach Garrett Reagan: "He was our most consistent scorer this season and always played big in big games. He's a very smart player and very good with the puck."

Tommy Curtis - Senior
Goalie - Hingham

An Honorable Mention last season, Curtis is making his first appearance on the All-Scholastic squad…Curtis was among the best goalies in the area this season posting three shutouts and recording a goals against average of 1.6…A two-year starter in the net, Curtis did not allow more than four goals in a single game this year…His performance in the net was instrumental in the Harbormen's return to the Super 8 tourney, where they went 1-2…Curtis has played at Hockey Night in Boston and in the Bay State Games in the off-season…He plans to attend prep school next year and continue his hockey career. Hingham coach Garrett Reagan: "He came up big in a lot of key games. It was his hard work and dedication in the off-season that helped him improve so much. He did a terrific job."

Alex Olson - Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Hingham

This captain's speed on the ice was something to be admired…This talented center on the Hingham's first line tallied 11 points on 7 goals, 4 assists…Came up big in several games this season, particularly in the early-season victory over St. John's Prep in which he scored a pair of goals in a 4-2 victory…His work on the line helped the Harbormen get back to the Super 8 tourney for the third-straight season…There, the team went 1-2…Olson plans to attend prep school next season and has aspirations of continuing his hockey career in college. Hingham coach Garrett Reagan: "He has a great forecheck and was a good penalty killer. We were a low scoring team because of the quality of our schedule, but his consistency and hard work helped us immensely."

Bryan Wilbur -
Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Hingham

Another talented forward on the Hingham squad, this captain racked up 22 points on 13 goals, 9 assists…Was a big-time player for the Harbormen, putting in a hat trick against Chelmsford and a pair of goals and three assists in the team's 8-0 slashing of Duxbury in the Super 8 tourney…His work on the line at center helped Hingham get back to that elite tourney, their third-straight appearance…Was involved in all of Hingham's power plays…Also a captain on the HHS lacrosse team, Wilbur plans to attend either college or prep school in the fall and hopes to continue playing hockey. Hingham coach Garrett Reagan: "He's very fast and is a hard forechecker. He's also a great defense player and just worked hard."

Pete Wilson- Senior (Capt.)
Forward - Marshfield

A two-year captain on the MHS (13-8-3) squad, Wilson was the Old Colony League's leading scorer this season with 24 goals, 30 assists for 54 points…Wilson capped his four-year varsity career with 168 points (68 goals, 100 assists)…A three-year OCL All-star, Wilson is making his third appearance on the All-Scholastic team…Strong, fast, and skilled, Wilson caused fits for opposing defenses…His success on the first line helped the Rams to a 13-7-2 record and appearance in the Div. 2 South Sectional tourney…Wilson also plays baseball at MHS. Marshfield coach Dan Connolly: "Pete is one of the premier forwards in the area. Whenever we needed a big goal, Pete would rise to the occasion. He was a great leader for our team, helping everyone stay focused and showing them what needed to be done."

Tim Bonham -
Senior (Capt.)
Goalie - Marshfield

A two-year captain at MHS, Bonham was one of the premier goalies on the South Shore…A four-year varsity player, Bonham led the Old Colony League in goals against average at 2.25 for the Rams (13-8-3)…He was second in the OCL last season…A two-year OCL All-star, Bonham also had seven assists this season…A talented pitcher on the MHS baseball squad. Marshfield coach Dan Connolly: "Tim had a great senior year. He was one of the main reasons we had a successful year this year. He handles the puck so well and helped change other teams game plans. He also helped our offense, assisting on 7 goals."

Gordie MacFarlane - Junior
Forward - Marshfield

This standout forward was third in the Old Colony League in scoring for MHS (13-8-3), tallying 40 points on 18 goals, 22 assists…An OCL All-star, MacFarlane's greatest strength on the ice was his skating ability…He teamed with fellow All-Scholastic Pete Wilson to form one of the best 1-2 combos on the South Shore…The junior scored a lot of big goals for the team, including a pair in the team's tourney win over Cambridge R & L in the Div. 2 South Sectional…He will be a top returning player next season. Marshfield coach Dan Connolly: "Gordie is a smart player and a great skater. He was a key to our success this season."

Matt Sulmonte - Senior
Forward - Abington/EB

A standout forward on the Abington/EB team for several seasons, Sulmonte is making his first appearance on the All-Scholastic squad…His performance on the first line helped the Green Wave capture its first South Shore League title in several years going an almost perfect 11-0-1 in league…He was the leader on a balanced attack that scored more than 70 goals this year…Their 14-2-2 overall record earned the squad the top seed in the Div. 3 South Sectional tourney…There, the squad defeated Foxboro before falling to eventual finalist Bishop Feehan team in the quarterfinals.

Tom Dion - Senior
Forward - Abington/EB

Strong and tough, this talented forward helped lead the Green Wave's balanced offensive attack, putting up point totals in the high teens…The senior's performance on the first line helped Abington/EB capture its first South Shore League title in several years (11-0-1) and helped them earn the top seed in the Div. 3 South Sectional (14-2-2)…There, Dion netted a hat trick in the team's victory over Foxboro in the opening round, before falling to eventual finalist Bishop Feehan in the quarterfinals…Also a talented football player at AHS, Dion made our All-Scholastic team last fall.

Steve O'Brien - Senior Forward - Rockland

With the team's best offensive weapon out with an injury, this former defensive standout was asked to make the jump to the first line…O'Brien agreed and Rockland reaped the benefits…Making the move midway through the season, O'Brien put up an impressive 25 points on 11 goals, 14 assists… His work on the front line sparked a late-season surge that saw Rockland qualify for postseason play for the second-straight year…He helped the team win 8 of its last 11 games to finish at 10-9-1 and earn a berth in the Div. 3 South Sectional…There, the squad defeated Avon/Holbrook, 4-2, before falling to Wareham in the quarterfinals. Rockland coach Jim Cassagrande: "He got everything he did because of his hard work on the ice. He always gave 100 percent effort out there and never gave up. He was the spark plug on the team and got everyone playing better."

Matt Murray -
Senior (Capt.)
Defenseman - Weymouth

Playing on a very young team, this veteran player was the anchor of the Wildcat defense…Murray was named to the first team of the Bay State League All-star squad, quite an accomplishment considering the strength of the league…Was a main reason why Weymouth was in just about every game they played as 10 of the team's 20 games were decided by three or fewer goals…Paced his team to a strong fourth-place finish in the BSC at 6-9-2, while going 7-11-2 overall…Murray plans to attend college in the fall.

Nick McDonough - Senior
(Capt.)
Defense - Norwell

A varsity starter on the blue line since his freshman year who made steady improvement throughout his four seasons…a physical defenseman who did a very good job in the defensive end, but was also a strong skater who did not hesitate to go end-to-end with the puck and join the attack…finished among the team scoring leaders with nine goals and eight assists…won second "Coaches Award" this season… plays hockey year round, and has played this past year in Hockey Night in Boston, Junior Hockey camps, Hockey Unlimited and the NECDL…also a multiyear varsity regular for the NHS football and baseball teams…will run track rather than play baseball this spring…Honor Roll student…works as a fry cook at a local eatery…hopes to play college hockey, but will attend a year of prep school in the hopes of drumming up more college interest…looking at Tilton, Deerfield and Pomfret Academies as prep possibilities…plans to major in Architecture…Norwell coach Paul Hurley: "For Nick and Robbie (Weber) to come in as freshman and step right into a defensemen jobs still amazes me. Our strength the last few years was our defense, and they set the tone for us there. We didn't give up too many rebounds because Nick and Rob were always there to knock guys going for the puck on their butts. And they never complained once in four years. They both did whatever I asked without a word. They made my life real easy."

Two Cohasset hoop squads are champs

Sixth, seventh grade girls win titles; fifth graders reach finals

SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

This past weekend proved to be a memorable one for the Cohasset girls travel teams in the Old Colony League. The Blue & White seventh and sixth grade girls basketball teams brought home titles in their respective divisions with victories Sunday in the championship contests held at Bridgewater, while the fifth grade team made it to the final round.

The Seventh Wonders capped off an undefeated season with wins in the quarterfinal and semifinal games at Whitman on Saturday before taking all the marbles on Sunday.

The Super Sixers, who also entered the playoffs as the top seed in their group with an 11-1 record, similarly swept past their playoff opponents to earn the coveted Old Colony League championship hardware. The Blue & White sixth graders handily earned a spot in the finals with wins on the Cohasset High court in the semis and quarters on Saturday. Full details of the victory march for both the sixth and seventh grade teams were unavailable at press time and will be published at a later date.

The fledgling fifth grade quintet almost made it three Old Colony League titles for Cohasset teams, but fell short in the championship game with Hull to settle for the runner-up finalist trophies. The Fab Fives, who were seeded third thanks to a 9-3 regular season record, breezed through their quarterfinal and semifinal contests in impressive fashion Saturday in the Cohasset High gym with wins over sixth-seeded Bridgewater and second-seeded Braintree. The Blue & White consistently executed their offensive sets, while playing stifling defense at the other end. Cohasset had been concerned about their expected meeting with Braintree, a team which Cohasset had not seen during the regular season and which had earned the second seed with an 11-1 record. However, after spotting Braintree an early 6-4 lead, the Fab Fives assumed control of the game, jumping out to an 11-6 lead at the half and cruising thereafter to a 17-10 win. Carly Haggerty led the way with 11 points while Emma Musto added six. Jen Curley tossed in a bucket and Lindsay Davis added a free throw.

Sunday's title game with Hull proved a contest worthy of the two top teams in the league, with furious up-and-down action for most of the game. Cohasset jumped out to a quick 4-0 lead on hoops by Musto and Haggerty thanks to solid passing directed at the top by the backcourt tandem of Emma Quigley and Rachel Fredey. The Cohasset defense also shut down the potent Hull offense for most of the first half. The Cohasset backcourt combos of Quigley, Fredey, Kate French, and Olivia Murphy protected the ball in the face of the Hull half-court trap, which resulted in far fewer turnovers of the sort which had proven the Blue & White's undoing in their regular-season loss to Hull.

Despite missing many other fine scoring opportunities which could have widened their lead, the Fab Fives still were sitting pretty with a 5-1 advantage midway through the first half thanks to their tight 2-3 zone defense. However, in a sign of things to come, Hull struck for three buckets principally on some long-range shooting to take a 7-5 lead at the intermission.

Both teams continued to exhibit hard-nosed, stingy defense at the outset of the second half, but Hull once again managed to tingle the twine from the 12-15 foot range to open up a 13-5 lead. After a propitious Cohasset time-out, the Blue and White struck back with an over-the-top-of-the- defense pass from Quigley to Haggerty, who hit a cutting Musto inside for a bucket, which soon was followed by another bucket on a Davis-to-Haggerty combination to chop the lead in half to four, 13-9, with 18 minutes to play.

However, Dame Fortune was not to be with the Cohasset Fives this Sunday morning. Hull responded with two long heaves from beyond the foul line which found the range to rebuild their lead to eight, 17-9, with the clock showing under nine minutes to play. The Blue & White were unable to mount a challenge after that and Hull earned a hard-fought and well-deserved victory to take home the winner's trophies.

"We had a truly amazing season," said Matt Salerno, the coordinator for the girls teams and coach of the seventh grade squad. "All four of our teams made the playoffs (the eighth grade team did not compete in the post-season because of scheduling conflicts for most of the girls), two teams were champions, a third team made it to the finals, and our combined record for the season in all age groups was 47-10."

Salerno said he hopes to schedule a break-up gathering to cap off what has been the most successful season ever in Cohasset's participation in the Old Colony League.

The Cohasset fifth grade travel team completed a highly successful season in the Old Colony League. The Blue and White girls finished in third place with a 9-3 record in the 15 team league and then went on to win their quarterfinal and semifinal playoff games to advance to Sunday's championship game at Cohasset High versus Hull.

Softballers make their pitch

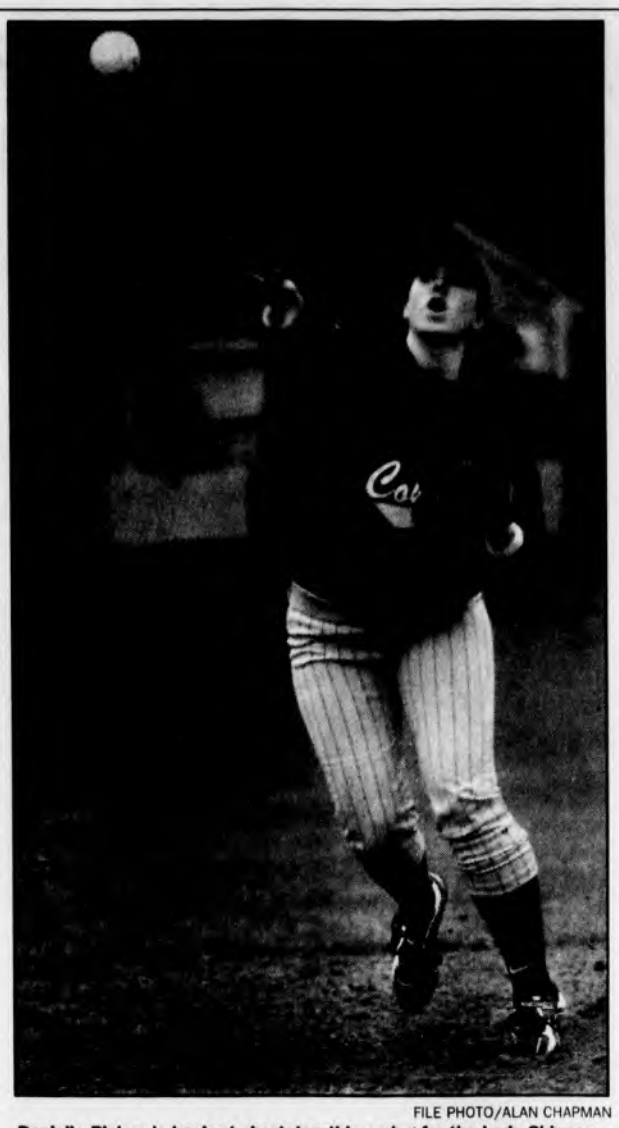
By Evan Deutsch
CORRESPONDENT

It's time for the varsity softball players to dust off the winter's snow and oil up their gloves for their second season of play. The girls gathered at the new Freedom Field on North Main Street for their first practice on Monday, March 15. Led by Coach Deb Bostwick and her assistant, Deb Beal, the girls wasted no time in getting to the fundamentals.

A total of 22 girls showed up to display their throwing skills, work on base running, and recover ground balls. Compared to other teams in their league, the Lady Skippers lack experience. Many of the Cohasset girls are underclassmen. Also, 2004 represents only the second season in the team's existence.

"We must compensate for our lack of experience," senior Rachael Doyle pointed out. "We need to pump up our hitting skills to keep up with talented teams like Abington."

Shortstop Danielle Pinkus also sees the need for improvement. However, she expresses optimism: "We have more players this year, giving us a better starting lineup."



A pivotal influence to the success of the team will be the leadership provided by Coach Deb Bostwick. Bostwick played high school softball herself in Marshfield. She then went on to play at the collegiate level at Keene State where she earned the New England MVP award. She carries her enthusiasm for softball into her coaching role.

"With some fresh and exceptional attitudes, we hope to win several games this spring," states Coach Bostwick. She cites pitchers Virginia Spofford and Christina Pinkus as displaying promise.

Also, Bostwick has adopted a new strategy with respect to her lineup. She plans to give the more experienced players greater playing time.

The girls will open at Holbrook on Wednesday with a non-league clash.

"The girls looked very enthusiastic," observes Coach Bostwick. "The freshmen coming up have apparently been well prepared by the town leagues. They seemed to fit in with the team as if they had been on the squad their whole lives." Only time will tell the outcome."

Youth movement

The fact that he has so many kids to choose from is probably what excites Parrot the most. In 2002, his first year at Cohasset, he had eight people come out for the team. Last year, it was seven. Of course, since you have to play seven, that meant he had no reserves.

This year is a totally different story. Parrot said he has had 16 kids at try-outs, including that influx of freshmen. The veteran coach gave credit to middle school coach Michelle Murphy for getting kids excited and ready to play high school tennis.

"It's been a wonderful demonstration of getting people into the game," Parrot said. "That's where the growth and development comes from. She's fed me nine new players, and she should be acknowledged for that."

It is looking to be a great year for Cohasset tennis all-around. Parrot said that 25 kids have signed up for the girls team, which is coming off an undefeated, state championship season. Parrot said he is emulating his coaching counterpart, Gigi Meehan, in trying to get everyone on the team involved, whether it be charting matches or simply getting water for teammates.

The boys coach commended Meehan for being able to keep so many kids into the matches, and he is hoping to do the same for his team.

"I have the luxury of having 16 kids this year, and I tell them that they will all have a role," Parrot said.

Both coaches should get help in that regard this year, as the South Shore League will be organizing exhibition matches for the athletes who don't get to play in the official matches.

"Everyone is going to get some match play experience," Parrot said.

In each of Parrot's first two years at Cohasset, his team has made the state tournament. If the young players continue to step up as they have in the past, another appearance this year should be in the bag.

Sixth-grade study projects make the grade removed. He had a sample MRI of a tumor, which he found on the internet. Taylor also had an informative crossword puzzle available to hand out to other students.

Abigail Perkins' project focused on social injustice. She said from studying about the Holocaust in school, she knew it was a topic she was very interested in. She had also done some research on her own about the Titanic, and couldn't believe out of 2,313,passengers, only 705 survived. She thought she could tie the two historical events together, and decided to add the Great Fire in as well.

"The people were all treated differently back then, either like trash or royalty," she said. She said she learned the injustice of the events grew over time, with the Great Fire being the smallest, then the Titanic, and finally the Holocaust.

Jackson Dean said he has always liked submarines, and didn't know much about them. He said his uncle used to be a submarine driver, which originally sparked his interest. He visited Battleship Cove in Fall River and had great pictures of himself inside the submarines.

He explained the differences between the two kinds of submarines still in existence — diesel electric submarines and nuclear submarines. He also said he learned submarines can be much more dangerous than he ever thought and a fire can be deadly, not only because of its ability to burn, but because it can suck up all the oxygen in the submarine, making it impossible for the crew to breathe.

With her Irish background, Johanna Regan said she was interested to learn more about the immigration of the Irish to Boston. "All my great-grandparents were immigrants, and I never really thought that much about it before," she said. She said she learned about how hard it was for the Irish to succeed in a new country because they were treated so harshly. "They couldn't even get jobs," she said. Johanna went around Boston and took pictures of the various memorials which honor the Irish, and learned how important their immigration was to the city.

Andrew Littauer has gone blue fin tuna fishing since he was six years old. "It's a very powerful fish, and it's a very expensive sport," he said. He explained that a person needs a license to go tuna fishing, and commercial fisherman have another set of rules for bringing the big fish home.

He said when a tuna is caught for commercial use, it needs to be gutted on the boat and weighed. It is then packed in ice and salt to keep it cold, even on the boat. He said keeping it cold is very important for the Japanese, who eat it raw as sushi. He also talked about the Tsukiji fish market in Japan and had photos of the tuna ready to be sold. Prices range from $10 to $115 a pound, depending on the fish.

Andrew goes fishing with his father, and sometimes Mike Davis, who is a commercial tuna fisherman. He said when they go out on the boat, cloudy weather is ideal. "Tuna are smart," he said, and they can recognize when a lure is fake, so cloudy weather impairs their vision.

Abby Faulkner's project uncovered the mystery behind the Big Dig, and she conducted interviews with both Peter Lalas who designed the Ted Williams Tunnel, and Ellen White who is head of one of the divisions of the project. "I always thought it was kind of a huge mess," Abby said, but after doing her research, said she understands how the project will look in the end. She said she was very lucky to speak with Lalas and White, and that she found out information not printed in any of the books she read.

All the projects reflected an enormous amount of work and effort on the part of the students. Other topics included the United Nations, K2, medicinal herbs, tornadoes, the Heisman trophy, the life cycle of sea turtles, Pompeii, Renaissance architecture, the Marines, and Thomas Edison.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

DAY CAMPS CAN BE A GREAT CHOICE!

Here are specific points to consider when choosing a day camp.

What training does the staff receive on safety, supervision, child development, counseling, problem solving, and other issues unique to working with young children?

Is the price all-inclusive or are there extra charges for:
- Transportation
- Overnights
- Swimming lessons
- Food service
- Horseback riding
- Group pictures
- Before- and after- camp extended care
- T-shirts
- Field trips

If transportation to and from camp is offered, where is the closest pick-up spot? Is it possible to meet the driver beforehand ? (at the Open House, perhaps)?

If before- and after-camp extended care is offered, who is with the children and what activities take place?

Is lunch served or do campers bring their own bag lunch? Are snacks and drinks provided?

If the camp offers swimming, do they offer swimming lessons or recreational swimming?

How does the daily schedule work? Are campers in a group with the same counselor all day?

Do campers move from one activity to another individually or as a group?

How much individual choice in programming do campers have?

To whom on the camp staff would you direct questions or concerns about your child?

Is an open house offered before camp starts so your family may meet camp staff and tour camp?

Are parents allowed to drop by for visits? If so, under what conditions?

The answers to these and questions from you and your child can help you decide which day camp is the right match for this summer.

CAMP gives kids a world of good.

Area runners gear up to hit the road

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

It's that time of year again as runners and walkers of all ages are preparing to lace up their sneakers and hit the road, for the 28th annual Cohasset Road Race By the Sea.

Sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club, the race will take place on Sunday April 4, when a roughly six-mile stretch of road, a good portion of which overlooks the beautiful Cohasset seascape, will be closed to traffic, as runners will take to the streets to participate in what has become a Cohasset tradition.

"It's been quite a successful event," said Race Chairman Brad Goodwin, adding depending on the weather, he expects to see between 800 and 1,000 runners and walkers participate this year. "The response has been phenomenal," he said, adding many participants use the race as training for the Boston Marathon.

Goodwin said while this is his first year heading up the coordination of the race, he has heard much wonderful feedback over the years. "It has a fabulous reputation with runners in New England. It's a beautiful course and because runners like to go places where they have a good time and the people are friendly," there has been a growing turnout every year, he said.

Goodwin said this year, between 30 and 40 percent of the runners are new. So far, he has runners signed up which represent each of the six New England states, as well as one runner from California, one from Indiana, and one from Canada. Because many runners wait to sign up until a few days before the event, in order to keep and eye on the weather, there could be even more surprising participants that come forward.

Cohasset residents have been wonderful in making visitors feel at home, which could be why the race has such a great turnout. "Runners like to be appreciated," said Goodwin, adding many residents with homes on the route will set up their own water stands and cheer runners on as they go by. He also said the support from the town, and the understanding shown when roads are closed for the day, has been wonderful.

Runners head down South Main Street into the village at the beginning of the Cohasset Road-Race-by-the-Sea last year. The 10k event, which is sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club, attracted about 650 runners.

Traditionally, the race is held on the first Sunday in April, and has a start time of 1 p.m. to minimize disruption to church services. However, for those who prefer to take things a little slower, or want to start their day a little earlier, the Rotary Club also holds a "fun walk" which takes place at 10 o'clock on the morning of the race. That course begins at Sandy Beach, and ends at Sandy Beach, covering roughly 3 miles.

One of the nicest aspects of the entire race day, is the fact that most of the help throughout the day is given by volunteers, Goodwin said. "There are a number of people who help with traffic control," he said, adding those who will participate in the Appalachia Service Project usually run water stops throughout the course.

In addition to volunteers, the race could not be carried out without the help of local businesses that serve as sponsors for the race. Their logos appear on the T-shirts, printed by Goodwin's brother, Ronnie Goodwin, owner of Goodwin Graphics, for a little free advertising as the runners sprint by.

> "Runners like to be appreciated."
> - Brad Goodwin, Race Chairman

"Ronnie does the T-shirts for the race at a considerable discount and the runners collect the shirts. When people signed up this year, they wanted to know what the design on the shirts would be," said Brad Goodwin.

Garelick Farms has also donated more than 2,600 pints of spring water for the event, which Goodwin said has been done for a number of years. Reebok has also provided the Rotary Club with gift certificates to be used as prizes for the racers.

If all goes well, Goodwin expects the Rotary Club will raise between $5,000 and $8,000 from the event. Proceeds from the event will go toward various charities the Rotary Club donates to, including these organizations: Cohasset Appalachian Service Project, Boy and Girl Scouts, Board of Health, Historical Society, Recreation Department, the Harborview Tenant's Association, the South Shore ARC, Wellspring in Hull, Father Bill's Place, and the American Cancer Society.

Proceeds also go toward the Post Prom Party, as well as the Cohasset Rotary Club scholarship program, which has provided thousands of dollars in scholarship money to Cohasset students over the years.

There are also Rotary International programs, which receive support from the Cohasset Rotary Club, including the Rotary's Polio Plus program, which works toward making the world polio-free by the year 2005. In addition, the Cohasset Rotary Club is also working to provide safe, clean water to all areas of the world.

"It's a great event, I'm very excited about being involved in it," Goodwin said.

Benefit for Lydia at Red Lion Inn raises upwards of $30K

Sara Sullivan, Anne Sexton, Jeanine Buckley Perrone (rear), Laura Vigneau, Kim Jackson (rear), Linda Resca, Jeannie deMurias, Kimberley Majury Albanese at the Friends of Lydia Vigneau auction evening hosted by the Red Lion Inn.

The Red Lion Inn hosted the Friends of Lydia Vigneau at an auction evening that raised in excess of $30,000 to assist the Vigneau family in meeting the expenses that have accrued since 3-year-old Lydia was diagnosed with Leukemia in November 2003.

Scott Wahle was the auctioneer for premier golf packages, an autographed Tom Brady football and vacation lodging that were all generously donated. Local restaurants, businesses, the Patriots, Cam Neely Foundation, South Shore families and others provided more than 200 silent auction and raffle items. The Red Lion Inn kindly donated the spacious Lion's Den, wait staff, and appetizers for the 300 people who arrived and made the evening so successful.

The Friends of Lydia Vigneau want to express thanks to the many caring friends that have helped financially and personally in recent months. Lydia has been responsive to the aggressive chemotherapy treatment and after more than 50 days of hospitalization has begun a two-year out-patient chemotherapy treatment program. With a weekly schedule that includes trips to Dana Farber, at-home treatments from visiting nurses, and $250 co-payments for emergency room visits, The Lydia Vigneau Fund is still accepting donations; contributions may be sent to: 310 Beechwood St, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Scott Wahle, Greg Albanese and Rick Woodland feature the autographed Tom Brady football with photos offered in the live auction.

IT'S HAPPENING

Jazz concert April 7

The Cohasset Public Schools Jazz Band in conjunction with the C.P. Harvey Jazz Scholarship Fund will welcome the Mark Greel Jazz Band for a performance on April 7, at 7 p.m., at the Cohasset Middle High School.

The Cohasset Jazz Band was created last year under the leadership of instrumental music teacher, Stephanie Hoskin. During the same year, Louis Harvey of Cohasset established the C.P. Harvey Jazz Scholarship Fund as a memorial to his father who was an avid jazz enthusiast. It was decided to utilize the memorial fund to invite a professional jazz group to work with the students during the day and perform for the community in the evening.

Last spring, The Aaron Thurston Trio, a jazz group from Manhattan, was invited to perform with the Cohasset jazz musicians. The event proved to be a great success.

This year the Mark Greel Jazz Band was selected as the group to work with Cohasset students and entertain school and community members with a 7 p.m. performance at the Cohasset Middle High School.

Mark Greel attended the New England Conservatory in Boston. Selected as lead trumpet and soloist, Mark performed and recorded at Symphony Hall under the direction of world renowned jazz educator, Herb Pomeroy. Mark, later became a scholarship student at the Berklee School of Music majoring in arranging and composition. In 1984, Greel established the Mark Greel Band. The group has performed in Germany, Austria, Italy, and China. They have been featured in the Boston Globe Jazz Festival, the Hatchshell and performed at noted hotels and clubs in the Boston area. In 2002, the Mark Greel jazz CD "What'll I Do" was released.

Tickets for the Mark Greel Band engagement can be reserved by calling the Curriculum Office at Cohasset Middle High School at 781-383-3031. Adult tickets $15, students $8.

Appalachian Festival is Saturday, April 3

The Cohasset Appalachia Service Project will be sponsoring its fourth annual Appalachian Festival on Saturday, April 3 at the Cohasset Middle High School (143 Pond St.). A unique blend of Appalachian traditions will be presented to help awaken more folks to the culture that all of the ASP volunteers have come to appreciate so much.

The festival will begin at 6 p.m. with a family-style, sit-down dinner featuring Appalachian cuisine, followed by an Appalachian Mountain Marketplace with authentic Appalachian arts & crafts for sale, a quilt raffle, an ASP slide show, and dessert.

The evening with conclude with some foot stompin', hand clappin' entertainment provided by a local favorite Blue Grass group: "Quarter Moon."

Cost for the event will be: adults - $20; children - $8; with a family maximum of $50. Tickets may be purchased at St. Anthony's, St. Stephen's, First Parish and the Second Congregational churches or at Buttonwood Books. Please purchase your tickets by March 31 so that plenty of "vittles" can be prepared!

Proceeds to benefit the Cohasset Appalachia Service Project's 17th trip, this year with 150 teenage and 68 adult volunteers traveling to West Virginia and Kentucky to repair and improve some 30 homes. Call (781) 383-0345 or visit our website at www.CohassetASP.org for more information about the project.

Palm Sunday organ recital

As part of its Sunday Concert Series, St. Stephen's Church presents organist G. Frederick Guzasky in a recital on Palm Sunday, April 4, at 3 p.m. Guzasky is on the faculty at Bridgewater State College and an Affiliated Artist at M.I.T. in Cambridge. He is author of the "Gregorian Chant Handbook" and composer of a series of Russian Orthodox choral anthems distributed by the Musica Russica publishing company.

The program will be played on the church's 58 rank Aeolian-Skinner organ, built in 1964 - noted for its vast tonal resources and unusual placement around the church.

On the program, Guzasky will play the Bach Prelude and Fugue in D Minor, Rheinberger's Sonata in E Minor, and various selections of American organ music, a program he will present later this year in St. Petersburg Russia. The church is located at 16 Highland Ave and plenty of parking is available at the village or car park. Admission is free, but donations will be accepted. For more information, call 781-383-1083.

CHS Drama Workshop is in the limelight — again

On stage in finals of the state festival

By Mary Sheppard
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Lightning rarely strikes twice, but in an unusual decision made by judges in the Massachusetts High School Drama Festival competition, individual acting awards were handed out to each of the three cast members of "Postponing the Heat Death of the Universe," Cohasset High School Drama Workshop's production by playwright, Stephen Gregg.

For Austin Breslow, Allison Earon, and Brenna O'Donnell, winning individual awards at the preliminary level in February, then at the semi-finals in March in the respected annual drama competition was much more than they ever dreamed would happen. And now for the second time in two years, Cohasset High has been chosen to compete in the finals this weekend in Boston.

"Recognizing the entire cast individually with acting awards is practically unheard of," said Jenna Emmons, director. "Granted, there are only three cast members, but it really says something about these kids in this particular play. One judge told me in Duxbury that there was something special about this production. I'm not one to argue. They're doing a great, great job, and we're going to finals again!"

But, director and cast are also quick to embrace the crew of "Postponing the Heat Death of the Universe," comprised of stage managers, Nicole Durant and Krissy Watts, and John Keniley, Katharine Murphy, and Emily Savage, who also understudies.

"We have an awesome crew," says Allison. "We really could not have come this far without them. They're the unsung heroes of the production, but anyone who knows theater knows that without a good crew, the cast and the play are nothing."

Emmons nodded in agreement. "Our crew is unique because it's not a situation where everyone has his or her job. Everybody pitches in and does what needs to be done, regardless," she says.

"Nicole Durant is in charge of lighting this year. She's never done it before and has had a short period of time to learn the lighting set at each school in these competitions," Emmons says. "Lighting is so important because it makes or breaks the play. If mistakes are made, not only could it throw the cast off their lines, it also makes the audience suddenly aware that they're watching a play, not witnessing something real going on.

"Then, the magic of theater, that of a really good play being performed, is gone," she says. "That hasn't happened obviously, but it's because we have the backup, the stage management, the technical crew that we have. Nicole has done a wonderful, professional job, as has our entire crew."

With a bare-bones set comprised of bricks, a bed, and a phone, it was the combined acting talent of Austin, Allison, and Brenna that helped whisk Cohasset into the winners line-up at both competitions where the drama club performed against seven other schools each time. More than 100 public, private, and parochial schools initially began the competition at sites located around Massachusetts. Facing many schools that were much larger than their own, some had casts and crews big enough in size to match the number of those graduating this year from CHS.

Austin, a freshman who plays the role of Nick Olmsted, felt a bit daunted at the onset of this drama competition. This was his first experience and he wasn't sure Cohasset had a chance of winning that first day.

Katharine Murphy, Allison Earon and Krissy Watts show off the Drama Workshop's Festival 2004 Semi-Finalist trophy.

"My first impression when we arrived in Attleboro and got out of the van was seeing everybody in matching T-shirts, with the name of their schools and plays on them," he recalls. "I thought 'wow, these kids are really into this'. Then, I saw their costumes, sets and props and realized they were really, really into it. Suddenly, I felt like underdogs and didn't have a lot of hope of winning."

"One judge told me in Duxbury that there was something special about this production. I'm not one to argue. They're doing a great, great job, and we're going to finals again!"
— Jenna Emmons, director

But Cohasset did win that day and then went on to Duxbury, and won again. In addition to receiving acting awards, Cohasset was given the nod to join the ranks of the 14 other finalists that will compete March 25-27 at John Hancock Hall in Boston. Cohasset is scheduled to go onstage at 1 p.m. on Saturday. Two winners and an alternate will be chosen in this final round.

The Drama Festival is familiar ground to actors Allison and Brenna as it is to Emmons, and stage managers, Krissy and Nicole. Allison, Krissy, and Nicole went to festival two years ago with Emmons. Allison's first experience with festival was as a sophomore in a five-actor play called "Act III, Scene 5."

"Coming from the small drama program at Cohasset, I was extremely overwhelmed the first time I experienced festival," says Allison, a senior. "Everyone was so friendly and outgoing even though it was a competition. I'm constantly impressed by the amazingly supportive atmosphere at each site. The people are definitely what make festival so much fun."

Brenna's first-time at festival was as a freshman and under the directorship of Ron Emmons, Jenna's father, who was CHS drama director at the time. Brenna said she had just a small part, but "it was cool because I got a taste of festival." She wanted a part in "Postponing the Heat Death," but wasn't sure she'd get it because so many others auditioned. She was excited to be chosen by Jenna Emmons and had hoped from the beginning to win a place at finals. When asked what the best part of the competition has been so far, Brenna responded with a laugh, "Oh, the awards ceremony has been nice! Getting an acting award felt like getting an Oscar! Coolest thing ever!"

Brenna added that her brother, Kevin O'Donnell, who is now 27, has been involved in theater work since high school and also competed in festival with Ron Emmons as director. Brenna said Kevin is very proud of all the cast and crew.

"What's cool is that when I called and told him about our wins, it wasn't like telling a friend who didn't know what it was about, but was happy for you anyway. Kevin had been there and he knew! He said, 'isn't going to festival the greatest feeling?' He totally understood my excitement!"

Both Allison and Austin got their start in theater at the Company Theater in Norwell. Both were young — 5 and 6, respectively. Allison since then auditions for whatever theater is available and can fit in with the rest of her busy life. Austin has performed at the Top Hat in Randolph in addition to his stage work at the Company Theater. Allison and Brenna were both involved in the musicals offered by Cohasset Plays by the Sea, a theater group that ran for several years under the steerage of Ron Nicynski, Sharon Weber, and Mary Earon. Two of their successful productions were "The Wizard of Oz" and "Annie."

Austin likes his character, Nick Olmsted, because he's not afraid to show that he's smart. But there's a lot of challenge in this role as well.

"I've always done physical theater and in this play, where I have to spend most of it propped up in a bed, it's been a challenge because I've been forced to really concentrate on delivering my lines and projecting more. It's been fine," he said, "except when the headboard fell over."

Allison explained. "It was in Attleboro, our first competition. We only had five minutes to set up for the show. There is a timer and if we go over, we are disqualified. Our timer that day was really pressuring us, and so we were rushing like mad to get every thing in place.

"Unfortunately, we didn't spend enough time setting up the bed's headboard so that it was really unstable," she recalls. "At one point in the play, I have to lay down on the bed next to Austin and stretch out. When I leaned my head against the headboard, it fell over with a loud crash. Of course, we couldn't act like anything happened, so for the next 25 minutes Austin and I had to hold ourselves up by stomach muscles alone and keep acting. It was the most painful thing, and Austin actually had to do it for a longer time." Despite the headboard falling over, however, the cast never missed a beat with their lines and they were a winning production.

The thrill of winning individual awards and going on to state finals couldn't happen to three nicer kids, it seems. They all feel that in so many ways they've already won in the number of new friends they made, the experience alone of competing, and the fun they've had in getting to know each other. They had no expectations of getting this far.

"One thing I've learned about competing in Festival," says Emmons. "Nothing is predictable. So much depends on what the judges like and don't like, what mood they're in. You can't see a great show and assume it's going to finals. Nor can you see a bad show and think it's curtains. You just never know. Cohasset's been a favorite this year. I have no idea what will happen in the finals this weekend. I'm just happy we've gotten as far as we have."

Give theater a try

The cast of three describe the theater experiences in their lives as positive and encourage others to try theater if they're even slightly curious about it.

"A lot of kids do sports at school because theater isn't something you hear a lot about," Austin says. "But this is the perfect place to do it because it's a place you're familiar with and it's just a few minutes away, no commute, and you're doing it with friends. Kids shouldn't be worried about how other kids look at you if you act. Theater is a good thing. It helps with memorization, especially in school, it's a different way to be artistic, and it teaches you to speak comfortably in front of people. Plus, it's a lot of fun!"

Brenna agrees. "I haven't been regularly involved with theater because I'm really into ski team," she says. "I injured myself though and couldn't do ski team this year. But I could do theater. You have to go with what's offered to you. You can't always go with what your plans are. If you think you want to play sports, but it doesn't work out, there is so much else to check out. I think it's always good to break out and try different things."

Allison advises freshmen to not wait until they're juniors or seniors to check out the theater. "Don't have any regrets," she says. "If you're curious, why not try it. You never know — you could be missing out on something that you would love."

Emmons would also like to see seventh and eighth graders get involved in theater. Currently, the program is not open to the middle school. She hopes that changes in the future.

"I think the younger you are exposed to the stage, the better. You're less likely to have protective mechanisms in place, I think," she says.

She also remains hopeful that the Drama Workshop someday will receive the support and attention it deserves from the school administration

"Theater, as part of the arts, is not on this school's list of priorities, as it is in other schools," she says. "There is a lot of talent in this school and theater is a great creative outlet. It'd be nice to see the kids who are interested and involved in theater be supported more. These are the results and rewards. The kids deserve it."

The final competition of the Massachusetts High School Drama Festival begins Thursday evening, March 25, and continues through Saturday afternoon, March 27, at the John Hancock Hall at the corner of Berkeley Street and St. James in Boston. Cohasset High School will perform "Postponing the Heat Death of the Universe" at 1 p.m. on Saturday, March 27.. This event is open to the public. Tickets for the competition are $7; tickets for Saturday evening's Award Ceremony are $5. All tickets may be purchased at the door.

Haddad crunches budget numbers

Explains where money is going

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

One of the most important decisions before voters at Saturday's annual Town Meeting is the proposed budget. But in order to make an informed decision, it is important to know where the money comes from, where it goes, and why the town is asking for an override this year, Town Manager Mark Haddad said.

Haddad, who is the town's chief financial officer, came on board in August of 1997. He said from fiscal year 1999 to FY05, the average increase for the total operating budget is 9.2 percent, having gone from $20,051,154 in FY99 to $31,120,060 in FY05.

While that number may seem high overall, Haddad says it shouldn't be taken at face value because there are factors the town cannot control which affect the increase.

The town's operating budget has a total of 12 categories: general government, public safety, education, public works, Board of Health, sewer, human services, culture and recreation, debt, benefits and insurance, water and other.

Although sewer and water are included in the operating budget, Haddad said they should not be included in the figures because they are self-sufficient. Rate payers cover their costs, and therefore they have no impact on the tax rate. If those two items are taken out of the operating budget, the average total increase automatically drops down to 8.89 percent.

Haddad also said the town has no control over the debt category, because Town Meeting votes to approve the projects which are included under that heading. The North Cohasset and Central Cohasset sewer projects, and the renovations to Osgood, Deer Hill and the middle-high school, all fall under the debt category.

"Town Meeting decided it wanted to fund all those projects," Haddad said. "That to me, is money we have no control over."

Haddad said the town also has no control over benefits and insurance because they are items the town is required to pay. If the health insurance company decides to increase a premium, there is nothing the town can do to stop it. "Could we control the number of employees? Sure, but not the rates we have to pay," he said.

In addition, Haddad said the "other" category contains state and county charges, as well as retired teacher health insurance, MBTA assessments, and charter school assessments, which are also out of the town's control.

So, what is in the town's control? Haddad said of the 12 categories, seven are completely at the discretion of the town.

Haddad said general government, which has increased from $1,314,872 in FY99 to $1,535,735, or about 2.8 percent, has gone up based on the cost of living. "There's no fat in this building," he said, adding three positions have been eliminated over the seven years he has been on board, and he thinks the way Town Hall has been running has been very efficient.

> "There's no fat in this building."
> — Town Manager Mark Haddad

Public safety has gone from $2,541,376 in FY99to $3,649,618 in FY05, an average increase of 7.27 percent. "In FY00, we added four firefighters to the department to expand our paramedic services. We made the decision to add services for our residents," he said, adding the choice to provide better emergency care for the town was a smart one. "Town Meeting agreed with us," he said.

When Brian Noonan was police chief, Haddad said he requested adding another police officer to the force. "The additional police officer has helped with some manning issues," Haddad said.

Education has increased from $8,639,438 in FY 99 to $12,203,038 in FY05, for an average increase of 6.87 percent. "We have increased the size of the buildings, which has increased utility costs, and the school-age population is increasing, which is why it was necessary to increase the size of the schools. That's the cost of doing business," Haddad said.

Public works has increased the most, at an average of 13.74 percent. Haddad explained when the town took over maintenance for the schools, that cost was absorbed by the town. In addition, the town hired two employees to maintain the town's parks and new buildings. "We increased the amount of people we have working, but we had more to take care of," he said.

The Board of Health has increased from $91,667 in FY99 to $159,222, for an average increase of 8.52 percent. However, Haddad said because the Board of Health has taken on a new employee, who used to be paid through the general government fund, the same money is being spent, but it is now in a new category.

Human services has increased by 10.28 percent, and the Council on Elder Affairs is the recipient of all the funding in that category. "We have made a commitment to deliver services to the seniors in town," said Haddad, adding $14,000 of the total $159,222 appropriation for FY05 will go toward paying rent to the South Shore Community Center for the CEA. The CEA also has a new outreach coordinator, and while many van drivers are volunteers, they needed to be certain there would always be someone available, which has required a paid van driver position.

Culture and recreation has increased by 5.89 percent, which is due partially to the new library facilities. The other major factor is salary increases, and Haddad said the most recent contract negotiations for both the library and clerical unions have resulted in a zero percent increase the first year and a 3 percent increase the second, "which is not extravagant," he said.

Taking those seven categories into account, Haddad said the average increase has been 7.04 percent. On the whole, Haddad said all the increases in the operating budget were made to improve the level of services provided in town, and all have been good, sound business decisions.

Tax overrides are common occurrence in Cohasset

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Cohasset voters are no stranger to overrides.

The "O" word has been the subject of campaign rhetoric, referred to in letters to the editor, depicted in cartoons, and described in news stories.

If the proposed $400,000 Prop. 2-1/2 override passes muster with the voters at Saturday's Town Meeting and again at the ballot box April 3, it would be the fourth operating budget override approved since 1997.

Prop. 2-1/2 is a state law that caps the amount a municipality can raise its tax levy from year to year. Voters can "override" that tax cap through a majority vote at the ballot box.

If passed, the override would add 23 cents per $1,000 to the tax rate. The owner of a $600,000 home — the average home price in Cohasset — has a property tax bill of about $7,134 this year. With an override, that bill would increase about $294 to $7,428 — $138 of which would be attributed to the override.

Some are saying this year's override would be the seventh in seven years. Town Manager Mark Haddad points out, it is important to explain the difference between a general override for the operating budget – like the one proposed this year – and debt exclusions.

Debt exclusion overrides are passed by a two-thirds vote at Town Meeting and a majority vote at the ballot box. Debt exclusions are used solely to cover special projects.

"The money is used specifically to pay a debt, and once it's paid back, the tax goes away," Haddad said. Cohasset passed debt exclusions in May of 1997, December of 1998, and April of 1999 specifically for sewer construction. Combined, those debt exclusions totaled $24,363,600.

In December of 1999 and April of 2000, debt exclusions were also passed for the school renovations for a total of $42,440,000.

Operating budget overrides permanently increase taxes, and since 1997, the town has passed three. In May of 1999, an operating budget override of $380,000 was passed. That year, voters had an option of three different overrides to vote on, and both the $612,895 and $509,554 figures failed.

The second operating budget override for $300,000 was passed in April of 2001. That was followed by a third operating budget override of $350,000 in April of 2003.

"The Commonwealth of Massachusetts decreased state aid to Cohasset by $436,000," in 2003, Haddad said, adding "We only asked for a tax increase of $350,000."

Cohasset has been compared to other neighboring towns, which have not had the same override history. For example, the town of Hingham, which is going for an operating budget override of $753,682 this year, has only passed two operating budget overrides since 1990. However, Haddad said there are a lot of factors that come into play, which make the two towns incomparable. "You can't compare Cohasset to other communities because there are different issues," he said.

For example, because the formula for state aid is based on property value per capita, Cohasset does not receive as much as Hingham. In FY90, Cohasset's net state aid figure was $1,096,139. In FY04, that figure was $1,103,142, meaning the town has received an increase in state aid of only $7,000 over the past 14 years. In Hingham, the net state aid figure in FY90 began at $2,575,838. That figure increased to $3,543,959 in FY04. Their starting figure in FY90 was more than $1 million over what Cohasset had to work with, and that town has experienced an increase of 38 percent since then, while Cohasset has increased only 1 percent.

In addition, Hingham is experiencing consistent new growth over the years, most of which is commercial. "Ninety-eight percent of our new growth is residential," said Haddad, adding every new home built in Cohasset brings in roughly $10,000 in tax revenue, but if that home brings children with it, one child being added to the school system almost negates the money which was brought in from the home.

Haddad said initially he did not include an override in the fiscal year 2005 proposed budget. However, after many hours with the school committee, advisory committee, selectmen, Supt. Edward Malvey, and Director of Finance Michael Buckley, he felt every line item had been scrutinized, and made the decision to include the override as a means of "maintaining what we have."

Selectmen agreed and voted unanimously to recommend the budget with the override on the Town Meeting Warrant, as did the advisory committee.

Teachers, athletics are on the chopping block

School board eyes cuts if override fails

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Should the town vote down the $400,000 override, the school committee said the two most likely places cuts will be made are in the form of teachers and/or the athletic program.

Should the override fail, it is likely the town and schools will split the cost, with the schools absorbing 70 percent, or $280,000. The school committee said because the athletic department and teachers salaries receive the most funding of any other line items in the budget, they will be considered as places to turn to make up some of the money needed.

"If you reduce full-time teachers, you get the best bang for your buck," said Supt. Edward Malvey. However, full-time teachers can come in the form of either classroom teachers or specialists, and the schools would be adversely affected either way, he said.

Malvey said if it comes down to either eliminating a classroom teacher or a specialist, it might make more sense to keep the classroom teacher who provides the core elements of education for the students, rather than the specialist. But school committee members did not wholly agree at last Thursday's budget meeting.

Member Pat Martin said by eliminating a specialist, it's going to negatively impact all classroom teachers. Because the schools are required to provide planning periods for their teachers — time when students had previously been with specialists would now have to be spent in the classroom. Teachers would be required to prepare more curriculum to fill that time period in the class, but with less preparation time. "If specialists are eliminated, it will put more time in the hands of the classroom teachers," said Martin, adding because of contractual obligations, the teachers could say they either can't or won't be held responsible during that time.

Committee Chairman Rick Flynn said he wants to stay away from making cuts that would affect student instruction, and that means keeping as many teachers on board as possible. Because the athletics budget is another key source of funding, he suggested Malvey work with Athletic Director Ron Ford to come up with a list of costs and revenues for the department, broken down by sport, to see if any cuts could be made there.

However, Flynn noted how important it is for students to participate in sports, not only from a teamwork standpoint, but because it can help them get into college. While eliminating junior varsity sports was floated, member Mark DeGiacomo said "it would be ridiculous to only have varsity sports." However, Malvey said the question of "Are we brains or are we brawn," may have to be considered.

The school committee had originally recommended a budget of $11.9 million which is 6.45 percent or $723,753 over last year. However, during these tight fiscal times, which are also facing the town's side of the budget, that figure is about $400,000 more than Town Manager Mark Haddad has allocated for the schools next year, which has resulted in the need to include a Prop. 2-1/2 override on the Town Meeting Warrant. Passing an override is a two-step process: first Town Meeting approves the budget contingent on the override and then a ballot question must pass by a simple majority at the polls on April 3.

To date, the school department's proposed fiscal year 2005 budget has already been cut by $460,000, which will result in the loss of middle school athletics, three elementary level teachers, and a special education aid. Other positions have been downsized from full to part time, and there will be no salary increases for administrators. These reductions are taking place whether the override passes or not, school officials said.

However, in addition to looking at cutting teachers and athletics, the school committee is taking another look at lists compiled by the three Cohasset principals that outline other possible reductions. If the override doesn't pass, the school committee said there is a good chance a majority of the items on the lists will be cut from the budget, but it still wouldn't be enough to rule out cutting teachers or sports.

"If we cut everything off all these sheets, it's only $173,000. We're still $107,000 short," said DeGiacomo.

Some proposed cuts from Osgood principal Janet Sheehan include eliminating a technology instructor at Osgood for $28,139; and reducing to a .2 physical education teacher, which would mean first graders would only have physical education one time per week rather than two. She also suggested that the general supplies account be reduced by $7,703 and professional development by $2,550.

At Deer Hill, Keith Gauley's suggestions include eliminating one instructional aide to the tune of $15,500; a reduction in purchase of classroom supplies by 40 percent, which would yield $5,000; and the elimination of $5,700 for after-school MCAS tutoring.

At the middle-high school, Michael Jones said eliminating an English teacher would be the most significant cut at $42,167. However, eliminating that one teacher would cause that team of teachers to dissolve. Because teams each include a science, social studies, English and math teacher, losing the English teacher would free the rest of the team to move up to the high school level, which would help with enrollment issues there, but affect students in the middle school. "The middle school will have larger class sizes, and the teachers will have to teach five classes, but it'll function," he said.

Member Rick Shea pointed out that any reductions made now should take into consideration, there is no way to know if the money would be available again in the near future. Once a position is cut entirely, it's not easy to bring it back, he said.

Flynn said he agreed and thinks the schools should be formulating a plan for the next two years.

DeGiacomo said aside from the proposed cuts on the list, it would make sense to revisit the additions made to the budget. The high school math teacher was added at a cost of $42,000; three part-time activity aides were added at Deer Hill for $30,000; and a school psychologist was added at $45,000.

The School Committee will not make any final decisions on cuts until after the town votes on the override.

The Annual Town Meeting will be held Saturday, March 27 at 10 a.m. in the Sullivan Gymnasium at Cohasset High School.

Dollars are main focus of Town Meeting meeting as well as the Town Manager's recommended motions.

A quorum of 100 registered voters is required before Town Meeting can get underway. Once a quorum is determined at the start of the meeting, the presence of a quorum is presumed to continue unless it is challenged and a count shows a quorum is not present. Without a quorum, the meeting will be adjourned.

However, Town Manager Mark Haddad said he doesn't think meeting a quorum will be an issue. "On the first day of the annual Town Meeting, a quorum is never a problem," he said, and expects there to be between 400 and 500 residents in attendance.

"I think this year the turnout will be very high," he said, because the budget and the budget process is such a huge focus, as the town is looking to approve a Prop. 2-1/2 override. "There are a couple of zoning articles like the large house site plan review, which is important to debate, as well as land purchases to protect the water supply," which should also draw a crowd, he said.

While the fall Special Town Meeting is traditionally held on a Monday night, the annual Town Meeting is held on a Saturday. Haddad said depending on the number of articles left on the warrant, at around 5 o'clock the Moderator may look to adjourn. "If it looks like there are only one or two left," and they can be wrapped up quickly, the meeting will continue a little past five to eliminate the need for the meeting to carry over to another day, Haddad said. However, if there are several issues left to be addressed, Haddad said the meeting will be adjourned and carried over to Monday night at 7 p.m.

Articles will be addressed as listed on the warrant with one exception. Article 17, which requests $3 million for the water department to complete various projects, will be presented after Article 11. Because Article 12 and subsequent articles require that the money be approved in order to carry them out, it has been advised by Town Counsel that the article be moved up. Haddad said he has spoken with Glenn Pratt of the water commission and he agreed to the move.

Here is some of what voters can expect:

- Vote on the FY2005 budget with a $400,000 Prop. 2-1/2 override.
- Add a "Large House Site Plan Review" section to the current bylaws, to limit construction of a building or structure so as not to exceed the greater of 3,500 square feet or 10 percent of the area of the lot, up to a maximum of 6,000 square feet.
- Decide whether to impose a "Demolition Delay" bylaw, which would empower the Cohasset Historical Commission to advise the building inspector with respect to the issuance of permits for demolition. The bylaw would only apply to buildings which reflect or constitute distinctive features of the architectural, cultural, economic, political or social history of the town.
- Amend the Senior Multi-family Residence Overlay District bylaw to reduce the number of multi-family dwelling units that may be built from 20 percent of the total housing units in town, to 15 percent of the total housing units in town.
- Spend $100,000 for the purpose of developing engineering documents, specifications and corresponding cost estimates for the purpose of building a sewer collection and treatment system in the Little Harbor sewer district and the Atlantic Avenue sewer district.
- Spend $1.4 million for the purchase of 70 acres of open land to the west of King Street, bounded by Trustees of Reservations, Wompatuck State Park, and water department land, to protect the water supply and provide additional open space in town. The land is in the Brass Kettle Brook watershed, which is a direct tributary to Lily Pond.
- Spend $3 million to complete various ongoing water department capital projects, and for high priority projects, including those that would remedy insufficient fire flows on North Main Street, Gammons Road, Jerusalem Road Drive, and Haystack Lane by replacing undersized water mains.
- Authorize the town to sell water to the Linden Ponds development in Hingham for a period of 40 years.
- Spend $25,000 to pay for Cohasset's share of the engineering costs associated with the repairing and/or replacing of the West Corner Culvert, located at the Hingham/Hull/Cohasset town line. The expense will be shared equally with the other two towns.
- Authorize the board of selectmen to spend $64,200 to acquire an additional easement in James Lane, the road between the Red Lion Inn and the Citgo gas station on South Main Street.
- Authorize the town to spend $25,000 for engineering, design and development of bid specifications for improvements to the sea wall between the Mill River Marina and the Atlantica Restaurant on Border Street.
- Authorize the board of assessors to raise the maximum asset and income eligibility levels for the Elderly Tax Exemption, allowing more residents over the age of 70 on fixed incomes to qualify.
- Adopt an article which would allow town officials to deny, revoke, or suspend most licenses and permits when the applicant or landlord's fees, taxes, or other municipal charges remain unpaid for more than 12 months.

To keep the meeting moving along, Town Moderator George Marlette states in his moderator's message, "No one may speak on any subject for more than 10 minutes in total. No one may speak a second time on any subject for longer than five minutes. No one may speak more than twice on any questions unless all others who have not spoken on the question shall have spoken if they desire to do so." Other reminders on speaking procedures can be found in the Moderator's message, beginning on page 44 of the Warrant.

Haddad encourages all residents to come out and vote because it allows the whole town to become involved in town government. "Everyone should participate," he said.

If you have any questions regarding procedures at Town Meeting, please contact Moderator George Marlette at his office (508) 586-2123 or home (781) 383-6809, or see him prior to the start of Town Meeting.

GET WITH THE PROGRAMMABLE
While digital hearing instruments contain a computer-controlled sound processor, programmable hearing instruments possess essentially conventional analog circuits that are set and controlled by a computer. Thus, programmable instruments represent a more advanced technology than conventional instruments and allow a better way to accommodate a patient's given amplification needs. For instance, the amount of gain that a hearing instrument provides at each pitch or frequency is called its frequency response. Some programmable instruments can divide the frequency response into two or more channels of control. Each channel can be adjusted independently so that different advanced signal processing schemes can be applied to each frequency region. This allows the hearing instrument to respond differently to low-pitched sounds than to high-pitched sounds.
In order for you to receive the full benefit of your programmable or other type of hearing aid, our relationship with you merely begins with its fitting. We will also advise you on how to care for it, we'll inspect it periodically to be sure it's operating effectively, and we'll provide repairs and access to batteries and other accessories you may need. In short, we're a full service hearing care center here at FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER, with you, our valued customer, our main concern. We're located at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. PH: 781-337-1144. We accept most HMOs, State GIC, Union Benefits, and Mass Health.
P.S. Programmable hearing instruments better accommodate users with recruitment, which is the perception of sounds getting too loud too fast.

Healthy turnout expected at Saturday's Town Election

Override is on the ballot

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

If you like suspense and going out on Saturday night, hold onto those movie tickets for another week.

Just after 6 p.m., Saturday, April 3 — Town Hall is the place to be when the town election results will start rolling in.

The polls are open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. at Town Hall. With the town's "Accu-Vote" optical scanning system, it doesn't take long for the numbers to be tallied and usually a crowd gathers inside the auditorium by 6:15 p.m. to see who won and who lost.

Town Moderator George Marlette will be on hand to read the results and he likes to wait until all the write-ins are counted.

"I don't remember an election with this much excitement in 25 years," Marlette said. "I'm overwhelmed by the number of people who always vote but have not been involved politically before — with signs endorsing candidates in their yards."

Town Clerk Marion Douglas is estimating 50-55 percent of the town's 5,006 registered voters will participate in the election, but word around town is the turnout might be even higher.

"I don't remember an election with this much excitement in 25 years."
— Town Moderator George Marlette

"That would be fantastic," Douglas said. By Tuesday more than 100 voters had cast absentee ballots. Those who want to vote absentee may do so until noon Friday at the Town Clerk's office.

This year there are four-way contests for two seats on the board of selectmen and school committee, and a two-way race for one seat on the planning board.

There is also an override question on the ballot asking voters to give the town the OK to assess an additional $400,000 in real estate and property taxes to make up a shortfall in the $29.4 million operating budget that was approved at Saturday's session of the annual Town Meeting.

"Town Meeting adopted a budget that requires an override of $400,000," Town Manager Mark Haddad said. "The ballot question has to pass in order to balance the budget."

The override requires a majority vote to pass. If it passes, the override will add 23 cents per $1,000 to the tax rate. The owner of a $600,000 home has a property tax bill of about $7,134 this year. With the override, that bill would increase about $294 to $7,428 — $138 of which would be attributed to the override.

If the override fails the budget will be out of balance by $400,000 and the selectmen will have a couple of options, Haddad explained. He said they can call another Town Meeting before July 1, the start of the new fiscal year, to reduce the budget. If they decide to do this, the selectmen and school committee have agreed to reduce the school budget by 70 percent of the override or $280,000 and the municipal budget by 30 percent or

Town Meeting sticks to the budget script

Attempts to revisit line items fall short

By Samantha Brown

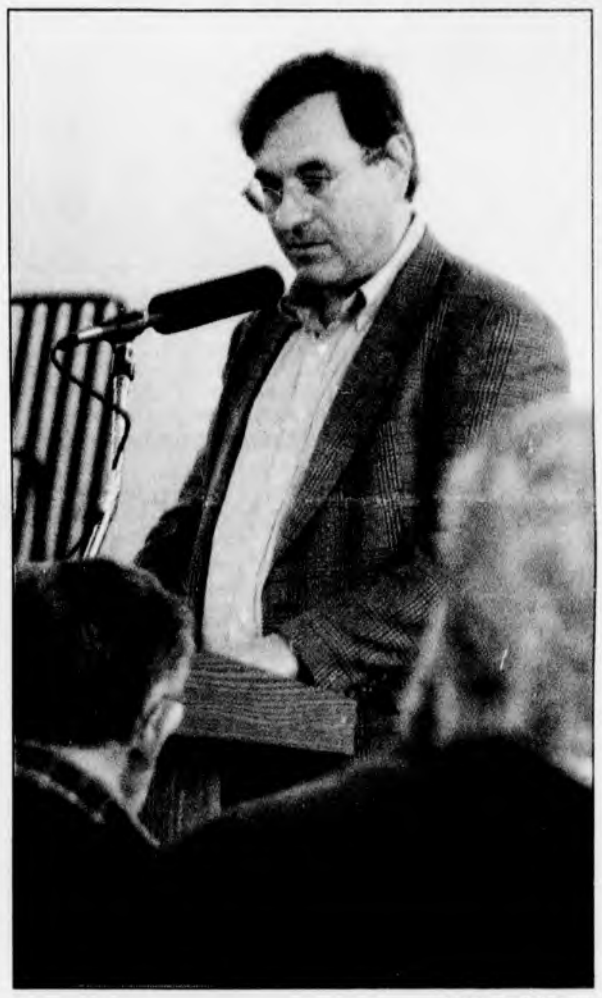
While voters ultimately approved the town's proposed fiscal year 2005 operating budget of $29,378,494 — which includes a Prop 2-1/2 override of $400,000 — it was not without much debate, as three last minute changes were floated at Saturday's Town Meeting.

Although the school committee, board of selectmen, and advisory committee all backed the override, some in attendance were not convinced every alternative had been explored and shared their thoughts on how money could be transferred between departments to help ease the burden on the schools.

The marathon-long budget discussion took up much of Saturday morning – the first session of the annual Town Meeting, which continued Monday night. Over the two sessions, voters tackled some 27 articles ranging from the fiscal year 2005 budget to amending the political sign bylaw to setting the stage to sewer the Little Harbor area.



Alfred Slanetz, 14 Nichols Road, asked to transfer $105,000 from the police department budget to the school budget to retain the three teachers the elementary schools will let go. The teachers are being cut whether or not the override passes at the ballot box. Cutting those teachers, "will raise class size to as many as 26," Slanetz said, adding more than 20 students in a class is above the ideal range. "The only way we as a town can retain these teachers is to shift money," he said.

Slanetz said there has been more than $100,000 spent on overtime and legal expenses in the police budget, "for a current controversy within our police department which seems to have no end in sight." He said by reducing the police budget, it would encourage an amicable settlement between the town and the officers (on administrative leave), as well as save three elementary teachers. "This motion is an attempt to make two wrongs a right," he said.

But Town Manager Mark Haddad said to take $105,000 out of the police department budget would require laying off three officers. Under minimum

¿Dónde está Su Escuela? Aquí, say preschool-age children

Spanish immersion starts with youngest

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Five students sit around a semi-circular table pasting pom-pom noses on paper cut-out clowns. They have yarn for hair and tissue paper for mouths — a typical craft for preschool-age children. However, what is not typical of this scene is that every child around the table has been brought up speaking English, but are all responding in Spanish, and none are over the age of five.

Su Escuela, a Spanish language training center, opened its doors at 152 King St. (Route 3A) in Cohasset in February, and has begun what Director Sandra Baldeón hopes will start a trend on the South Shore. "We invest a lot of time in activities like playing piano, or hockey," but there is an empty space for language which the schools aren't filling at an early age, she said. In Europe, it's very common for children to not only speak two, but sometimes three languages, and Baldeón said there is no reason children on the South Shore shouldn't have the same advantage.

"When a child comes here, they are in another country."
— Sandra Baldeón, Su Escuela

All children are born with the ability to mimic the sounds heard in all languages, Baldeón said. She added, new verbal skills are most easily acquired not by studying the rules of language in a typical classroom setting, but by using practical language in everyday interaction. That is why Su Escuela uses the "mother's method," which focuses on teaching children to effectively communicate in Spanish through play and creative activities, a method which can be started much earlier than lessons in grammar and vocabulary. Through repetition and complete Spanish immersion during their classroom time, children not only learn words they are taught, but are also hearing what it sounds like every time they are told to wash their hands, or sit in their chairs.

This week in COHASSET

Brown helps town get state grants

The Mass. Department of Environmental Protection recently awarded Cohasset and the South Shore Recycling Cooperative two technical assistance grants. Cohasset's grant, requested by Selectman Merle Brown, will allow work to continue on a school chemical clean out and management program. Most chemicals have already been removed from the school labs, shops, art rooms and custodial closets, including 75 lbs. of mercury, so this phase will focus on policies and procedures for their future purchase and management.

The other grant will provide assistance to are towns and event committees in setting up recycling systems at local events. Inspired by the success of the program at the Lowell Folk Festival, South Shore Recycling Cooperative Director Claire Sullivan saw the annual 10-day Marshfield Fair and several other South Shore festivals and fairs as untapped opportunities to divert waste materials, and educate area residents on waste reduction.

The Mass. DEP awarded the 15-town Cooperative up to 100 hours of dedicated staff time through June, plus a subsidy for the purchase of containers and signs. Cohasset Selectman Merle Brown, who is also the Chairman of the SSRC, has requested that resources from this grant be used to set up a recycling program at the Cohasset Festival on the Common Festival in June.

"This grant will provide the South Shore Recycling Cooperative with another opportunity to reach out into the communities and show residents and organizers how to conserve resources at public events," Brown said.

Upcoming meetings

The following meetings were posted at Town Hall this week:

Advisory Committee, April 1, 7 p.m.
Conservation Commission, April 1, 7:30 p.m.
Harbor Committee, April 13, 7 p.m.,
Paul Pratt Library Trustees, April 14, 7 p.m., at the library
Planning Board, April 7, 7 p.m.
Selectman, April 6, 7:30 p.m.
School Committee, April 1, 7 p.m., middle-high school library
Zoning Board of Appeals, April 5, 7:30 p.m.

All meetings are at Town Hall unless indicated otherwise. Call the Town Clerk at 781-383-4100 for updates.

RTF Easter hours

The Recycling Transfer Facility will be closed on Sunday, April 11, in observance of the Easter Holiday.

It will re-open on Wednesday, April 14, the DPW said.

Winter wreaths

Winter wreaths and baskets must be removed from all town owned cemeteries by April 15, the DPW said.

Household hazardous product collection

Cohasset will have a joint hazardous waste collection day with Hull from 9 a.m.-1p.m., June 5 at a location to be announced.

Accepted materials include solvents, gasoline, motor oil mixtures and other automotive fluids, pesticides, photography chemicals, pool chemicals, acids and bases, thermometers, thermostats and poisons. Materials not accepted include industrial waste, radioactive materials, pathological and medical waste, pressurized gas cylinders, auto batteries and explosives. Paint, motor oil, propane tanks, fluorescent lamps and NiCd (rechargeable) batteries are collected regularly by many towns and may not be accepted at some collections. Latex paint is nonhazardous, and may be dried and disposed with trash. Bring chemicals in their original containers or labeled clearly as to their contents. Clean Harbors will conduct the collections.

Residents who turn in a toxic mercury thermometer or other mercury item may swap it for a digital thermometer. Visitors' mercury waste may be disposed but not swapped. Swaps sponsored by American Ref-Fuel at SEMASS of Mass. DEP.

For more detailed information and directions, call the South Shore Recycling Cooperative at 508-785-8318. Claire Sullivan, Solid Waste Planner.

Computer seminar at Norfolk Registry April 12

Register William P. O'Donnell will host an informational seminar on computer assisted land records research at the Registry of Deeds in Dedham from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. on Monday, April 12.

The seminar is intended for both real estate professionals and the general public. The program will include a brief presentation (at 4:30 and again at 5 p.m.), written reference materials, and hands-on exercises. There will be opportunities for both basic and advanced questions and answers.

Computer assisted land records research is available both at the Registry and on the Internet at www.norfolkdeeds.org. "These services have proven valuable tools for our customers, " O'Donnell stated, "and we hope that this seminar will be helpful and informative."

There is no charge for the seminar, but persons planning to attend are asked to register by phone 781-461-6116 or email registerodonnell@norfolkdeeds.org.

Join Us in Electing Rob Spofford

Selectman

"Having worked with Rob on the School Facilities Committee, I can personally attest to his abilities to understand the issues, make difficult decisions and continually demand that the school projects be on time and on budget. We all will be well served by his energy, absolute integrity and love for Cohasset."

David Chase

"Rob has had town committee experience on the school building projects – this is an important connection to town government. I also think the Board of Selectmen needs new blood and that's why I'm voting for Rob Spofford."

Ham Tewksbury

"I am supporting Rob Spofford because of his dedication to excellence in education. Under his leadership our school facilities were designed and constructed with input from the entire community. As an educator, I appreciate the creativity, attention to detail, and progressive thought that went into creating our beautiful learning and community centers on time and on budget."

Healthy turnout expected at Saturday's Town Election

$120,000. Selectmen could also call for a special election to attempt the override again. They could also wait until the fall special town meeting to see what the town's free cash position is and balance the budget at that time before the tax rate is set, Haddad said.

The combination of election contests and an override ballot question usually translates into a higher voter turnout than might otherwise be the case. Last year's election, which featured a three-way race for one seat on the board of selectmen and an override ballot question, drew about 46 percent of the town's registered voters, Douglas said.

Marlette, the town moderator, said he will wait for all votes to be tabulated including write-ins before announcing the results. He could also swear in the winners at that time but would also be willing to attend the respective victory parties to administer the oath of office for the candidates in front of their family and friends.

In the selectman's race, longtime incumbent Merle Brown is seeking a fifth-term and Rob Spofford, Lou Harvey and Ralph Dormitzer are each hoping for their first. Selectman Tom Callahan is not running for reelection.

Incumbent Pat Martin hopes to win a third term on the school committee. She faces competition in the four-way race for two seats from Adrienne MacCarthy, Scott O'Grady and Jamie Williams. School Committee member Mark DeGiacomo is not running for reelection.

Stuart Ivimey and Joe Nedrow are competing for the one-year remaining of a five-year term on the planning board. Chris Ford resigned from the planning board this winter.

In Cohasset, the election is actually a continuation of the annual Town Meeting. At the close of Town Meeting, the moderator adjourns but does not dissolve Town Meeting for the limited purpose of electing the town officers. After the votes are in Saturday night, Marlette will entertain a motion to dissolve Town Meeting.

Marlette said he admires anyone who runs for office. "I have tremendous respect for people who run whether they win or lose," he said. "They are all trying to do something positive."

manning, there have to be at least three officers on each shift. Making cuts would require calling another officer in to cover that position, which would require the town to pay more overtime, he said.

School Committee Chairman Rick Flynn said while his committee appreciated the request, "we're all in this together, and at this time it would not be appropriate for us to take money from other town departments." The amendment, which did not receive support from the school committee, selectmen or advisory board, failed to muster a majority vote at Town Meeting.

Then Roy Fitzsimmons, 116 Doane St., moved to reduce the school department's budget by $400,000, which would eliminate the need for an override. He suggested reducing the superintendent to a half-time position and said there were too many principals. "Do we really need four or five, or do we need two to three?" he asked.

Flynn pointed out the schools currently have three principals, one at Osgood, one at Deer Hill, and one at the middle-high school. He said there is an assistant principal at the middle high school. Flynn added when speaking to representatives from the MMA consulting group, which completed a recent report on the Town Manager form of government, "they were horrified we were able to get by with what we do. We're not fat when it comes to administration." Flynn said when the school committee interviewed candidates for the position of superintendent, some "bowed out" when they found out how little administrative support Cohasset schools have.

Patricia Facey, 4 Woodland Drive, said although she and her husband are both retired, on a fixed income, and have medical expenses not covered by insurance, they support the school budget request. "We moved here 42 years ago because of the school systems," she said, adding many families move here today for the same reason. "If we do not fund our schools, we'll be doing a disservice to the community."

Leonora Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Road, said there is waste in the school budget. She said she heard consolidation efforts, such as bringing the responsibilities of the school business manager under the umbrella of the town director of finance couldn't be accomplished because the business manager also has to run the bus schedule. "What's our busing manager doing?" she asked. Jenkins also said the schools are provided with funding for special education every year. In FY01, there were 237 SPED students, and that number has decreased to 187 this year but, "We're always giving more and more support," she said.

Fitzsimmons' motion to reduce the school department's budget by $400,000 was ultimately defeated by a majority vote of Town Meeting.

While Andrew Quigley, 38 Jerusalem Road, agreed money should be transferred within the budget to cover school costs, he thought Slanetz's motion misidentified the line items that should be cut. Instead, Quigley moved to eliminate the position of a new maintenance person at $40,000, which was an addition to this year's budget in light of the new construction around town and the need to maintain those buildings, and reducing the advisory committee reserve fund by $65,000, which would free up $105,000 to pay the salaries of the three elementary teachers.

"I know the advisory committee would love to have the $65,000 up front, but it's a rainy day fund. It's already a hurricane in the school department," Quigley said. He said the money could be returned in the fall, but the teachers could not, because the school year would be well underway.

Coleman Nee, left, talks with Paul Queenan during Town Meeting while Paul's children, Maggie (4), and Brendan (9), keep themselves entertained with games on the cell phone. Brendan is a student at Osgood, which along with the other schools in town is targeted for cuts should Saturday's override fail.

However, Haddad said once the reserve fund that is supposed to cover unanticipated expenses starts covering line items in the budget, it becomes harder every year to replenish it.

Rob Spofford, 14 Heather Drive, of the School Building Committee, said the reason a maintenance person is so important is because the operating systems for the buildings are technical. The maintenance person will not be someone who sweeps the floors or fixes the lights, but will be someone with a technical background who will work on the computer systems that run the buildings.

Roger Whitley, 11 Cedar Lane, a Paul Pratt Memorial Library trustee, said eliminating the maintenance position will only hurt the library. "We're desperately in need of that maintenance man — none of the trustees are engineers," he said.

Slanetz then chose to amend Quigley's amendment, to take $40,000 out of the legal budget. But Haddad said legal expenses are hard to determine because it's impossible to predict who will sue the town, which is why it is always an issue again at the fall Town Meeting. "We don't know what our legal expenses are going to be. We need to be able to fight the cases," he said, which includes matters pertaining to all town boards. The Slanetz amendment was voted down by a majority vote.

The discussion was then brought back to Quigley's original amendment, which would free up $40,000 from the DPW budget, by eliminating a maintenance person, and $65,000 from the reserve fund.

Leonora Jenkins asked whether there has been any thought given to cutting back on the Metropolitan Council for Educational Opportunity, or METCO program, perhaps by eliminating participation in grades one through five. "It might give those poor METCO children who have to spend so many hours on a bus each day at such a young age a break as well," she said.

Flynn said currently there are 54 METCO students spread throughout the grades. In terms of funding for the program, it has been cut, "but what we get from the METCO program, you can't measure on a dollar basis. METCO brings way more than it takes."

Quigley's motion to eliminate the position of maintenance position at $40,000 and transfer those funds and $65,000 from the reserve fund over to the school department side was voted down, and the original motion for the budget was passed by a two-thirds vote.

Selectman Merle Brown leads off the budget discussion at Saturday's annual Town Meeting.

Voters opt for large houses with a (re)view

Bylaw addition adds new layer to approval process

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

For the past three years, members of the Growth and Development Committee have been trying to present their Large House Plan Review article to voters at Town Meeting. Last Saturday, the committee finally had its chance, and after such a long wait, were rewarded with the adoption of the addition to the zoning bylaw by a two-thirds vote.

The large house site plan review was modeled after a bylaw adopted by the town of Weston. It will ensure any proposals for construction of residential buildings which exceed the greater of 3,500 square feet or 10 percent of the lot area up to 6,000 square feet, will be subject to a review process by the Planning Board. If a home is under the size requirements, the bylaw will have no effect on any building plans. While the original motion included the word "site" the motion presented at Town Meeting was strictly a Large House Plan Review.

The intention of the bylaw is to insure abutters are notified if a "large house," is going to be built in their neighborhood, and that the Planning Board holds a public hearing to air any concerns on both sides.

Rick Swanborg, chairman of the Growth and Development Committee, has been heavily involved in the Master Plan, and said the article was drafted as a response to the overwhelming concern that the town's character needs to be preserved. Some residents refer to the large houses being built in town as "mansionization", and this bylaw would open up a dialogue prior to any construction.

"This will provide a transparent process. It does not allow the Planning Board to stop a large house if it meets all zoning criteria. This is how Boston does it," said Swanborg. He added his committee feels if 3 Jerusalem Lane had gone through a process like the article suggests, the town may have avoided conflict and litigation. Swanborg said currently, even though the town has setbacks from lot lines, without any review, a developer can tear down a house and build a new10,000 square foot house in Zone A.

"Has anyone seen 3 Jerusalem Lane?" he asked. "That's only 6,000 square feet."

The owners of 3 Jerusalem Lane had obtained a building permit and construction was 80 percent complete, when they were ordered by the ZBA to stop work on their home. Neighbors had complained that Building Inspector Robert Egan had erred in issuing a building permit without the homeowners first obtaining a special permit because they were building on a non-conforming lot, and the ZBA agreed. However, the ZBA did eventually issue the homeowners a special permit.

Those living near 3 Jerusalem Lane seemed to be in favor of the article. Steve Daly, 322 Jerusalem Road, said he has been living "in the shadow" of the home, and said the Growth and Development Committee has been working hard over the past three years to "protect our property." He believes the bylaw will provide a forum that will allow both sides of housing issues to be brought to the table, and people will be involved in a forum "that treats others as we would like to be treated."

However, Don Evans, 72 North Main St., didn't think the article was fair because it singles out homes of a particular size. "If a neighbor is building a house next to you, whether large or small, you may be just as interested," he said; but that doesn't mean it makes it right to judge a home by its size. "We usually don't judge by the size of our pocketbooks."

Wayne Sawchuk, 432 Beechwood St., had a different concern with the article, which was shared by many in attendance. He said he was very concerned with the changes to the article up to the last minute. Because the Warrant, which was mailed two weeks prior to Town Meeting, was completely different from what residents were expected to vote on, "What was the sense of mailing something out two weeks ago if you're going to have us vote on something completely different? We can't possibly digest this in 30 minutes," he said, and many in the audience applauded.

Bob Sturdy, 270 Jerusalem Road, a member of the Planning Board, said he apologized for the fact that, "The article is totally different from the Warrant," as printed. He said his board originally recommended indefinite postponement, but the other boards didn't go along with it. "We were forced to make changes we were OK with, right up practically to this morning," he said. As re-written, the article is only advisory and leaves the ultimate decision whether to issue a building permit up to the building inspector.

Tucker Glavin, 107 Nichols Road, said he too "was shocked" to hear the article had been changed at such a late date, and called Growth and Development Committee member Mark DeGiacomo to ask him about the article. He said after speaking to DeGiacomo at length, he still didn't agree with the article. He said it doesn't make sense to have a board responsible for a process the building inspector should handle. "It sounds like we're only doing it because with all due respect, there was a mistake by the building inspector," he said.

Woody Chittick, 98 South Main St., the chairman of the Zoning Board, said the article doesn't take any of the building inspector's responsibility away, but will give him more information.

Firearms license added to Article 26

Article 26 was adopted unanimously at Monday night's session of Town Meeting, but not without a small amendment. Because the article allows town officials to deny, revoke or suspend most licenses and permits when the applicant or landlord's fees, taxes, or other municipal charges remain unpaid for more than 12 months, one resident was concerned whether that applies to firearms permits as well.

Kevin O'Donnell, 248 King St., said if someone has a firearm permit and it is revoked and the person is not properly notified, that could result in jail time. "I think the article serves a good purpose," he said, but added the penalty for carrying a firearm after a permit has been revoked is a year in jail. Because there were some exceptions made where fishing, hunting, and trapping licenses are concerned, O'Donnell thought it made sense to include firearms permits as well.

on april 3rd vote pat martin for school committee

Your impression on town meeting?

"...as a school committee member, I was grateful town meeting put the needs of the school on the ballot... people understood what all of us in town government went through to present this budget... it may be complex but this is an open, transparent, painstaking, 6-month process with a single focus... to get the best and the most for our tax dollars... we used a whole-town perspective and everyone could see the cooperation that went into the process.

...as a parent, I support the override because I've seen first hand that there is great care taken with the taxpayers money balanced against the demands to maintain quality education, protect our new facilities and continue needed town services."

Now what?

"...after the election, the work of the school committee continues... we've begun to look ahead to the next fiscal year and to anticipate new challenges.... on one hand the district has been re-tooled for the 21st century with new facilities... on the other hand, there will be on-going issues of shrinking state aid and increasing enrollment to deal with...

...I want to continue on the things I've started. transportation efficiencies, business partnerships, modified start time... I've been on the committee for six years... I want to keep working.

I'm proud to live in a town that puts such emphasis and priority on education... the residents of Cohasset get it... they want their representatives to keep their children at the center of the debate and yet manage their resources to the highest and best use."

What would you improve?

"...for me, it would be the tenor of the debate and the level of community participation... for instance, it's been suggested that as budgets have risen, 10th grade MCAS scores have fallen, when in fact our educators predicted this outcome when we were forced to begin cutting reading specialists three years ago... or that the budget process is a mystery and hidden dollars are waiting to be discovered...

...the truth is we need all the people we can get throughout the year... we need second opinions, not second guessing only during the campaign season...

I'd like to institute a stronger community outreach component so those with ideas and solutions can feel welcome and can participate at any time."

What have you learned?

"...that town government is very different from big time politics... the people who serve in Cohasset have a personal stake in the work they do... they want what we all want, the best for all our children and responsible oversight of our money...

...If I'm lucky enough to be re-elected for the third time, I will continue to champion the best possible education for our kids and the on-going maintenance of the town's investment... I understand what this means to everybody in this town and the responsibility and commitment that travels with the job..."

Prospect for 40-year water sale dries up

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

While the Water Commission has a signed contract to sell water to the Linden Ponds development in Hingham for the next 20 years, an article which would have allowed a contract for the sale of water to be increased to 40 years was indefinitely postponed at Monday night's session of Town Meeting.

After much discussion, Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt moved the article be indefinitely postponed, as many questions had been raised by residents at the meeting, which hadn't been previously considered.

"The last 45 minutes brought up a lot of issues we hadn't thought of until now," said Pratt, adding the only prudent option for the board would be to postpone any decision making until a later date.

In 1998, Town Meeting adopted an article which gave the Water Commission the ability to sell water out of town. However, some residents think over the years, the Water Commission has been given too much jurisdiction over the sale of water, and want to see the decisions put back into the hands of the voters.

Gary Vanderweil, 500 Jerusalem Road, said while he thinks the Water Commission has done a phenomenal job, especially with its coordinating the land purchases that will protect the water supply, he said he didn't like the article because it gives the board too much authority. He suggested amending the motion to include Town Meeting approval for any contracts signed. "We need to return environmental and economic policy making to the town rather than leave it up to three men on the Water Commission," he said. As proposed, he felt the motion gave, "carte blanche to allow Cohasset to give water to any town who needs it. It's our only natural resource," he said, and felt the decision to give that resource away should be made by the residents.

"This is way beyond reasonable," Vanderweil added, and said the town, should be limited to providing water only in emergency situations for other towns that have a water shortage. While he is not against the town's selling water, he said he would rather see a town like Brockton, "which has a dire water shortage," benefit from the resources Cohasset has, rather than Hingham which has no shortage.

Water Commissioner John McNabb said the town essentially already approved what this year's article is trying to achieve, by allowing the commission to sell water to private entities out of town in 1998. He said by coming to Town Meeting with the article this year, the commission is seeking out the town's approval for the 40-year contract, and the decision is ultimately in the hands of voters.

Roger Lowe looks over a map diagramming where Cohasset's drinking water comes from before heading into the Sullivan gymnasium for the annual Town Meeting on Saturday.

Julie Guild, 365 Jerusalem Road, said she was more concerned with the length of the contract, and whether the town could get out of it should a water problem arise. She asked what would happen if there ever was a drought, and would the revenue which was brought in be worth risking having no water.

Water Commissioner Rob Kasameyer said a drought is highly unlikely because of the amount of water the town has. "Right now, Cohasset residents use 710 gallons a day, on average. Some days it's more, some days it's less," he said. Based on figures given by the Department of Environmental Protection, he said Cohasset is able to safely pump 5.2 million gallons a day, which is seven times what the town needs. "It's a significant excess," he said.

Kasameyer added he believes the town could run for two years on the water it has. He said the last time Cohasset had a water restriction was back in the mid 1990s, and the restriction was due to a distribution problem, not a lack of water. "If there is no rain for a year and a half to two years, we'll still be able to operate," he said.

Kasameyer added while the amount of revenue will vary from year to year depending on how much water is used, he expects the town will receive $600,000, or 38 percent more revenue annually.

McNabb said it is not uncommon for towns to sell water across their borders, and because the town has an abundant resource, to sell part of it will generate more revenue and keep Cohasset water rates down. "You've got to think of this as a good thing," he said.

While some residents shared Guild's concerns about the length of the contract, the overriding concern was the authority it would give the commission. Robin Lawrence, 15 Beach St., said giving the power to any committee when it should be in the hands of the people is a real issue and he would not support the article for that reason.

Pratt said if Vanderweil would withdraw his motion, the Water Commission would move to indefinitely postpone the article, and would try to work with him to come up with a plan that would be more accepted by the town. Although Vanderweil said he would not withdraw his motion, ultimately voters decided it was best to indefinitely postpone any decisions.

McNabb said the decision at Town Meeting will not affect the 20 year contract the Water Commission currently has with Linden Ponds, and the board will talk about how to move forward at their meeting tonight.

Stage set for large land purchase

The town is well on its way to acquiring a significant amount of land which will help protect the quality of water in Cohasset as well as preserve open space, as Articles 13,14, 15, 16, 18 were all adopted unanimously at Monday night's session of town meeting.

Article 13 authorized the town to purchase 70 acres of open land in the Brass Kettle Brook watershed, which is a direct tributary to Lily Pond, and will allow the town to protect open space. However, before it passed, Wayne Sawchuk, 432 Beechwood St., and an owner of one of the parcels of property the town is trying to acquire, made a plea for the current landowners. He said while there is a general willingness of the current landowners to work with the town, he was chosen as a representative for the collective group, to explain the affects this article will have on them. One current landowner has a piece of property that has been passed down for at least four generations and he would like to keep it in the family. While he had always hoped to retire in a home built on his land, Sawchuk said by adopting the article, it will be taken by eminent domain.

Article 14 authorized the town to purchase roughly 58 acres in the Lily Pond watershed and the Aaron River Reservoir, contiguous to the 70 acres of land in the Brass Kettle Brook watershed, which will also help protect the town's drinking water supply.

Article 15 allowed the town to accept a donation six acres of land, donated by the Wheelwright family.

Article 16 authorized the town to acquire a public way known as "Old Road" which was laid out in the 1670s and has never been paved. Because it could be used in the future as a way into the land the town acquired in the previous articles, the Water Commission felt it was better to acquire it and ensure it was never developed.

Article 18 allowed the town to borrow a total of $20,880,000 at 2 percent interest through the State Revolving Fund program, to rehabilitate 10 miles of the water distribution system, upgrade the Lily Pond treatment plant, and reactivate both the Ellms Meadow and Sohier Street wellfields. Water Commissioner John McNabb said the article would save the town between $3 million and $4 million in borrowers fees over the next 20 years, which is the term of the loans.

Legal fees spark debate on first day of Town Meeting

Police matter expenses surface

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

Money is always a huge issue at Town Meeting and this year was no exception. But most of the money articles or items of business have to do with anticipated spending if fiscal year 2005, which starts July 1.

But a $500,000 request to cover a shortfall in various town departments — although ultimately approved by the voters — caused a bit of an uproar during Saturday's session.

Of the $1/2 million request — the $125,000 deficit in legal fees caused the most consternation.

Selectman Michael Sullivan explained the excess legal expenses covered various cases, including the Avalon and Cedarmere lawsuits, and the ongoing police hearings.

Currently the Water Commission is appealing the Zoning Board of Appeals' decision to grant the 200-unit Avalon project a comprehensive permit, and developers of the proposed 105-unit Cedarmere project are appealing the Sewer Commission's decision to deny the project access to the town sewer lines.

However, legal fees surrounding police matter caught the most attention.

Since Oct. 20, two Cohasset police officers have been on paid administrative leave, pending the outcome of an investigation into alleged misconduct. The town has been paying the two officers not to work, as well as police overtime during the disciplinary hearings, Town Counsel's legal bills, the cost of the private investigator, and the cost of a court reporter.

Andrew Quigley, 38 Jerusalem Road, asked how much of the $125,000 legal bill was directly related to the police issue, and Sullivan said roughly $100,000, which includes all bills to date. Sullivan said there will hopefully be very little added to that amount, as the town and the two officers have agreed to a cooling-off period, during which the parties will attempt to resolve their employment disputes through a structured mediation process. The hearings have been suspended for 45 days. [Andrew Quigley is no relation to Sgt. William Quigley, one of the officers].

When asked about who hired the private investigator, Sullivan said while the board was involved, the Town Manager has the overriding authority to hire. Sullivan said the board did not vote on the matter.

"Town Counsel hired the investigator and we were aware of that," he said, adding the selectmen appointed Town Counsel and the board utilizes his expertise. If Town Counsel feels it is appropriate, he can recommend another attorney in his firm with a particular expertise for a case, or hire outside help when necessary, Sullivan explained.

Quigley asked why the discussion hadn't been conducted in the open, to which Sullivan said some business had to be conducted in executive session because it involved a legal issue. Sullivan also said any legal strategy and legal decisions about strategy involve the Board of Selectmen, and executive sessions for that purpose are permitted under the Open Meeting Law. However, Quigley said at the point the investigator was hired, there had been no lawsuit filed, and at that time there was no need for an executive session.

"I think Mark has been a very good Town Manager, and the Selectmen have done a wonderful job," Quigley said, but he felt the citizens of the town should not be asked to pay for a process that has been "botched from the beginning." He added it would only be appropriate to vote down the legal expense line item. "We need to give the message to Town Counsel that it was bad advice," he said.

Andrew Quigley, 38 Jerusalem Road, asked how much of the $125,000 legal bill was directly related to the police issue, and Sullivan said roughly $100,000, which includes all bills to date.

Town Manager Mark Haddad talks about the rationale behind the town's budget's recommendations at Saturday's session of Town Meeting at the middle-high school.

However, Stuart Ivimey, 7 Sankey Road, said as an attorney, he realizes the town has been billed for services rendered, and "It's unfair to send a message to a law firm," rather than the board that took his advice. "It's simply wrong not to pay the bill."

Overtime costs

In addition to the $125,000 in legal fees, the police and fire departments had a combined overtime shortfall of $135,000. While the fire department has an overtime shortfall of $75,000, which is greater than the $60,000 shortfall for police, some residents saw the police overtime figure as having a direct correlation to the ongoing police matter. "We should be negotiating and not litigating," said Lee Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Road.

Sullivan said the overtime at the police department has not been solely related to the controversy, as there have been three police officers out with injuries in addition to the two officers on paid administrative leave. He added the fire department currently has four members out. "We haven't had a very lucky year in terms of injuries," he said.

Sullivan pointed out the positives in the budget request in the article, as part of the Board of Selectmen expenses were related to the Cook Estate. "We'll own it for about an hour, and in that hour, we'll gain about $925,000, as well as get a senior housing project for the community," he said. "We're clearly going to get back for what we expend." [The town plans simultaneous closings with the Cook heirs, the developer and the town].

Tom Gruber, 8 Pratt Court, asked how the $900,000 for the Cook Estate will figure into the budget, and if it could be used to help offset the override in any way. Sullivan said because the town does not have the money yet, and will not have it in hand until the closing in October, any potential use is only speculation at this time.

Demolition delay bylaw razed

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A proposed bylaw that would discourage the demolition of historic buildings in town didn't pass muster with Town Meeting voters, who opted to shelve the measure.

Although proponent Noel Ripley of the Cohasset Historical Commission, which sponsored the article, assured those in attendance the bylaw would only protect structures of historic, cultural or architectural significance — some were concerned its scope was too broad.

Julie Guild, 265 Jerusalem Road, questioned whether the bylaw that sought to protect buildings 50 years or older included too many structures and suggested 75 years or older be used.

"Fifty years is not that long," she said. "It includes raised ranches and split levels."

Ripley said a majority of the houses 50-years-old would not be protected but a few like the Walter Gropius House off Atlantic Avenue, which is listed on the National Register, would be.

Lee Jenkins, 198 Jerusalem Road, said protected homes need to be compiled on a list so it is clear which homes would be protected by the bylaw.

But Planning Board member Peter Pratt said it would be a shame to lose some homes with significant architectural styles, such as those designed by noted architect Royal Barry Wills, while a list is compiled — a time-consuming process.

Chartis Tebbetts, 9 Jerusalem Road Drive, questioned who would determine whether a house was historically significant and how that might affect the sale of a small house with a water view.

"A deck house was recently demolished between Little Harbor and the ocean and many felt is was a shame to see it go down," she said. "It was unique and had some architectural significance to some people."

Her husband Ned Tebbetts said because, in some cases, land is worth much more than the house, the bylaw could affect the value of an estate left to heirs.

Again Ripley stressed that qualifying structures would have to be associated with an important or famous architect or builder, be historically or architecturally significant to qualify to protection under the bylaw.

If adopted, the general bylaw would have required a home-rule petition from the Legislature to clarify the roles of the historical commission and the building inspector, who issues demolition permits.. A home rule petition would not have been be difficult to obtain, officials said. But ultimately voters decided to indefinitely postpone the article.

About 100 towns in the state have demolition delay bylaws, Ripley said.

Sunsets on Senior Overlay

The Senior Overlay District bylaw has been amended so it "sunsets" when the total number of multi-family homes in town reaches 15 not 20 percent, as it was initially drafted.

To encourage the development of housing for senior citizens, the Senior Overlay permits more density for projects limited to those 55-and-older than would otherwise be allowed by existing zoning.

When the bylaw was passed in the fall of 2002, voters thought multi-family meant two or more units but it has subsequently been determined multi-family means at least three units in a building which expands the number of units allowed under the bylaw.

"We don't want to get too much of a good thing and need to set the cap in the bylaw at 15 percent," Planning Board member Peter Pratt said, adding the Cook Estate senior housing project would be exempt from the new count.

Cedarmere, another senior housing project, would be grandfathered if it prevails, Selectman Tom Callahan said.

The change means a reduction of 144 potential units in town.

The bylaw change does not affect the cluster development bylaw and therefore would not preclude a complex like 100 Pond St. from being developed down the road, Pratt said.

Stage set for sewer extension

Engineering and cost estimates will move forward on the proposed 450-home Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue sewer extension thanks to $100,000 appropriated at Town Meeting. The town is under a court order to solve its wastewater woes that include solving the pollution problems in the Little Harbor area and along part of Atlantic Avenue. The project that would include expanding the capacity of the sewer treatment plant off Elm Street from 300,000 to 450,000 gallons per day within its existing footprint is estimated to cost $10 million. The timetable includes constructing the sewer in 2007-08 and hooking the homes up the following year. The cost of the project would be repaid to the town through sewer revenues, Sewer Commission Chairman Ray Kasperowicz said.

When asked, Kasperowicz would not speculate if the taxpayers would be asked to pay 50 percent, as it did with the North Cohasset and Central Cohasset sewer extension projects.

He said sewer capacity would be reserved for existing homes.

Community Preservation Fund commitments

Voters OK'ed monies from the Community Preservation Fund to pay for the repair of drainage problems at Alumni Field ($98,500); about $80,000 for new appliances, locks and security systems at 60 Elm St., the affordable senior housing project behind the police/fire station; and $15,000 toward the construction of a new $120,000 community playground behind the new Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The rest of the money for the playground is being raised privately. Community Preservation Committee chairman Stuart Ivimey said the playground would be controlled by the town and constructed of low-maintenance synthetic material. It would also not increase the amount of money the town spends on insurance, he said.

No override could mean severe cuts

By Samantha Brown
SAMBROWN@CNC.COM

"These are just recommendations."
— Town Manager Mark Haddad

While the town may have adopted a budget which includes a $400,000 override, that doesn't mean voters will ultimately give their approval at the ballot box this weekend. While there has been much discussion surrounding the major cuts the school department will have to make to come up with its 70 percent share, or $280,000, Town Manager Mark Haddad said his recommendations could be just as devastating for the town's side.

To make up the town's $120,000 share should the override fail, Haddad said he will recommend eliminating one position on the Department of Public Works at $35,000. He said currently, he is not sure which branch of the DPW will be affected.

Haddad floated the elimination of the call fire firefighters, who respond on an as-needed basis, which would free up another $15,000 in the budget, as well as the Conservation Commission's consultant at $25,000. However, Haddad said after speaking to Paul Shea and Debbie Cook of the Conservation Commission, they said the loss of their consultant would be disastrous and would take their commission back 10 years.

Haddad also said the special summer police officers might be cut, which would yield $14,000. Those officers patrol on bicycles near the beach, harbor and bridges.

The suggestion that caused the most distress for the Board of Selectmen is the proposed $29,000 cut to the library budget. If that cut is made, it will cause the Paul Pratt Memorial Library to have to cut back its hours, and it will lose its Old Colony Library Network accreditation, which allows it to be a part of the 27 member library association. Residents who have an OCLN card in Cohasset can use the services of any other OCLN library on the South Shore.

"These are just recommendations," Haddad said, but added these are decisions the board will need to start thinking about.

On the school side, making up $280,000 will not be easy. While nothing has been set in stone, there has been talk about turning to the athletic budget or cutting additional teachers. While it is still not clear whether teacher reductions would come in the form of classroom teachers or specialists, the School Committee said either way, it will greatly impact the schools.

Each of the three principals has also come up with lists which recommend possible cuts that could be made, which would allow the schools to still function, although services would be reduced.

With or without the override, the School Committee has already reduced its budget significantly, by taking three elementary teachers off staff, eliminating the middle school athletic program, eliminating the position of director of physical education and health, eliminating a special education aide, eliminating one custodial position, reducing the curriculum director position from a full to half-time position, reducing the full time business manager position to a half-time clerk, and it has not given salary increases to any administrators.

The polls will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. this Saturday, April 3 at Town Hall.

BIRTHDAY WISHES

A special birthday wish to a wonderful young lady. Happy 14th birthday to Jessica Yourell from her parents, brother Jimmy, sister Jacqlyn and grandparents Ruth Yourell of Hingham and Margaret DeCouto of Cohasset.

PARENTING TEENS WORKSHOP

Parents of pre-teens and teens — whether happy and healthy, somewhat troubled, or somewhere in-between —are invited to attend a special two-part evening workshop: "Raising Teens" being held on Tues, April 6 & Tues, April 13 from 7 - 9pm at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Eve Sullivan, a popular speaker affiliated with the Parents' Forum in Cambridge, will lead the seminar. "Raising Teens" will address the strong feelings and inevitable conflicts that arise in parenting adolescents. The workshops help participants assess their parenting skills and offer immediately relevant information on habits of communication and conflict-resolution skills.

This seminar is sponsored by Project Safeguard, a non-profit community group that includes parent volunteers, health education professionals, clergy, and representatives from the PSO and the Cohasset Public Schools. Reservations should be made in advance by mailing a check for $20, made payable to "Project Safeguard," to: Project Safeguard, c/o Cohasset Middle/High School, 143 Pond St., Cohasset 02025. (This is a sliding scale fee based on ability to pay; you may pay a reduced amount or confidentially request the fee to be waived.) For more information, call 781-383-6190. Hope to see you there!

APPALACHIAN FESTIVAL

Cohasset ASP's fourth annual Appalachian Festival & Bluegrass Concert will be held on Saturday, April 3, at Cohasset Middle High School (143 Pond St.). This fun fundraiser includes a southern family-style dinner at 6 p.m. followed by an Appalachian Marketplace featuring a slide show, special Appalachian crafts, a quilt raffle and dessert. The festival concludes with a foot stompin', hand clappin' Blue Grass concert featuring local favorite: "Quarter Moon." Please buy your tickets in advance at St. Anthony's, St. Stephen's, First Parish or Second Congregational Churches, Buttonwood Bookstore or the Front Street Book Shop in Scituate Harbor. Tickets for the dinner and concert are just $20/adult and $8/child — with a family maximum of $50. For those interested in just the marketplace, concert and dessert (starting around 7:15 p.m.), tickets are just $10/adult and kids are free. For more information visit www.CohassetASP.org

RELAY FOR LIFE MEETING

A Relay For Life Team Captain meeting is taking place on Wednesday, April 7 at 6:30 p.m. in the Cohasset HS cafeteria. New teams are always welcome so we encourage anyone who is interested in forming a team to come to this meeting next week.

DEAN'S LIST

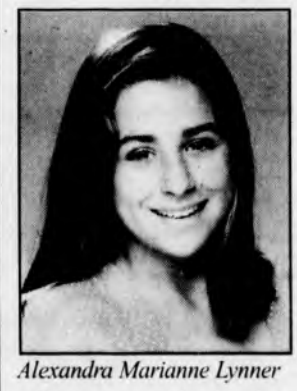
Nicholas A. Lavigne and John Considine, both of Cohasset, have achieved dean's list status at Westfield State College for the fall 2003 semester. Nicholas is an art major and John is majoring in sociology. Nice work gentlemen!

THAYER HONORS

The following Cohasset students who are attending Thayer Academy Middle School achieved academic honors: Leigh C. Collins, 6th grade, earned Honors in achievement; and Anna E. Blanken, 7th grade, earned High Honors in achievement and High Honors in effort. Congratulations to both of you on this recognition.

BUTTONWOOD BOOK FAIR

Deer Hill's annual spring Book Fair, featuring a selection of books from Buttonwoods, kicks off today, Thursday, April 1, and continues through Wednesday, April 7. Students will attend the fair during their regular library class time. Parents may attend with them, or visit the fair anytime during school hours. All proceeds will support the Deer Hill School Library.



PRINCIPAL'S LIST

The following students were named to the Principal's List at St. Paul's School in Hingham: Thomas Chase - Grade 8 - son of Mark and Laura Chase; Eric Vanderpool - Grade 7 - son of John and Gerry Vanderpool; and Katherine French - Grade 6 - daughter of Jim and Donna French. Great job to the three of you!

Annual Kitchen Tour is Friday, April 2

The South Shore Community Center is sponsoring a tour of some of the most unique kitchens in Cohasset on Friday, April 2, from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. Each of this year's six kitchens reflects the many options available to homeowners when planning or decorating a kitchen. Added to this will be the artistry of the homeowners or design professionals who will offer table settings in the kitchens and dining areas of each home. Hors d'oeuvres, finger sandwiches, pastries and sweets prepared by some of the area's best-loved caterers, restaurants, and bakeries will be available at reach of the homes and at the Community Center.

Advanced tickets may be purchased at the Center at 3 North Main St., or by calling 781-383-0088. Tickets are $25 when purchased before April 1, and will be $30 the day of the Kitchen Tour.

Funds from the Kitchen Tour 2004 will be used to support the programs of the South Shore Community Center.

The Center is a non-profit organization dedicated to a wide range of educational and enrichment programs from infants to seniors.

Lauren Koncius, shown here with her dog Tucker, will host one of the stops on this year's Kitchen Tour to benefit the South Shore Community Center.

KITCHEN TOUR

Anyone who is interested in the South Shore Community Center's Kitchen Tour 2004, being held tomorrow, Friday April 2 from 10:30 a.m.-3 p.m. should call 781-383-0088 to find out the availability of tickets.

If you call today, the tickets are $25 and you may also buy them at the door for $30. The ticket allows you to visit six fabulously unique kitchens and homes in Cohasset that have been designed by professional interior designers and homeowners, taste some yummy foods throughout the tour and welcome spring in with this yearly tradition. This is a big hit every year and if their are still any available tickets, try to take this one in.

MAINTAINING RESPECT

Don't forget to come and vote this Saturday, April 3 at the Town Hall. Everyone has an opinion and the voting rights are yours if you wish to use those rights. One thing I want to mention is that even though we all have our own opinions as to what should or should not happen in our town, with our schools etc. we al l need to remember that after the voting is said and done, we are all still here in this town with each other. It seems that when people start to share their views and they are not exactly the same views as someone else's, we forget to remember that the other person is still a neighbor, friend or a member in this town. Life goes on when all is said and done and whether your issues win or lose, you still would like to have people to be friendly with you or at least I would. It is a wonderful thing to be able to share and have the right to your opinions, thoughts and ideas and it is even a better thing to be able to share all of those in a way that people respect.

That is all for this week. Make sure to have all your items to me no later than Monday afternoon by 5 p.m.

The Cohasset Fire Department Advanced Life Support Service

To the Citizens of Cohasset,

The residents and visitors of Cohasset should feel comfortable and secure with the high standard of care that our Paramedic Service is providing. At the recent candidate's night Ralph Dormitzer, candidate for Selectman, expressed his opinion that the Town of Cohasset would have been better served by a hospital based Advanced Life Support system and questioned the competency of your present Paramedics.

To this concern we provide the following educational points:

- The Paramedics of the Cohasset Fire Department have an average of 6.2 years of experience in Advanced Life Support Emergency Medicine
- Our Paramedics are currently working in Emergency 911 Advanced Life Support Medical systems statewide such as: Boston, Brockton, Quincy, Everett, Chelsea, Taunton, Weymouth, Malden, Brookline, Newton, Waltham and Dedham
- All our Paramedics have completed thousands of hours of instruction and practical training and are certified through the State Office of Emergency Medical Services
- Through our affiliation agreement with South Shore Hospital all of our Paramedics receive training from the physicians of the emergency department on a regular basis
- Our Paramedics have received training in Advanced Cardiac Life Support, Pediatric Advanced Life Support, Neo-Natal Advanced Life Support and are highly trained in Advanced Airway Management procedures. In addition, many of our Paramedics hold Instructor-level Certifications in these disciplines and teach them to health care professionals on a regular basis

The Town of Cohasset thoroughly investigated the options and benefits of community based Advanced Life Support versus hospital based Advanced Life Support and then decided on the present system. Additional benefits to the citizens that are provided by your Firefighter-Paramedics:

- Massachusetts Firefighting Academy trained and certified
- Rapid Advanced Life Support response times
- Familiarity with the residents and intricate knowledge of the town
- Tripled the revenue the town receives through billing for ambulance services to more than $300,000 annually
- Secured $77,166 Federal Grant Funding for Homeland Security and Defense
- Dedicated career professionals

We strive to continually improve this critical service and would like to thank Chief Lincoln, the present Selectmen, Town Manager, Town Officials, and all who have supported us in our efforts. We encourage anyone who has experienced the care provided by your Paramedics to contact all the candidates. If you have any questions, feel free to call us (781) 383-0616 or drop by the station at 44 Elm Street.

Thank You,
Cohasset Professional Firefighters, Local 2804

Comfort level

Saturday's election is one of the most heated in recent memory. We've covered many tough override fights before – whether for general overrides like Saturday's $400,000 ballot question or debt exclusion votes for school buildings or sewer projects.

But this year's election isn't just about raising your taxes. It's also about deciding who can best represent you at Town Hall on the board of selectmen and planning board, and at the school department on the school committee.

We urge you to think carefully about your vote and decide which candidates you are the most comfortable with.

As reporters we cover endless hours of meetings during which we listen while jotting down notes in front of various town boards that are seated at a large desk or table. It can be intimidating sitting in front of a board, asking questions and getting the straight scoop about what's going on. But that's part of our job, we're used to trying to get information even when it's not popular for us to do so. We take our job as the eyes and ears of the public seriously.

We always think government should be open and accessible. We think town officials should always err on the side of the public's right to know. We think documents, correspondence and reports should be readily available, even in draft form. We're sticklers for both the Public Records and Open Meeting laws.

Because we're so close to Town Hall and the school department, it's not always easy for us to judge what you think and how you feel about your government. But we do know that you shouldn't feel the least bit uncomfortable calling any elected town or school official at home, even at dinnertime or on a weekend; attending a meeting; or going to town hall with an issue, question or a complaint.

No one forces anyone to run for office and although bureaucracy can be a bear, you — the members of the public — need to ensure that your government is approachable and welcoming.

For the record, we know and personally like all the candidates for selectmen, school committee and planning board. We're familiar with their records, we've seen them in action, listened to them on the campaign trail, and we respect their willingness to volunteer long hours for what can often be a great big headache. We think each one is passionate about the quality of life in Cohasset and wants to do what's best for the town, schools and you, the citizens. It's a tough choice.

Cohasset is on the brink of change. With large multi-unit housing projects on the horizon the town is faced with unprecedented growth.

Overrides — and we agree this one is needed — could be on the verge of becoming annual events. Yearly overrides are not good for the town because override battles tend to be divisive and property taxes are getting more and more onerous. We've followed all the meetings and listened to discussion about this year's override. We know selectmen put Question One the ballot only after coming to the conclusion there was little alternative.

Your vote Saturday is important. It will take intelligence, courage and a good dose of commonsense to lead our town over the next decade. Think hard about which candidates you think have the right mix of experience, determination, energy and conviction to make a difference. Casting an informed vote is your responsibility.

Cohasset Democrats launch new website

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee officially announced the unveiling of its new, redesigned website. The site, located at www.cohasset-dems.org, will provide information on the Massachusetts Democratic Party, as well as upcoming events, contact data for elected officials, candidate information, The Chairman's Message, news sources, links to related sites and a photo album of recent Democratic events.

In addition, the site will also feature links to a Web Log and Town Bulletin Board for all citizens of Cohasset to post messages and read local opinions on a variety of topics and current events.

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee is comprised of registered Democrats in the town of Cohasset. Its mission is to work to promote the ideals and platform of the Massachusetts Democratic Party, recruit candidates and volunteers, and to help elect Democrats to public office. Persons interested in joining the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee should contact Agnes McCann at 781-383-0222.

Override is in town's interest

TO THE EDITOR

In the 70s, I taught high school science, spending the last four years in Hingham. I left teaching to work in product development at Gillette. I left a Step 5 / Master's position making $13,500 a year for a Senior Chemist's job making $17,000 a year – about a 25 percent raise for me.

Today in Cohasset a Step 5 / Master's teacher makes $43,215. According to the American Chemical Society, the average Master's degree Chemist in New England made $67,000 in 2001– a difference of 55 percent, which is probably even higher now. Looking only at the relative difference, the salary gap between teaching and industry grew by more than double.

We could perform similar comparisons with Cohasset and other occupations — I used chemists because that was the employment choice I had to make at the time. The point of this illustration is to raise a few questions: have shave cream chemists become proportionately more valuable to society than teachers? Are teachers less vital to a quality education than they were? Is the educational program we have come to expect and depend on in Cohasset, worth less today than it was in the past?

The town of Cohasset now faces an override for the schools. This override won't do anything to close the widening salary gap I described. Hopefully, it can keep the compromises to school programs to a minimum. We elected our School Committee to make tough choices, and our Selectmen and Advisory Board to challenge those choices. Based on countless hours of discussion and debate, those three boards are unanimous in supporting the override. That recommendation comes after carefully considering the impact of higher taxes on the citizens of the town.

There is no question that these tax increases are a real hardship for some and difficult for others. The alternative, however, is to lose one of the strongest forces maintaining the value of our homes: the quality of Cohasset Schools. Hard as this override may be, it is truly in the best interests of Cohasset.

'Sponsor' an island

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter was sent to selectmen.

I only became aware of the "Adopt an Island" program in Cohasset as a result of the recent press coverage dedicated to the trees at the intersection of North Main Street and Joy Place. I have confidence that all parties concerned will reach an equitable solution to the issues that were raised...well taken down really, at that particular location. However, I do feel that I must voice a concern with regard to the "Adopt an Island" program itself, with which I agree whole heartily in theory, if not in name.

I am mother of a 10-year-old daughter who was joyfully welcomed into our family through the process of adoption. Over the years I have glanced uneasily at signs designating "Adopt a Highway" and "Adopt an Intersection," but it was not until last summer, when my daughter read one if the signs in another town and questioned the wording, that I was forced to contemplate their meaning specifically she, asked: "Mom, why do they call it that? It's not the same."

She is right. The definition of adoption: "To take into one's family and raise as one's own child," is full of dry words that cannot describe the love, caring and all encompassing fulfillment brought on by the act of absorbing a child into a family. And while certainly the word is used in other ways, such as in "adopting a resolution," arguably, its primary meaning is the one that our family has come to know and cherish. This same connotation seems to be the one that is reflected in the spirit of countless programs fashioned to ensure the upkeep of various plots of land in towns across the United States.

And while I applaud and in fact am grateful to those who are willing to accept the responsibility of maintaining and beautifying sites around our town, I cannot fathom that the time and effort involved can remotely mirror the dedication and emotional investment required to raise a healthy, happy, adjusted child. A few hours week, verses a lifetime of commitment? As my daughter so clearly articulated, it is not the same.

In this world where "political correctness" appears to involve redefining, every other word in the dictionary for what, sometimes seem like trivial ideologies; I am sensitive to the eyebrows that my comments may raise. But my daughter, who innocently asked me her question, has no political agenda, and only voices her own truth.

So today, I speak for my daughter and perhaps for the many other adoptees in our town as well, as I respectfully request that the Town of Cohasset change the name of this worthwhile program from "Adopt an Island" to "Sponsor an Island."

Vote yes for your children's benefit

TO THE EDITOR:

To the citizens of Cohasset:

Do you realize that even if the override passes on Saturday, three teachers at the elementary level will be cut next year? That's right, three teachers will be cut, even if the override passes. That means that class sizes will likely increase to 26 in three grades at the Osgood and Deer Hill schools. If the override does not pass, another $400,000 will be cut from the already bare-bones budget. That is the equivalent of another eight to 10 teachers. Which dozen teachers in total would you like to see cut and not replaced?

How many of you remember the override that was defeated by one vote in the not too distant past? Do you realize how important it is that you go the polls on Saturday or get your absentee ballot in? I urge you to get out and vote! And vote yes for this override. Your child's education depends on it.

No drag racing on Bancroft Road

TO THE EDITOR:

The signs are here that spring has at last arrived. Birds are building nests, green shoots are appearing, evenings are lighter - and the sounds of cars roaring down Bancroft Road and tires spinning in the dirt fill the air. Yes, the boys of summer are back on Miliken Field.

There is something wonderful about living opposite Miliken Field. We get to watch 4 years olds to 18 year olds put aside their game boys and DVDs to pick up soccer balls, baseball gloves and lacrosse sticks. We hear laughter, encouragement and the sound of competition and camaraderie. But more often than not at the end of a high school practice we worry about the safety of our children and the safety of those young men who race down the road as only teenage boys with too much horse power can do. Big boys were once small boys. I would like my 3 year-old son, and the other children that live on our street, to live to acquire their driver's licenses.

Please boys, show your prowess on the sports field and not drag racing down a residential road where you are risking the lives of young children. Coaches please remind your athletes to be considerate citizens. Finally, I ask the police department to take notice of the speeding that occurs in particularly vulnerable areas.

Time to turn the tide on state budget cuts

TO THE EDITOR:

Now that the Operating Budget for FY2005 has been approved at Town Meeting, we need to all vote for the override on April 3 to offset the impact of state cuts in funding education.

A recent study (12/03), "The Impact of State Government Fiscal Crises on Local Governments and Schools" identifies Massachusetts as the state with the greatest cut in state education aid per pupil from 2002 to 2004.

During the past two years Massachusetts has cut education aid by 14.3%, four times the national average. Nationally, Massachusetts is rated 43rd in aiding cities and town with per pupil educa-

HEALTH NOTES

Pain in the back need not be a pain in the butt

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

As we try to age gracefully, the process is sometimes hindered considerably by back pain which makes us look and feel older than, perhaps, we should. For my back, I consulted a web page: http://www.Spine-Health.com . After checking credentials of the creators of the web page, and satisfying myself that they seemed to be more interested in providing a service than selling something, I received the following information:

Back pain is as much a part of the human condition as the common cold. In fact, eight out of 10 adults will experience an acute episode of back pain at some point in their lifetime. Back pain is the second most common cause of missed workdays due to illness and the most common cause of disability. Fortunately, 90 percent of back pain sufferers recover completely within 6 weeks. However, for the 10 percent of patients who do not recover within a few weeks, back pain can be a painful, prolonged, costly and frustrating experience.

The severity of pain from lower back injuries is often unrelated to the extent of physical damage present. Muscle spasm from a simple back strain can cause excruciating back pain that can limit one's ability to walk or even stand, whereas a large herniated disc can be completely painless.

Sources of back pain

Many structures in the lower back can cause severe pain. These include: muscles, ligaments, tendons, bones, joints, discs (which can be a source of significant back pain due to a rich nerve supply and tendency towards injury) There is a great deal of overlap of nerve supply to all of these structures making it nearly impossible for the brain to distinguish between injury to one structure versus another. For example, a torn or herniated disc can feel identical to a bruised muscle or ligament injury.

Axial back pain represents the most common type of pain, and it is completely non-specific with regards to the injured structure. The most common type of axial back pain is "mechanical." It is characterized as:

- Pain that gets worse with certain activities and position changes
- Pain that is relieved by rest (which means that it is most likely benign and mechanical in origin)

If the pain wakes you up from deep sleep, it may be more serious than axial back pain.

Exercises are typically necessary to rehabilitate the spine and help alleviate pain. Importantly, a regular exercise routine provides the means to help avoid recurrences of low back pain, and helps reduce severity and duration of potential future episodes of low back pain. Generally, an exercise program for low back pain should encompass stretching (such as hamstring stretching), strengthening (such as dynamic lumbar stabilization exercises), and low impact aerobic exercising (such as walking, bicycling or swimming).

Stretching

Almost everyone can benefit from stretching the soft tissues—the muscles, ligaments and tendons — around the spine. The spinal column and its contiguous muscles, ligaments and tendons are all designed to move, and limitations in this motion can accentuate pain. Patients with chronic pain may find it takes weeks or months of stretching to mobilize the spine and soft tissues, but will find that meaningful and sustained relief of low back pain follows the increase in motion.

The hamstring muscles seem to play a key role in low back pain, as patients who have low back pain tend to have tight hamstrings, and patients with tight hamstrings tend to have low back pain. It is not known which comes first, but it is clear that hamstring tightness limits motion in the pelvis and can place it in a position that increases stress across the low back. Therefore, it follows that stretching the hamstring muscles typically helps decrease the intensity of a patient's back pain and the frequency of recurrences.

A hamstring stretching routine should include applying pressure to lengthen the hamstring muscle for 30-45 seconds at a time, one to two times each day. The pressure on the muscle should be applied evenly and bouncing should be avoided, since a bouncing motion will trigger a spasm response in the muscle being stretched. The hamstring muscle may be stretched in a number of different ways. Stretching exercises include:

The most common technique is to simply bend forward at the waist, with legs relatively straight, and try to touch the toes and hold this position.

One of the least stressful techniques is to lie on the floor and pull the leg up and straighten by holding onto a towel that is wrapped behind the foot. One leg at a time may be stretched.

With time the hamstring muscle will gradually lengthen, reducing stress to the low back. Stretching should not be linked to other exercises, since those exercises may not be done on a daily basis. In order to make stretching a part of one's daily regimen, it is best to stretch every morning when getting up and before going to bed. Think of it as good back hygiene.

For my back, the recommended exercise is working, but if you have back pain and exercise doesn't work, by all means see your doctor.

Steve Bobo is chairman of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Same-sex marriage not just a gay issue

COMMENTARY

MARY KISSIDAY

Common theme: Civil rights for all

More than 75 people gathered Sunday night for a vigil in support of gay marriage at the Old Ship Church (First Parish Unitarian) in Hingham. This was only one of many that took place last weekend. Supporters were both straight and gay, young and old, and all with stories to tell. It was a gathering of people from many communities on the South Shore. Although all did not say where they were from, some people identified themselves as being from Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Braintree, Rockland, Marshfield, Weymouth and Quincy.

The vigil open with song and was followed by a few words from the Rev. Ken Read-Brown, minister at the Old Ship Church; Rabbi Shira H. Joseph, one of 100 rabbis in Massachusetts who signed a statement of support of gay marriage; and Abby Diamond, a member of the Old Ship congregation. The event was sponsored by the Welcoming Congregation Committee of Old Ship Church and South Shore Civil Marriage for All, an affiliate of Mass Equality.

Those who spoke shared the common theme of the importance of civil rights for all and of the struggles that many go through in times of change.

Read-Brown spoke of the discrimination that existed in the history of his church when a child was refused baptism because both parents were not of the correct religion. But after only a few days, it was recorded that the child was indeed baptized. The Old Ship Church became a place where others from near and far, came to be baptized. After a while it was no longer necessary for these journeys to take place, as the strongly held belief in the rigid rule, no longer existed.

This is the hope of those in favor of gay marriage: after people see there is nothing to fear from allowing gays to marry — contrary rigid beliefs will no longer exist and the Legislature and the people of Massachusetts will agree discrimination of any kind does not belong in the state Constitution. Gays and lesbians are a part of the human race and deserve their civil rights.

Rabbi Joseph, who also attended the No Place for Hate Interfaith Passover Seder at the Temple Sha'aray Shalom in Hingham earlier in the day, spoke briefly of Passover, the Jewish people and of the fact that they know discrimination firsthand and can relate to the struggles of the gay community. She also read the text of the statement that was issued by rabbis in support of Gay Marriage.

Other highlights of the evening were the passionate words of those who spoke of being affected by discrimination. Abby Diamond minced no words in describing how she wants equality. She spoke of wanting, "not almost, not maybe, but equal," as she raised the Human Rights Campaign (HRC) flag — featuring a blue background with a large gold equal sign. Other gays and lesbians spoke of coming to the South Shore more than 10 years ago and being told they would not be welcome. Others spoke of finding pockets of acceptance but realized it was only a small pocket of safety in what could be a hostile environment. This was evidenced by the fact that of the 20 legislators on the South Shore, only two were in support of gay marriage at the last Constitutional Convention.

But hope was in the air, as many straights spoke of their support and dedication to the cause of civil rights for gays and lesbians. They realized how unjustly gay and lesbian couples are treated and what straight couples take for granted is blatantly denied to gay and lesbian couples. Supporters of gay and lesbian civil rights have been an invisible constituency but are now they are coming out and making a difference. The mix of gays and straights at Sunday's event showed that this is not just a gay issue, but a human and civil rights issue.

The evening closed with a challenge for gays and straights alike to come out in support of gay marriage and to tell their families, friends, neighbors and co-workers that they support gay marriage and the civil rights of gays and lesbians. Those in attendance sang as they left the church and gathered for a short time outside in song and conversation.

Because the vote on the amendment banning gay marriage passed at the Constitutional Convention on Monday, you can bet that there will be more gatherings like this in the future.

LIBRARY CORNER

'Raising teens' workshop offered

Parents of pre-teens and teens are invited to attend a two part evening workshop "Raising Teens" which will be held on April 6 and 13 at 7 p.m. in the library. Eve Sullivan, a speaker affiliated with the Parents' Forum in Cambridge, will lead the seminar, which is sponsored by Cohasset's Project Safeguard. She will address the strong feelings and inevitable conflicts that arise in parenting adolescents. The workshops will help participants assess their parenting skills and offer immediately relevant information on habits of communication and conflict-resolution skills.

A donation of $20 for two sessions goes to support Project Safeguard and its work with children and families. Reservations should be made in advance by sending a check made out to "Project Safeguard" and sent to Project Safeguard, Cohasset Middle/High School, 143 Pond St., Cohasset, MA 02025 or by calling 781 383-6190. Donations will also be accepted at the door.

Artist exhibit

Stephanie Roberts' exhibit "Patterns and Pinhole" will be on display at the library through April 30.

House finches — both adaptable and vulnerable

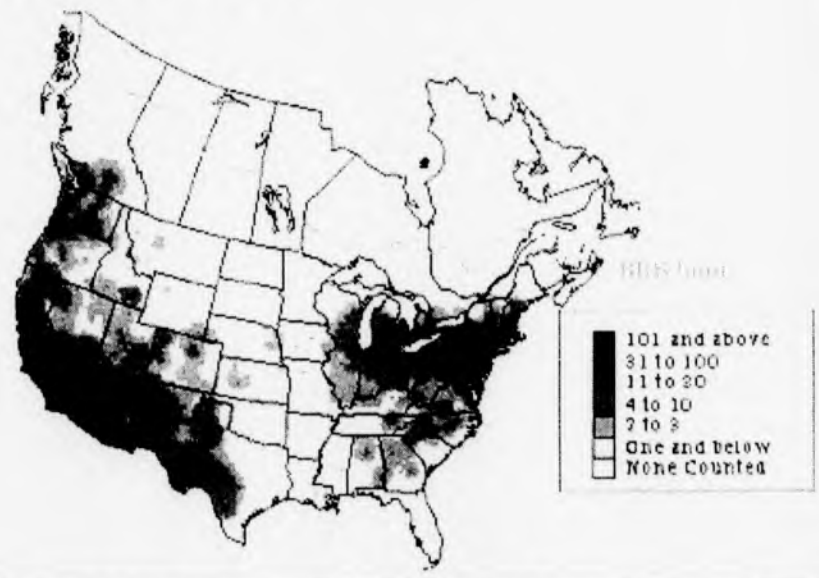
A BIRDER'S-EYE VIEW

JOANNE C. NORTON

The place was Long Island, New York. The year was 1940. Pet store owners opened cages and set free some little songbirds. These birds were House Finches being sold as "Hollywood Finches". Dealers imported the wild finches from California and marketed them as caged pets. Bright red plumage and an interesting song made the birds a popular item. The problem was that trapping, exporting, importing, and selling wild birds is strictly illegal under the Migratory Bird Act of 1918 and local New York laws. The authorities quickly cracked down. Learning of a potential raid, some dealers decided to get rid of their birds rather than pay a fine.

House Finches are not native to eastern United States, only to the western part of the country. Look in any early field guide for the eastern region of the United States, and you will not find House Finch listed. The House Finches set free in New York not only survived, but rapidly spread throughout eastern United States, and are now a common bird at feeders. In 1941 they were seen at Jones Beach, and two years later a nesting pair was recorded in Babylon, Long Island. The western and eastern populations are now meeting in the middle of the country. (See map)

There are differences between the two populations. Eastern birds have larger bills than western. Scientists are also discovering that Montana House Finches have evolved to produce females that are larger than males, while Alabama House Finches have evolved to produce males that are larger than females. This has all happened in less than 30 years. The first egg laid is the first one to hatch and tends to produce the largest chick. In Montana these first-born are usually females and in Alabama they are usually males. Scientists do not understand how this works.



House Finches are sparrow-sized birds with conical bills. The males have red heads, breasts and rumps. The females are brown and streaked, but have no red color. Most of the year finches eat seeds. During July and August, while they are molting, they change their diet to include berries and fruit rich in carotenoids. It is the carotenoid content of these foods that determines what color the new feathers will be. There are many different carotenoid pigments in nature. The color variation between individual birds is enormous, ranging all the way from dark red, to orange, to pale yellow. At first it was thought the amount and type of carotenoids eaten were the only factors that determined color. Recent studies indicate a more complicated picture. Stress, parasite infestation, and disease may influence how well a bird metabolizes carotenoids, thus having an influence on feather color. House Finches introduced into Hawaii in 1870 are known as "papaya birds", because papayas are a favorite food. Hawaiian finches are yellow, not red.

Does the color of the male really matter? If you are a female House Finch, the answer seems to be "Yes!" There is evidence that females think redder is better. Brighter males appear to be healthier and more disease free, more attentive about feeding the female while she is sitting on the nest, and better at defending territories. A paradox is that drab males during the non-breeding season tend to be dominant over brighter males when competing for food. As usual, more research is needed.

The remarkably successful distribution of House Finches across the United States in recent years has met an obstacle. A parasitic bacterium called Mycoplasma gallisepticum is usually found in chickens, but a variant began to affect House Finches in 1994. People in Maryland were the first to notice that birds on their feeders had closed, swollen or crusted eyes. Mycoplasmal conjunctivitis began to spread northward and eastward. Project FeederWatch participants in Cornell's Bird Population Study program mobilized quickly to track this disease through the House Finch Disease Survey. By 1997 all 30 eastern states reported birds with the disease. In 2000, it was estimated that the eastern population had fallen from about 300 million birds to 180 million. House Finches are the hardest hit, but some other species develop conjunctivitis as well. Just in the past two years there have been reports of infected finches in the west.

House Finch Carpodacus mexicanus

Summer Distribution Map

There are three finches in the Carpodacus genus: House, Purple and Cassin's. Cassin's is only found in the west. The other two both occur in Massachusetts, although Purple Finches are less common. These two finches look very similar to each other. Females are easier to tell apart than males. Both are brown and streaky, but female Purple Finches have a noticeable white stripe over the eye. The males in both species are similar in coloring, but Purple Finches tend to be a more raspberry red than orange red, have larger, less flat heads, show some reddish coloring on their backs, and exhibit less distinct streaks on the breast. Their songs are both warbles, but the House Finch ends with a couple of harsh, blurry notes.

House Finches, as the name implies, are quite comfortable in populated areas and often nest right near a house. Favorite nesting spots are in door wreaths, or in a hanging planter. They particularly like to eat sunflower seeds at feeders. To reduce the chance of spreading disease among these birds that like to feed in flocks, it is good to keep your feeders clean. If you are interested in helping to document conjunctivitis in House Finches, check out <http://www.birds.cornell.edu/hofi/abtsurvey.html >

Town Election 2004

SELECTMAN — VOTE FOR TWO

SELECTMAN/Merle S. Brown

NAME: Merle S. Brown
AGE: 71
ADDRESS: 546 Beechwood St.
FAMILY: Married to Joan; two children, Marcy and Jeffrey.

Four grandchildren: Christian, 4; Elizabeth, 3; Kathleen, 1; Audrey, 9 months.

YEARS IN TOWN: Born in Cohasset

EDUCATION: Graduate of Cohasset schools, graduate of Northeastern University, Mechanical Engineering.

OCCUPATION: Retired

CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: Selectman, 12 years; Conservation Commission, 11 years; Recycling Committee, 22 years; Boy Scouts of America, 30 years; Appalachia Service Project, 7 years.

BIGGEST CONCERN OF VOTERS: Taxes.

REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: Having been a selectman for the last 12 years, I have strived to make town government more efficient and friendly while keeping the cost down.

These are some of the cost savings programs I have been responsible for:

"Pay-as-you-throw" — saved over $116,000 in the first year alone and was able to reduce the sticker fee at the RTF from $85 to $30 ($15 for seniors) a savings for all citizens. The new "one sticker for all" saves the town on administrative cost. I was instrumental in consolidating the departments of Tree & Park, Highway and the RTF under the DPW. I was at the forefront of having the maintenance of all Town buildings, including schools, under the DPW.

I was influential in the improvements at town hall that have made life easier for citizens; new signage in front of the building setting aside parking for town hall business; creating a new conference room on the lower floor for larger meetings; enlarging the selectmen's office to encourage more attendance at our meetings.

Being there for the people of the town, knowing I will always take the time to listen. As shown above, I have the experience and leadership to continue to make Cohasset a better place to live.

SELECTMAN/Ralph S. Dormitzer

NAME: Ralph S. Dormitzer
AGE: 65
ADDRESS: 111 Atlantic Ave.
FAMILY: Wife, Jacqueline; sons , Philip and Paul; granddaughter, Emily; grandsons, Jeremy, Henry, Justin
YEARS IN TOWN: 37
EDUCATION: BA Harvard
OCCUPATION: Retired
CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: St. Anthony's Christian Education Program; Cohasset School Committee — 1973-1976; School Facilities Committee; Sewer Site Selection Committee; Advisor to Village Renaissance re: town pump; Co-chair - Community Advisory Committee to Massport.

BIGGEST CONCERN OF VOTERS: Taxes and tax overrides

REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: I am running for the office of selectman because I believe that I can make a positive contribution to Cohasset. I am running to preserve its culture of civility and to protect its extraordinary beauty. I am running because I believe that the people of Cohasset want assurance that the leaders of the town represent their interests impartially, wisely and effectively. I am running because townspeople want their leadership to be open to divergent points of view and to give a respectful and fair hearing to citizens concerns.

I believe that we must curtail the growth in expenditures and taxes. Historically, Cohasset has been hospitable to diverse groups of people, those who made their living in the town as well as those who commuted to work. We can protect that diversity only if we slow the rate of spending.

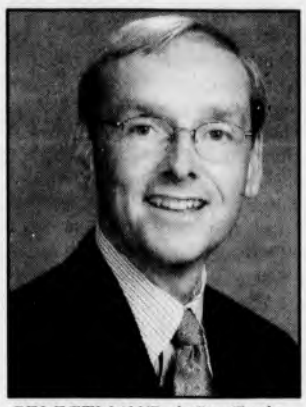
Cohasset has benefited from the talent, time, creativity and generosity of hundreds of individuals whose volunteer contributions surround us. I propose that we enhance, not reduce, the tradition of public participation.

Finally, Cohasset has always been an enriching and safe place for children to grow up. I strongly support the many institutions that have made this possible.

SELECTMAN/Louis S. Harvey

NAME: Louis S. Harvey
AGE: 61
ADDRESS: 465 King St.
FAMILY: Daughter, Shelley-Ann
YEARS IN TOWN: 13
EDUCATION: BS -Physics
OCCUPATION: CEO
CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: Created CP Harvey Jazz Scholarship; led initiative to create Cohasset history timelines for schools; led initiative to save library building for Historical Society; chair of finance at Plimoth Plantation; served on Federal Reserve Bank of Boston Council; served World Bank in study on privatizing of Social Security; served on Cohasset Committee to Write Town History; served on board of Bentley College Graduate School; served on key committee of NASD; served on board of Handel Haydn Society; expert source for financial press and regulators; frequent speaker at leading national financial forums

BIGGEST CONCERN OF VOTERS: Threat to the quality of life posed by aloofness of Town government, threat to education and elderly, uncontrolled growth, lack of environmental concern, fiscal irresponsibility and insular decision-making.



REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: My primary objective is to protect and preserve the quality of Cohasset life from the downward trend in the ability to lead the Town government, lack of communication to and from residents and inadequate fiscal policies.

Cohasset has the choice of making a distinct change from the comfortable practices that have served the Town in past decades to one of dynamic leadership with the strength to protect the Town from the growing challenges of today and tomorrow. Ralph Dormitzer and I represent the strong leadership choice.

While well intentioned efforts to gain control of the Town's long and short term fiscal policies have been attempted, it is necessary to introduce strong leadership to successfully implement policies that assure the best use is made of the taxpayers' dollars.

Central to the change represented by Ralph Dormitzer and I, is a new and highly visible culture of open communication in which residents. Residents will have open dialog with the Town government without a fear of retaliation for holding opposing points of view.

My intention is to introduce a standard that all Town communication must be calculated to be understood by Town residents and that all residents have the opportunity to respond at a time of their choosing.

SELECTMAN/Rob Spofford

NAME: Rob Spofford
ADDRESS: 14 Heather Drive
AGE: 46
YEARS IN TOWN: 11
FAMILY: Married to third-generation Cohasset resident Susan Woods Spofford and father of four daughters: Virginia, 14; Jennifer, 12 and twins Robin and Meredith, 9.
EDUCATION: Northeastern University, B.S. in Finance
OCCUPATION: 1995-Present, Founder and President of The Spofford Group. Based in Hingham. The Spofford Group is a corporate and municipal specialty insurance brokerage firm.
CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: 1997-2004 Chairman, School Building and Facilities Committee; 1995-1997 Member, School Building and Facilities Committee. Tenure as chairman of saw $52 million in new construction and renovation projects done on time and on budget.Construction and renovation projects included: Building of the new Osgood Elementary School and renovation of the Deer Hill and Middle/High Schools.

2000 member, SPED Director Search Committee; 2002 Citizen member, Chief of Police Search Committee; 2000-2003 Board of Directors Cohasset Youth Baseball and Softball Association —helped re-establish Cohasset's softball program. Currently serve as Softball Program Coordinator

VOTERS' BIGGEST CONCERN: There are three concerns that I have heard repeatedly throughout this campaign. How do we balance community desire for excellence in education, appropriately staffed and supplied public safety services, and well maintained public spaces with the reality of ever decreasing state aid and a limited tax base? Two, in light of community needs, tax burden and outside pressures how do we maintain the character and socio-economic diversity of Cohasset? And third, are our town and school administrations proactive enough in how they plan for the future so that the citizens can be confident that every measure is being taken either to save or maximize the tax dollars we do have.

REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: When I kicked off my campaign in January, I talked about how commitment to community service has always been important to me. I want to take my experience of working with numerous town committees and state officials on the school projects and other civic matters and put it to further use in serving the community going forward. Never has my commitment to this community been stronger than it is today. Saturday's town meeting illustrated that people are concerned about what's going on in this town and want to participate in the decisions that are made. As a consensus builder, I believe in listening to people and in finding solutions when confronted with challenges. It is this kind of thinking and energy that I will bring to the Board of Selectmen. May campaign commitments are: Preservation of Cohasset's character and natural resources; strong fiscal management; excellence in education; maintenance of our outstanding bond rating; and continued focus on maintenance and upkeep of our public facilities.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE — VOTE FOR TWO

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Pat Martin

NAME: Pat Martin
AGE: 44
ADDRESS: 169 Linden Drive
FAMILY: Husband, Dan; son, Dan Jr., 13; daughter, Carly, 11; and son Harrison, 7.
YEARS IN TOWN: seven
EDUCATION: BA in psychology from University of Rhode Island, master's degree in administration, policy and planning, Rutgers University.
OCCUPATION: Domestic violence intervention program director, Wellspring Multi-Service Center, Hull

Civic/municipal experience: Two terms on Cohasset School Committee; liaison to the PSO; Osgood and Deer Hill School Councils; Special Ed PAC; Secretary and Teachers Contract Negotiation Bargaining Unit; Transportation Subcommittee; Superintendent Search Committee; as well as numerous administrator search committees; CYBSA softball coach; Second Congregational Church Sunday School teacher; Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee.

BIGGEST CONCERN OF VOTERS:

Voters want to maintain the excellence of the Cohasset school system yet have their tax dollars and resources managed to the highest and best possible use. They understand this is a challenge as state aid continues to shrink and student enrollment continues to rise yet would like to see additional management and program efficiencies as well as avenues for creative solutions enhanced or increased.

REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE:

These are challenging times for the Cohasset school system. We are seeing increasing need to do what is best or mandate for our children with a limited amount of financial resources. Cohasset has an excellent school system which I would like to see maintained. Success will only be achieved by keeping the needs of our students at the center of our focus while managing our resources to the highest and best use.

Our system will soon be under the direction of a new superintendent as well as moving into the realities of grade reconfiguration. I believe the school committee needs a steady hand seasoned with the experience necessary to continue moving us forward during this time of transition. In addition, I would like to continue working on the initiatives that I have begun such as finding busing efficiencies and moving start times back at the middle/high schools. I am proud of the community's commitment to education and the work that has been done on their behalf. I believe that we offer a quality education to each student in our system regardless of their learning styles and that this should be maintained.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Adrienne MacCarthy

NAME; Adrienne MacCarthy
AGE: 41
ADDRESS: 85 Doane St.
FAMILY: Husband, John; Sons: Eric (14), Sean(11), and Ryan(9)
YEARS IN TOWN: 10 Years
EDUCATION: Graduate Milton High School and Aquinas Jr. College, Milton; attended Wentworth Institute of Technology, Boston
OCCUPATION: Mother and volunteer
CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: Current President of the Cohasset Parent School Organization(PSO); Former Deer Hill Representative to the PSO; Member Superintendent's Communication Forum called "Links"; Parent member of the Osgood/Deer Hill Reconfiguration Task Force; Volunteer: Cohasset Swim/Dive Team, South Shore Arts Festival and Cohasset Swim Center. Municipal: eight-year Member of the School Building/Facilities Committee; Organizer of the "Friends of the Cohasset Public School Playgrounds, which designed, fundraised and installed the Osgood and Deer Hill Playgrounds .
VOTERS BIGGEST CONCERN: Voters biggest concern seems to be the override. Some fear the failure of the override and the affect on town/school services, while others worry about the passage of the override and the affect on their taxes.
REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: This is not my first time seeking office, I would like to remind every one of my bid for a seat on the school committee three years ago; I lost by just two votes! My desire to make a difference in our town through my commitment to our schools, has not changed. I feel confident that I will be an asset on the school committee. I will bring my experience from the school/facilities committee to this office, by seeking to work collaboratively with the Town to develop a strategic plan for the maintenance of our $52 million investments. I feel that I am, uniquely, qualified for this position due to my six-year commitment to the Cohasset PSO. Through this experience, I have been able to gain insight to the day to day workings of our schools. I know this insight will be invaluable as we discuss budgeting, collective bargaining and policies. I am prepared to make the same level of commitment to the school committee as I have to every other project I have undertaken.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Scott O'Grady

NAME: Scott O'Grady
AGE: 42
ADDRESS: 115 Sohier St.
FAMILY: Wife: Laura O'Grady. Children: Christopher, 13; Maggie, 10; Bridget, 7
YEARS IN TOWN: 10
EDUCATION: BA Philosophy from the University of Notre Dame; Post Baccalaureate Teaching Certificate through Bridgewater State College
OCCUPATION: Worked as an independent sales representative covering Iowa and Nebraska, representing Etonic, Inc., and Nicklaus Golf Equipment. Taught High School English at Weymouth High School, Weymouth Evening High School, and Plymouth South High School.
VOTERS' BIGGEST CONCERN: Voters have expressed to me that their concerns over a variety of issues have not been taken seriously by the school committee. A number of people have complained of a dismissive attitude on the part of school committee members, and of a perceived unwillingness to engage in open discussion.
REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: I am motivated to run at this time by my deep dissatisfaction with the current school committee's and school administration's approach to decision making. I worry that school committee members do not understand their relationship to the superintendent, and therefore do not adequately represent the community. I will bring to the school committee a respect for vigorous debate as a critical component of the decision making process. I will seek out and encourage divergent and creative approaches to problem solving. And I will fight relentlessly for openness and community input in the proceedings of the committee and the workings of the schools.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Jamie Williams

NAME: Jamie Williams
AGE: 48
ADDRESS: 60 Surry Drive
FAMILY: Bob, husband married for 25 years – David (9), Colby (7). Two dogs, Penny and Chino.
YEARS IN TOWN: 12
EDUCATION: University of Massachusetts, Amherst – Political Science and Community Relations; Suffolk University – Advanced Study, Finance & Accounting; Babson College — Corporate School for Executive Development; Bell Labs- Advanced study in fiber technology and the Ethernet
OCCUPATION: Parent. Prior business experience includes: NYNEX & AT&T, Sales and Marketing Management; IBEW Union Installation & Maintenance; AT&T Supervisor, Long-range planning staff, Negotiator-New Products.
CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: Classroom volunteer; Osgood School Council — Advisory Board, School Volunteer; Cohasset Parents Advisory Council— Vice President and Co-President; Cohasset PSO — President's Council Liaison; Center for Student Coastal Research-Fundraiser; Paul Pratt Memorial Library — Board of Directors, Friends of the Library; Cub Scouts of America; South Shore Woman's League — Treasurer.
BIGGEST CONCERN OF VOTERS: Why are teaching jobs always at risk?
REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: I am running for school committee because I am passionate about maintaining a superior standard of education in Cohasset. I will work to change the administration of our schools to one of planning and prioritizing, not jeopardizing, our children's education.

It's essential that we develop a master plan to prepare for future school needs — anticipating the affects of rising enrollment and decreased state funding. Relying on risky taxpayer overrides cannot safeguard a superior education. I will support the override this Saturday because I am currently unable to prevent the threatened erosion of our children's education. I am, however, opposed to perpetuating a cycle of annual overrides. If I am elected to the school committee, I will work to unravel the budget, determine the effectiveness of programs, prioritize funding and plan for future growth. I will advocate open and honest communication, listen and work cooperatively with others to bring new, creative solutions to light.

As a parent, a school volunteer, an experienced businesswoman and a 12-year resident of Cohasset, I have the fortitude and skills to lead our schools to success. I believe that our children are our first priority and our best investment. Please vote for me on April 3.

Town Election 2004

PLANNING BOARD — VOTE FOR ONE

PLANNING BOARD/ Stuart Ivimey

NAME: Stuart Ivimey
AGE: 40
ADDRESS:7 Sankey Road
FAMILY: Wife – Christine Woodward
YEARS IN TOWN: 5
EDUCATION: B.A. – History, Washington and Jefferson College, Washington, Penn., University of Denver Law School
OCCUPATION: Attorney
CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: Chairman – Cohasset Community Preservation Committee 3 years Cohasset Rotary Club.
BIGGEST CONCERN OF VOTERS: The need to preserve the town's character.
REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: Cohasset needs a new Planning Board member who is dedicated to controlled and balanced growth, preservation of town character and environmental protection. We need fresh ideas to plan for modern challenges presented by an aging population, escalating property values, increased development pressure and the need to provide housing for seniors who lack the means to remain in town. We need a Board member with the integrity and independence to resist special interests and development pressures that threaten to transform our wonderful town into suburban sprawl. I will be this member.

As the Chairman of Cohasset's Community Preservation Committee, I have already delivered positive results for Cohasset — created moderate income apartments in the old Pratt Library; upgraded the 60 Elm Street apartments; preserved the "Barnes Wildlife Sanctuary", which added 35 acres to Wheelwright Park – at no cost to the town; created the Brass Kettle Book Conservation Area, which protects our drinking water; and funded the preservation of antique buildings including the former Pratt Library located in the village.

If elected to the Planning Board, I pledge to be an advocate for Cohasset and its residents. Most importantly, I will seek a balance between the need for growth and the preservation of our quality of life.

PLANNING BOARD/ Joseph R. Nedrow

NAME: Joseph R. Nedrow
AGE: 66
ADDRESS: 21 Fair Oaks Lane
FAMILY: Wife, Ruth (of 43 years); three grown children, son, Michael , and two daughters, Jill Zimmermann and Margo Doherty; and seven grandchildren.
YEARS IN TOWN: 27
EDUCATION: Bachelor's, master's (2), doctorate.
OCCUPATION: Retired
CIVIC/MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE: Twenty-five-plus years of community involvement. Former chairman of the School Committee, board member Cohasset Elder Affairs, and most recently chairman of Senior Housing Committee. Also served on Selection Committee for South Shore Habitat for Humanity.
BIGGEST CONCERN OF VOTERS: Most people's concerns, as it relates to the Planning Board, is the importance of trying to maintain the history, character and tradition of our beautiful town. Balancing the inherent rights of property owners with the community's desire to maintain its character is not an easy task. I will work to make sure every applicant is aware of the town's goals and encourage their support of the spirit as well as the letter of the law.
REASON FOR SEEKING OFFICE: I've always enjoyed my involvement in community activities. Over the years I have met and worked with some wonderful people I would not have known otherwise, I am amazed at the amount of talent in our town and the willingness of people to share these gifts. Over the years, my commitment to family and career limited my participation. As a retiree, I now have the time and interest to devote whatever it takes to understand the issues. This one-year term is an unique opportunity for both myself and the town to evaluate my contributions before either of us makes a commitment for the full five-year term.

QUESTION

Question 1

Shall the Town of Cohasset be allowed to assess an additional $400,000.00 in real estate and personal property taxes for the purposes of meeting the operational expenses of the Town Government and School System for the fiscal year beginning July 1 Two Thousand Four?

YES
NO

Absentee ballots available

Absentee ballots for the Annual Town Election on April 3, are now available at the Town Clerks office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Friday, April 2, at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. You may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

1. Absence from the town during the hours the polls is open.
2. Physical disability.
3. Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed, and the signature of the applicant.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury and mail or hand deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by April 3, 2004 to be counted.

The Accu-Vote optical scan system will be used. Instructions to voters are printed on the ballot and any pen or pencil may be used. To vote, completely fill in the OVAL to the right of your choice. Secrecy sleeves are available at the check in tables. The ballots can be inserted into the machine face up, face down, etc., and will be read. It is the usual policy to flip the ballot over so the blank side shows as they insert it into the machine. Voters who are uncomfortable with this should use the secrecy sleeve.

If you are permanently physically disabled and cannot cast your vote at the polling place, you may file a letter from your physician with your town clerk, stating that you are permanently unable to cast your vote at the polling place because of physical disability. A completed application, for an absentee ballot for you to sign and return will be mailed to you by the town clerk at least 28 days before every primary and election.

Polls open 8am-6pm, April 3 at Town Hall

It was a year that put 'community' into accomplishments

STATE OF THE TOWN

RONNIE MCMORRIS

Mrs. McMorris gave the following State of the Town address at Town Meeting.

Good Morning and thank you all for attending this morning. I am pleased to deliver the Report of the Board of Selectmen on the state of the town. Unlike the traditional "state" addresses at other levels of government, this is not about the accomplishments of any particular individual or any administration. Rather it is about what we as a community — a community of volunteers, of taxpayers, and of professionals have accomplished this year. It is a year that we can all be proud of, marked by the completion of so many projects that have been in the works for years.

First is the completion of the Town Master Plan, the first in over 40 years. Back in the Fall of 1998 the Board of Selectmen established the Growth & Development Task Force and charged the group with guiding and overseeing the process of developing a comprehensive master plan for Cohasset as we entered the 21st century. The Selectmen set forth our town mission — to maintain the special character that makes Cohasset such a desirable place to live. This committee spent years meeting with neighborhood groups, town boards and committees and surveying residents' opinions. They drafted articles and a newsletter and ultimately formulated the Statement of Cohasset's Vision for the Future. With funds appropriated by the town meeting a consultant was hired, and by January of 2004 a 150 page document including maps was in print. By articulating the values and goals of the community we have been able to focus on a unified vision for the future and develop the strategy necessary to turn that vision into a reality.

Implementation of the master plan is the task before us, but today we should acknowledge each and every citizen who participated in this process. Thank you for voicing your concerns and your suggestions. To the members of the Growth & Development committee we are especially grateful to have volunteers who are willing to commit the countless hours needed to do the research, debate the issues and compile the findings. Although the issues and policies continue to be debated, please be assured that all of your work is greatly appreciated. As always, leadership is the key to the successful accomplishments of enormous tasks, and it was the leadership provided by Rick Swanborg over many years that I ask you to acknowledge. Thank you Rick.

New committees

Now let's go back to the year 1999. The Board of Selectmen established two new committees. The first was to study the present and future needs of the police and fire departments as they related to space at the Elm St. facility; and the second group, the Senior Housing committee was to look at the housing needs of the 55+ population. So many seniors who had contributed so much to this community were moving out of town in search of affordable alternatives to their larger family homes.

A study of the public safety facility quickly determined that the space was inadequate to serve the needs of each department Following the town meeting vote to postpone the building of a new police station plans were developed to renovate and expand the existing facility. The fire dept. moved to temporary quarters and this year, under the guidance of the Police/Fire station committee that work has been completed. The interior is now functional because of the generous donation of office furniture from a local businessman. Like every other project, we could only have accomplished this badly needed work with the financial support of the community, with the dedication of volunteers; with the cooperation of town employees, and with the leadership of a busy, (and it's always a very busy person), George McGoldrick. Thank you all. I encourage you to stop by the station and see what we have all done. I know you'll be pleased.

The development of a senior housing project for Cohasset residents; this was perhaps the most elusive of all the town's goals. There wasn't a building to be refurbished or a site to be built on. Yet week after week for years this committee pushed forward in search of a solution. As we all know, we are now eagerly anticipating the development of senior housing on Sohier St. after years of investigation, frustration and study. The town meeting authorized the purchase of the Cook estate and that combined with the: town's adjacent parcel provides a unique opportunity to develop a community which will be home to Cohasset seniors of all income levels for generations to come. We look forward to working with the Northland Residential group on that development, but it is the residents of Cohasset who deserve credit for supporting this creative project.

I especially want to thank each and every person who contributed their skills to make this a reality, including our Town Manager, Mark Haddad. We thank the Advisory Committee for their all-important support, the family of Jane Cook; and the two men who committed themselves to this issue and provided the leadership needed to get it done — Jim Lagrottaria and Joe Nedrow. Gentlemen, we are grateful for your work.

Amazingly, this past year was also marked not only by the rededication of the beautifully refurbished Deer Hill School, but also by the completion of construction here at the Middle/High School. Once again, the residents of this community should acknowledge themselves for outstanding civic responsibility. Our school buildings are now all safe, healthy places where we are happy to send our children each day. The exceptional service performed by the members of the school building facilities committee, many of whom served during the Osgood school 9 project, is gratefully acknowledged. As we admire the finished product it is important to focus on the countless hours spent by these volunteers, people with families and jobs and other activities. Each and every detail was given the time and the attention it deserved; and each project was "on time and on budget." Thank you all.

Downtown work

In addition to the completion of these major projects, we have finalized plans for the revitalization of the downtown. Again after years of discussion we can anticipate spending the million plus dollars the Town of Cohasset was able to secure for this purpose. We will be pleased to see our years of planning taking shape in this project.

The good working relationship between the town and the MBTA continued this year, as plans for the restoration of the Greenbush line proceeded. Kristina Patterson was brought on board to act as the ombudsman for residents and progress continues on many fronts, including the use of quad gates.

For the first time we hosted a forum involving all boards, committees and officials. With George Marlette moderating the discussion it was a great opportunity to brainstorm various town issues.

As we focus on the accomplishments of our community this past year, it is clear that we have undertaken almost all of the major capital projects that needed to be done, and that we have, in fact, completed the lion's share. It is also clear as we focus on these achievements that Cohasset is more than just a geographical area defined on a map. It is all of us working together as a community, taking responsibility for ourselves, for our neighbors and for our children. It is people guided by the values that they share, by a tradition of volunteerism and by an work ethic that involves rolling up your sleeves and digging in. It is no wonder that Cohasset is such a wonderful place to live! We are at our best when we come together as a community and do what needs to be done. So as we face the challenges of the coming year, and the debates ahead of us today, please be reminded that we are first and foremost friends and neighbors working towards a common goal.

tion expenditures. Thus, federal and state mandates and the cost of education continue to burden local governments without relief in sight.

We need to let the Governor and our legislature know that this is not tolerable. The MTA is calling on all citizens to "Reverse the Course" the Governor's budget is taking.

During the past two years education has suffered tragic cuts. According to the MTA they include: $265 million cut from preK-12 education funding; $222 million cut in non-education local aid-half of which funds local public schools; the cut of $148 million from Chapter 70 - state aid to local school districts;$40 million from MCAS remediation funds;$29 million in funding for early childhood education; and $7 mllion cut from early literacy programs.

State financial reimbursement, under Circuit Breaker legislation, for educating our most severely disabled students, has been cut in half. This short fall has caused significant budget problems for all school systems in Massachusetts.

Additionally, the Governor's budget for FY2005 recommends the elimination of the class size reduction program and the elimination of the reimbursement for school transportation. This is not a path we should be supporting.

We need to send a message to our state government to "Reverse the Course" of cutting public education funding. It is hurting community spirit and our children. Please vote on April 3 in favor of the override to support all our municipal services.

TO THE EDITOR:

If someone out there is missing his/her paperback copy of Brian McGrory's second novel "The Nominee"...having read it through Chapter 33...I have it and would be happy to return.

I found it on March 25, lying open on Highland Avenue, Cohasset, in front of the Second Congregational Church, with no specific indication of ownership. Hope to hear, tel. 781-383-0493.

It's okay to say 'no'

TO THE EDITOR:

Does it ever strike you as strange that when some people say no that it is not considered negative.

When we wanted to renovate the old Osgood into a K - 2 and build a brand new Deer Hill, the School Committee and School Building Committee adamantly said no. Instead they demanded a campus which resulted in destroying a pristine wooded open space and gave us a hard to get to primary school that has no access for an emergency vehicle to drive around and no play fields.

When we wanted low maintenance and energy efficiency as top priorities in the renovations the school group again said no. Instead they chose to ignore the suggestions of resident professionals in the community because as was said at Saturday's Town Meeting they "did all they had the money to do". Unfortunately their budget did not include such items as dual fuel burners or heat recovery systems. Those two items alone have cost us extra energy dollars in just this year that would have paid for more than one classroom teacher. And how many more teachers will it cost us in the next 50 years? Plus the R factors in the ceilings range from 24 -29 when the industry standard in this region is 30.

When we requested that they reconsider hiring a full-time business manager a few years ago, they said no. Instead we lost the salary of one teacher a year with the increase costs of the full-time position and we still have realized losses in the lunch program that would have paid for another teacher.

While street lights were turned off around town, we asked them to turn off the lights in the late 90s and stop having the school parking lots resemble beacons throughout the night, they said no. Over the years since Osgood was opened and with the new lights added at Deer Hill and the Middle/High the increased energy costs have taken money away from teacher salaries and academic programs.

We noticed that from FY01 to FY05 the school figures show a 25 percent increase in budget, a 20 percent decrease in SPED enrollment (237 -191), and a 10.5 percent increase in total school population (1339 -1480). This figure includes a 12.5 percent student increase in the voluntary METCO program that has just received additional state cuts. When we asked on town meeting floor to consider scaling back METCO that is costing us money for needed teacher salaries and academic and sports programs, they again said no.

We have been threatened that our housing values will go down if we don't continuously give the schools more and more money because their scores will drop. Well, with the more money we gave them the MCAS ratings have been consistently dropping in the last few years and now as the March 7 Boston Globe showed us we fell to the second tier. Our home prices still continue to soar.

When they can ignore the big picture and consistently say no to us who are paying the bills it should be OK for all of us to say no to them and their irresponsible spending.

Vote 'no' on override

TO THE EDITOR:

When the Selectmen, Advisory Committee and School Committee unanimously supported the $400,000 Override Question, my worst fears were realized. After years of working at it, Town Government officials have replicated themselves as clones who all think the same and support bigger(budgets) as better regardless of the pressure they put on many residents.

It has been suggested that $400,000 is only about 1.25 percent of the Town budget and that we ought to be able to "pare down" the override to a less onerous number. Remember a few years ago, when town officials gave the voters four override choices: zero/low/mid/hi? The voters chose the "low" number and the Town and School District made necessary adjustments without Armageddon. In my view, since our elected officials have no confidence in us to vote intelligently; we have no choice but to send a message: "No, put the brakes on out-of-control spending."

Do you realize that from FY02(actual) to FY05(budgeted):

a. School utilities have gone from $254,427 to $512,479(+101 percent)

b. Custodial Services from $404,218 to $548,780(+35.8 percent)

c. SPED "unreimbursable expenses" from $2,064,509 to $2,629,459(+27.4 percent)(despite a SPED enrollment decline of -19.4 percent)

d. According to School District calculations, METCO "unreimbursable expenses" will be $176,360 for FY05(budgeted 50 students). I am positive that the aforementioned figure is grossly understated, but whatever the correct number is: the School District needs to be reimbursed. METCO is a great program, but we may have to "pare it down" if costs remain out of control.

e. The new Osgood School is approximately double the square footage of the old Osgood while it now houses only K-2 versus K-3, previously. The Deer Hill/Middle-High School square footage increased by 65 to 75

O'Grady event tonight

"I would like to thank the Beechwood Congregational Church for inviting the candidates for town office to their church supper, and the Cohasset Council for Elder Affairs for their candidates' luncheon," says Scott O'Grady, a candidate for school committee. "Both events provided opportunities for communication between candidates and voters that will help us all, as voters, to make better decisions on Election Day."

O'Grady would also like to remind voters that he will hold an informal gathering tonight, 7-8:30 p.m., in the meeting room at the new Paul Pratt Memorial Library. "I invite all Cohasset voters to attend," he said. Refreshments will be served.

MEDICAID AND SENIORS' HOMES (H 4330)

House 154-0, Senate 36-1, overrode Gov. Romney's veto of a controversial provision delaying until July 1 an expansion of the state's power to collect the costs of medical and nursing home care from the estates of state-subsidized Medicaid recipients following their death. Prior law allowed the state to only collect from assets that were owned solely in the recipient's name and allowed couples to protect their assets simply by owning the property jointly or with a family member. These assets include homes, bank accounts, insurance and other personal property. The new provision allows the state to expand its collections to assets owned jointly with others including spouses and family members. Under the expanded powers, the state would place a lien on the home or other asset and collect the deceased recipient's share of it when the asset is sold. The expanded recovery powers were approved as part of the fiscal 2004 state budget and have actually been in effect since July 1 of last year. The state has already collected money and placed liens on properties and it is unclear what happens to the money and the liens now that the delay has been implemented. Override supporters said it is unfair to change these rules in the middle of the game and argued that the new rules effectively destroy the estate planning of many senior citizens. They noted the legislature needs time to look at the potentially devastating effects of the expanded recovery powers on the surviving spouses of deceased recipients and said that a state lien on a home would make it difficult for the surviving spouse to take out a home equity loan for improvements or living expenses. They also argued that if the surviving spouse sells the home, he or she would forfeit a substantial sum of money to the state. Override opponents said the expanded powers would ensure that all Medicaid recipients are on an equal playing field rather than favor those who do estate planning to avoid allowing state recovery. They noted that the state must rein in skyrocketing Medicaid costs and has a right and obligation to recover the deceased recipients' share of assets before taxpayer dollars are spent. They argued that the state would not force a surviving spouse to sell the home and pointed out that the state has indicated it is willing to waive or subordinate its claim if there is an undue hardship including the need for the spouse to take out a home equity loan. (A "Yea" vote is for delaying the expanded recovery powers until July 1. A "Nay" vote is against the delay).

$500,000 FOR COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT AND FINANCE CORP. (H 4328)

House 139-14, Senate 31-5, overrode Gov. Romney's veto $500,000 veto reduction (from 1 million to $500,000) in funding for the Massachusetts Community Development Finance Corporation (CDFC). This quasi-public investment corporation provides financing for small businesses, real estate projects that offer a clear public benefit and community development programs across the state. Override supporters said the additional $500,000 is a worthwhile investment in this corporation that stimulates the economy and creates jobs. They noted CDFC also has programs to assist minority and women contractors, minority-owned businesses in urban areas and firms that are unable to meet their capital requirements in the traditional finance markets. Override opponents said that $500,000 is sufficient for this program and noted the state is facing up to a $2 billion deficit in the upcoming fiscal 2005 budget. They urged the Legislature to preserve funds for fiscal 2005 in order to prevent drastic cuts in important programs and avoid tax hikes. (A "Yea" vote is for the additional $500,000 A "Nay" vote is against the additional $500,000).

EXPAND CIVIL COMMITMENT FOR SEX OFFENDERS (S 1005)

House 144-9, gave near final approval to a bill expanding the state's current civil commitment law that allows a judge to determine that some sexually dangerous prisoners convicted of specific sex crimes be kept locked up in treatment centers for one year to life after they complete their prison sentences. The measure adds new crimes to the list of offenses for which the offender could be civilly committed including child pornography, kidnapping, forcing children into prostitution, open and gross lewdness and any other offense in which the facts suggest a sexual motivation. The House removed the offense of indecent exposure that was included in the version passed by the Senate in October. The proposal also subjects an offender who is in prison for a non-sex-related crime to civil commitment if he previously served time in prison for one of the sex-related crimes on the list. Supporters said current law includes too many loopholes by omitting many sexual-related crimes from the list and argued that this expansion would help protect the public by ensuring that more incurable, sexually dangerous predators are kept behind bars and do not go out and commit additional sex crimes. Opponents said they opposed expanding the list of crimes because they believe the civil commitment law itself is too restrictive and ties the hands of judges. They noted that they supported an amendment giving judges the option of imposing either civil commitment or commitment to an intensive parole sex offender's program. The Senate later approved the House version of the bill that now needs final approval in each branch prior to going to Gov. Romney. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill. A "Nay" vote is against the bill).

Y

ALLOW INTENSIVE PAROLE FOR SEX OFFENDERS (S 1005)

House 21-133, rejected an amendment allowing judges the option of either sentencing dangerous sex offenders to civil commitment in a treatment center or commitment to an intensive parole sex offender's program. Amendment supporters said this would give judges another option and noted that one very intrusive and strict intensive parole program in Framingham has a zero recidivism rate and includes 24 hour electronic bracelet monitoring and lie detectors tests. They argued that very few offenders are actually civilly committed and said the intensive parole option prepares offenders for eventual release and would be used for many offenders who otherwise would simply go free after they serve their regular prison sentences. Some amendment opponents said the amendment is a step backwards and argued that civil commitment is the only reliable way to keep these dangerous sex offenders out of society. Others said the intensive parole option might be a good one but expressed concern that the amendment was not in the Senate version and that House adoption of the amendment would delay passage of the bill or even prevent it from being approved by the Senate. (A "Yea" vote is for the amendment adding intensive parole as an option. A "Nay" vote is against the option).

N

TAX RELIEF FOR SENIORS (H 4519)

Senate 36-0, gave near final approval to a bill providing tax relief for senior citizens. The measure changes the state's current so-called senior circuit breaker law that gives up to a maximum $810 state tax rebate to qualified low-income seniors whose property tax bills exceed ten percent of their annual income. The change would qualify seniors who meet low-income guidelines and own a home valued at less than $600,000, rather than the current $432,000 standard. Other provisions include raising from $750 to $1000 the amount of property tax credit seniors can earn by doing volunteer work for their city or town; allowing communities to raise the income level at which seniors can qualify for a property tax deferral program and reduce the current eight percent interest rate seniors pay on the deferred taxes; allowing communities to adopt a new low-income senior property tax exemption equal to up to 20 percent of a community's average assessed value of property and creating a program to inform seniors of tax breaks for which they qualify. Supporters said this targeted tax relief would help thousands of senior citizens living on fixed incomes and noted that most of the provisions are local option ones that leave the decision up to local communities. They noted that it is important to offer the circuit breaker tax relief to seniors who live in $600,000 homes because the recent skyrocketing of home values has not put money in senior's pockets but rather has excluded them from this popular and helpful tax break. The House approved a different version of the bill on a voice vote in February. The major difference is that the House draft also exempts qualified low-income senior from paying additional taxes resulting from Proposition 2 1/2 overrides. The Senate version now goes to the House for consideration. (A "Yea" vote is for the bill).

percent when the Deer Hill already had adequate space and the Middle-High School was underutilized.

f. Enrollment in the Cohasset School District has increased only 10.5 percent from FY01(actual 1339) to FY05(budgeted 1480).

g. Some have justified building the new Osgood School within 400 feet of the Deer Hill School because they(you can guess who) wanted a "campus" environment. Let's get real, since when did youngsters in Kindergarten through the fifth grade need a "campus." Well, it's payback time as we now have two small schools with separate administrative staffs, HVAC, custodial, maintenance and utilities requirements, not to mention poor traffic patterns, inadequate parking and a lack of adequate playing fields. All of these shortcomings could have been avoided if the new Osgood was not built and the Deer Hill was expanded to handle K-5 or K-6.

h. The Town has shifted maintenance costs and major repairs such as resurfacing Alumni Field to the Municipal side of the budget, but the School budget is still skyrocketing. Almost 20 percent of Cohasset residents send their youngsters to private or parochial schools, which should be, a "windfall" for the School District budget, but it does not seem to help. Maybe that is because the School District thinks that paying more is a guarantee of better performance. For calendar year 2003:

1. The Superintendent was paid $134,872.

2. The "clerk of the works" was paid $58,558 for CY01 and enjoyed a 61 percent raise to $94,134 for CY02 and $93,942 for CY03.

3. The School's business manager earned $93,742 in CY03. Some of his duties could have been done by a clerk, for example scheduling buses. His pay was almost $10,000 more than the Town's Director of Finance.

4. The Schools have now established four administrative levels: K-2, 3-5, 6-8 & 9-12 in a very small School District. Nearly all of the other approximately 350 school districts have only three levels; typically, K-5 or K-6, 6-8 or 7-9, and the High School.

The best MCAS result Cohasset has enjoyed was the first year of testing when none of the students had relocated to the new Osgood or the renovated Deer Hill/Middle-High School. Yes, we neglected the maintenance of schools until the point it had become a crisis, but we could have done the renovations for approximately $30,000,000 rather than $52,000,000. Next year our debt service will jump by $1,000,000 and will probably continue at that level for several more years. The likelihood of more overrides is great. By not looking forward, we put our money into bricks and mortar rather than our teachers. Town officials have left us no choice but to "pare down." The override must be defeated and we need to start acting with fiscal responsibility.

Energy systems at new schools

TO THE EDITOR:

There was a typesetting error in Mr. Collins' letter that ran last week. The corrected letter appears below.

As the school construction project nears completion, the School Building/Facilities Committee would like to share with residents some thoughts about energy costs and steps our committee took to design and implement energy efficient systems at Deer Hill and the Middle High School

High energy costs are an issue for everyone. We do not have to remind the public what is happening to fuel prices. This is one of the factors contributing to increased operating cost at our schools. Additionally, the size of Deer Hill School has increased by over 65 percent, and the Middle High School has more than doubled in size.

Air quality is an important concern. The Building Committee, through its architects and engineers, installed an efficient, modern fresh air system for the buildings, providing students and staff with. a healthy environment.

Our decision to convert from oil to gas was based on economy, concern for the environment, and lower maintenance costs.

All building systems — including lighting, heating, and air conditioning — were designed with the optimum energy-saving technology available. During the building process, resident construction professionals reviewed the plans, added helpful commentary, and supported the design. The state School Building Assistance Program allows for a flat rate per square foot within the project for construction and renovation costs. Cohasset's proposal was at the maximum limit. The Building Committee applied for and received a grant under the National Grid Design 2000 Program, which. reimburses schools for installing better, more efficient lighting and mechanical systems. The town of Cohasset received more than $50,000 in reimbursements and now benefits from continuous savings in energy as these systems operate.

Both Deer Hill School and the Middle High School had exceeded their 50-year life expectancy. The town of Cohasset is fortunate to have initiated a building renovation and construction program when it did. "Had we waited, Cohasset would possibly qualify for only a 40 percent reimbursement, rather than the 60 percent reimbursement we are now receiving.

Members of the School Building/Facilities Committee are proud of the new schools we have built for the town of Cohasset, which have been completed on time and within budget.

Scott Collins, Vice Chairman,
School Building/Facilities Committee

Override actual dollars at stake

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter is neither for nor against the proposed Cohasset $400,000 override to be voted on at the polls in a few days. The data on the financial impact of the override presented in the Town Warrant is, perhaps, incomplete and may be confusing to the average voter — and does not include data that presents an objective, quantitative assessment of the actual costs of the override and other non-override increases to a Cohasset homeowner who pays for the override in perpetuity in his/her real estate tax bill. To explain, a general override, once approved by the voters, is not a one-year, one-time increase, as some believe. Rather, it remains in the base real estate tax rate forever. It is paid every year, year after year after year, etc.

So ... what is the actual, real cost of the proposed fiscal 2005 override to the homeowner? A reasonable presentation of this cost would be to calculate it for, say, the 30 years a homeowner might reside in his or her Cohasset residence, perhaps having purchased the residence with a typical 30-year mortgage. Another reasonable assumption used is that the taxpayer could earn an average 5 percent per year investment return on these finds if they were not paid out in increased taxes each year, or save 5+ percent per year over many years by using the funds to pay down the mortgage rather than paying the tax increase.

Thus, the actual total cost for a 30-year period for the proposed $400,000 override, for a residence with an assessed valuation of $725,000 is $11,720. For a residence assessed at $950,000, the cost is $15,360. For a residence assessed at $1,450,000, the cost of the override is $23,440. For the residence example used in the Warrant write-up, assessed at $560,000, the cost of the override is $9,050 over the 30-year occupancy period assumed.

For your further information, note that a general override was also voted in 2003, and it is clear that another override will most likely be presented in March of 2005 for fiscal 2006. An additional override of at least $400,000 since the apparent principal cause of the overrides, the employee pay contracts, has another year to run after fiscal 2005. Thus, these three sequential overrides, if approved by the voters (note the override of 2003 for fiscal 2004 was already voter-approved last year), will have an actual dollar cost over 30 years to the homeowner of (a) $33,120 for a home assessed at $725,000; (b) $43,400 for a home assessed at $950,000; and (c) $25,580 for a home assessed at only $560,000.

As is noted later, all of the preceding numbers are only for the override increased taxes. These numbers actually more than double when the already approved tax increases up to the 2 1/2 percent limit are included.

These override costs to the taxpaying homeowner are significant sums of money. These are the reasons that the Massachusetts citizens, via a ballot initiative, voted Prop 2 1/2 into law about 20 years ago. Prop 2 1/2 gives the individual homeowner/voter a chance to assess the value of what he/she is buying vs. the costs to be paid. Prop 2 1/2 was primarily intended to instill financial responsibility and, especially, financial accountability in all public officials, as well as in the taxpaying citizens.

It might be useful if, for future proposed budget overrides, the Town provided the actual total, longer term costs of an override to the voters. Perhaps the Advisory Committee may want to adopt this function. Transparency on these tax increase costs is necessary.

The reality is that this one override for fiscal 2005, which may or may not be justified or acceptable to voters, will cost the taxpayers of Cohasset at least $12,000,000 over the next 30 years, and actually cost almost $28,000,000 over that period under the reasonable assumption that, on average, the taxpayers could earn 5 percent per year during that period if the money was not paid out each year in taxes. These numbers merit thoughtful evaluation of the pros and cons of the override.

The sum for all three overrides discussed in this letter, covering fiscal 2004-2006, adds up to a minimum cost to taxpayers for the 30-year period of $34,500,000, or over $80,000,000 assuming 5 percent per year could be earned, on average, if the funds were not paid out in taxes. These numbers do not include any "debt exclusion" overrides nor do they include the annual increases in taxes up to the 2 1/2 percent increase limit which do not require a Town-wide ballot vote approval. These tax increases up to the 2 1/2 percent limit are in the budget and are real and must be paid. If the overrides are approved, then the numbers above are more than doubled!

As example, just for the fiscal 2005 year, the "allowed" 2 1/2 percent increase in taxes, which are in the budget, approximate $500,000. Thus, coupled with the proposed $400,000 override, the total 2005 increase is $900,000 which is $27,000,000 in minimum cost to taxpayers for the 30-year period and a cost of $63,000,000 assuming the average 5 percent could be earned if the dollars were not paid out in taxes.

I trust that the data presented in this letter is informative, if not also useful. Voting for or against an override is a serious fiduciary responsibility that Prop 2 1/2 places on each taxpayer. When you consider the magnitude of the dollars involved over a period of time, it is easy to understand why some cities and towns avoid proposing overrides and/or vote them down, and the use of overrides is reserved for rare, unusual situations where an override is justified, such as a large, one-time capital project.

Once tasted, overrides, like candy, can become addictive. As the child in the backseat of the car frequently asks, "Are we there yet?"

Seizing the reins

New coach hopes to keep CHS laxmen in state's elite class

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

By all accounts, the hiring of Stu Curran to take over the Cohasset High boys lacrosse team was a very popular one.

The Hull native certainly has the track record -- having coached successfully at both the college and high school levels previously and earned respect as a referee as well-- and is well known and liked by many in the Cohasset lacrosse community. Whatsmore, he knows a lot of the Cohasset players from his involvement in youth lacrosse and the Bay State Games.

"He's a great fit for so many reasons," notes Cohasset Athletic Director Ron Ford.

"Yeah, but as soon as I lose two or three in a row, someone will be calling for my head," countered Curran with a laugh. "That's what happens when you take over a program as successful as Cohasset's."

Yeah, he's having us on, but this is Stu's way of acknowledging the high expectations that come along with assuming control over a program that has posted a .750 winning percentage over the last three years. He insists, though, that he wouldn't have it any other way.

"I expect to compete very well in our conference and by the end of the year be in good position to go deep in to the tourney," said Curran, 51, a former head coach at Babson College, Emerson College and Brookline High.

Bold statement, especially taking into account what the Skippers lost to graduation.

Graduation 2003 claimed eight seniors-- Robert Hickey, Tom Anderson, Evan Pestone and Ben Lynner, John Durkin, Nick Spirito, Curt Kahn and Matt Davis—all of them multi-year starters, the latter four Mariner All-Scholastic honorees.

"These eight guys were mainstays since the day I took the job," said Curran's predecessor,

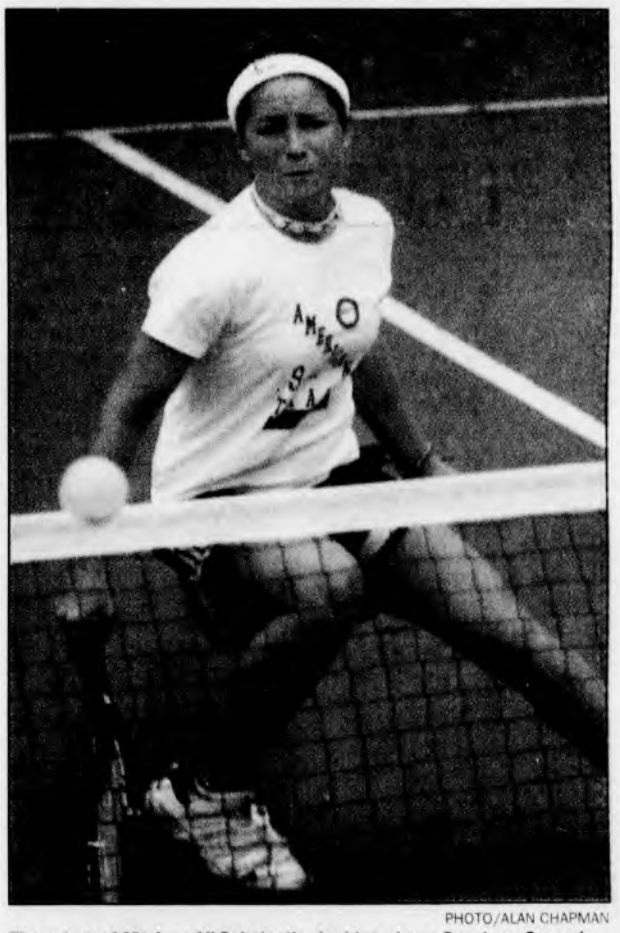
No re-lax-ing on laurels

CHS girls face steep challenge to extend postseason streak to four

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Torin Sweeney isn't being cagey when he say he has no idea how things might shake out for his Cohasset High girls lacrosse squad this season. He means it.

"At this point, I really have no idea what to expect," said Sweeney, who will officially kick off his third season at the helm when the Lady Skippers travel to Sandwich on Tuesday. "For starters, we're in a very competitive league, so it's tough to say right now where the strength might lie in the league. I'd say we have a more balanced attack this year than we did last, but we've got a lot of questions on defense, especially now that we've lost Libby for the year."



Libby Meikleham, a senior co-captain, was expected to anchor a young defense this season, but a torn ACL suffered last month playing indoor lacrosse has put the kibosh on her final high school athletic season.

"That leaves a huge hole for us," said Sweeney, who was already looking to fill voids left by the graduation of defensive standouts Nell Brewer, Catherine Coyne and Julie Lordan, the latter two captains and four year starters.

This increases what already looked to be a huge load on the shoulders of the other senior co-captain, Ashley Faber. Faber will play third home and is expected to quarterback both the defense and attack this season.

"Ashley is a huge two-way player for us," said Sweeney.

The return of Mariner All-Scholastic doubles player Courtney Caron is just one of the reasons the Lady Skippers feel good about their chances to contend for another state title.

All-Scholastic Wrestling team

Cohasset's Baroudi, Kehoe and Strazzulla named among area's elite

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one. There was an abundance of wrestling talent on the South Shore this season. Making the most noise, however, were those from Weymouth. The Wildcats completed a 23-2 season, captured their seventh-straight Div. 1 South Sectional title, and finished fourth at the Div. 1 State Championships. The squad also won their 14th Bay State League title in 15 seasons and won the Whitman/Hanson tournament and their own.

Several of the young men you see listed below as "Honorable Mentions" received serious consideration for All-Scholastic acknowledgement.

In the end, however, we limited ourselves to a team of just 18, and, after consulting with area coaches, we do feel secure that we chose the top wrestlers in Marinerland for this honor:

Phil Strazzulla - Senior (Capt.)
145 - Cohasset

Phil makes his second appearance as an All-Scholastic selectee…this two-year captain wrapped up his spectacular career by placing seventh at the New England Wrestling championships… won the Div. 3 state championship this year, topping the same wrestler who'd beaten him the week before at

CHS girls tennis team kicks off run toward state title defense today

By Mike Spellman
MSPELLMAN@CNC.COM

Can they say repeat?

The defending state champion Cohasset High girls tennis team kicks off what its members hope will be another season of glory this afternoon when South Shore League arch-rival Norwell comes to town.

"These girls are ready to play," reports veteran CHS coach Gigi Meehan. "This is the most comfortable I've ever felt going into a season with my team's level of preparedness. A lot of these girls have worked hard in the winter, and that's really showing right now."

Meehan's confidence is also helped along by the fact that five of the seven members from last year's team return, including star first singles player Elizabeth Stone, a junior.

Stone put together a superb 16-2 sophomore season, her only two losses coming in the postseason to top ranked New England players at a time when she was playing through an ankle injury.

The losses to graduation of Lindsay Grossman and Julie Shea -- last year's second singles standout and half of a sensational first doubles team, respectively--will certainly be felt. Reports are, though, that several of the girls who have been waiting in the wings are primed to step it up this spring.

Senior Holly Graham is also back for her third year of singles play, and will likely flip flop for now between the second and third spot with sophomore Chelsea Grossman (Lindsay's sister). Chelsea got some playing time last year when Stone was injured, and is among those coach Meehan considers "much improved."

"Chelsea is one of the girls who's really surprised me with how much she's improved," said Meehan. "I've actually got another four or five girls who look like they are ready for playing time."

One of these up and comers will team with senior Courtney Caron, Shea's partner at first dou-

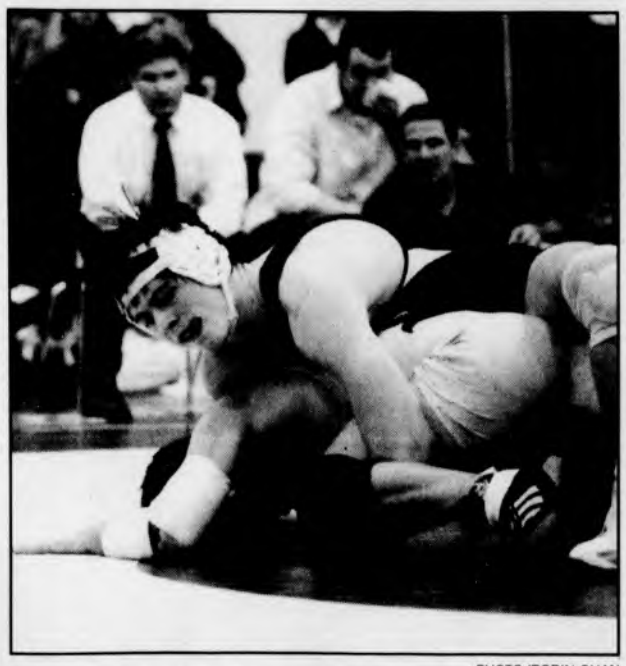
Sectionals (Foxboro's Nick Avery) in the title bout...also took seconds at the Div. 3 South Sectional and All-State championships...put together a 35-4 season, which included only one regular season loss, and he avenged that loss at All-States...season highlights included a victory over defending state champ Jared Laganas (Dracut) at All-States...finishes his career with the third highest wins total in the storied history of Cohasset High wrestling (111)...21st year CHS coach Torin Sweeney calls him the most "technically adept wrestler" he's ever had... went 33-3 regular season as a junior and took third at Sectionals and fourth at the States that year...played soccer his freshman year at CHS, but decided to concentrate on wrestling after that...one of the few two-year captains the CHS wrestling program has ever had...wrestles for Orange Crush in the off-season, and has also attended several wrestling camps, including a nationally lauded camp in Pennsylvania the last two summers...trained on weekends in-season at Harvard with elite high school wrestlers from all over the state... Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic...member of the Cohasset crew team in the fall...National Honor Society member...has a 3.9 GPA and takes a couple of AP courses...Student Council Member...former class President and Treasurer...hopes to wrestle in college...B.C., University of Miami and NYU are his top three choices...teaches youth wrestling and hopes to continue doing so in the future... Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney: "Phil is just a student of wrestling. He took the time to learn everything he could. He was a perfect leader on and off the mat. He's a great kid— classy, very smart, extremely committed academically."

Joey Kehoe - Junior
140 - Cohasset

Joey Kehoe

The Div. 3 state champion this year, topping the same wrestler who'd beaten him the week before at Sectionals (Foxboro's Brian Dietzel)...qualified for New England's, but was knocked out in a first round one-point loss...Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic...finished second at Sectionals for the third year in a row...took fourth at All-States...was 25-3 in the regular season and 39-8 overall... placed sixth at Div. 3 states as a sophomore and earned a Mariner All-Scholastic Honorable Mention...a three year varsity starter who has advanced to states all three years...has a chance to move into Cohasset High's all-time top five wins list... also plays football for CHS...trains in off season with former Scituate High wrestling star Joe Hayes...wrestles for Orange Crush in the off-season... made Honor Roll last term ...a motorcycle enthusiast...would like to wrestle in college...leaning toward majoring in Engineering...Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney: "Joey can take down anyone. He's extremely powerful double leg. He started just about every match with a quick two point lead with a takedown, and then he's a dominant wrestler when he gets on top because his legs are so strong.."

Matt Baroudi - Junior
215 - Cohasset



Matt Baroudi

A two-time Mariner All-Scholastic and two-time New England Wrestling qualifier...closed out junior year by taking sixth at New England's...the Div. 3 state champion...also took second at Sectionals and fourth at All-States...Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic...overall record this year was 39-6...three year varsity wrestler is expected to top 100 wins for his career and may move onto Cohasset High's all-time top five list...considered state championship win and first win at New England's the highlights of his season... also plays football and lacrosse at CHS...wrestles year round with Orange Crush...would like to wrestle in college...little brother of former CHS wrestling star Terry Baroudi (another two time Mariner All-Scholastic and New England's qualifier)...Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney: "Matt is big, strong and tough, and his athleticism and quickness set him apart at his weight class. He wrestles year round and that's made a big difference too."

Andrew Keefe - Senior
171 - Weymouth

One of a host of talented wrestlers, Keefe finished a strong fifth at the New England Championships, where he wrestled four state champions...Along the way, Keefe finished second at the Div. 1 South Sectionals, second at the Div. 1 States, and sixth at All-States...During the regular season, Keefe won the Whitman/Hanson tourney...His performance this season helped the Wildcats finish at 23-2, win the Bay State League title and their seventh-straight Div. 1 South Sectional Championship. Weymouth coach Kevin Mackin: "He finished among an elite group at New Englands as the top three have Div. 1 scholarships. He's a tremendous worker and just a great all-around kid."

Dennis Jones - Senior

Cohasset's Joey Kehoe (top) was a state champ and New England championship qualifier.

Another standout for the Wildcats, Jones also made the trip to the New England Championships this season...Along the way, Jones won the Div. 1 South Sectional, finished third at Div. 1 States, and fifth at All-States...During the regular season, Jones won titles at the Whitman/Hanson, Weymouth, and North Attleboro tourneys, while finishing a strong fifth at the Lowell tourney...His contributions resulted in the Wildcats winning the Bay State League and Div. 1 South Sectional titles. Weymouth coach Kevin Mackin: "He's wrestles with a lot of finesse and technique. He's great at the top position where he is likely to turn his opponent and score points on tilts."

Mike Chicchese - Senior
119 - Weymouth

This talented middle-weight is making his second-straight appearance on the All-Scholastic team following another strong year...Chicchese won the Div. 1 South Sectional title for the second-straight year, finished second at the Div. 1 State Championships and went on to All-States...Chicchese also won titles at the Whitman/Hanson and Weymouth tourneys, while finishing second at North Attleboro and fifth at Lowell...The Wildcats (23-2) won the South title and were third at Div. 1 States. Weymouth coach Kevin Mackin: "Mike is very good on his feet, but has really made a name for himself with his cradles."

Sid Reeves - Senior
215 - Weymouth

After a solid regular season, Reeves continued going strong into the postseason before injuring himself at the Div. 1 State Championships...Reeves still managed a third-place finish in that meet, qualifying him for the All-States...A week earlier, Reeves finished second at the Div. 1 South Sectionals, helping Weymouth (23-2) capture the title for the seventh-straight year...Won titles at the Whitman/Hanson and Weymouth tourneys, defeating Cohasset standout and 4th in New England Matt Baroudi in the process...Also a standout football player at WHS. Weymouth coach Kevin Mackin: "He's extremely polished, which is a rarity among big guys. He's really made a name for himself."

Darren Burke - Senior
135 - Weymouth

As one of Weymouth's more versatile wrestlers, Burke competed in a trio of weight classes this season, all with great success...In addition to competing at 140 and 145, Burke made his mark in the 135 class...Here, Burke took second at the Div. 1 South Sectional, which Weymouth (23-2) won, and went on to take fourth at the Div. 1 State Championships, qualifying him for All-States...During the regular season, Burke won a title at the Whitman/Hanson tourney, defeating Div. 3 State Champ Cohasset's Joe Kehoe. Weymouth coach Kevin Mackin: "He was dangerous because he pins a lot. We bumped him all over the place and he did a great job."

Scott Keeley - Junior
160 - Weymouth

Brought home a Div. 1 South Sectional title, helping the Wildcats win the championship for the seventh-straight season...From there, Keeley finished fourth at the Div. 1 State Championships, qualifying for All-States...His efforts helped the Wildcats capture the Bay State League Championship and finish third at the Div. 1 State Meet...During the regular season, Keeley won a title at the Whitman/Hanson tourney...Also a standout football and lacrosse player at WHS. Weymouth coach Kevin Mackin: "He's a tremendous athlete and he carried that athleticism onto the mat."

Ross O'Toole - Freshman
103 - Weymouth

The new kid on the block, O'Toole made quite a name for himself this season...Racked up 31 wins in the 103 class this year...Won the title at the Div. 1 South Sectional, helping the Wildcats capture their seventh-straight title...He went onto compete at the Div. 1 State meet and has caught the eye of several of our area coaches...Also took the top spot at the Whitman/Hanson tourney and broke several WHS freshmen records...His performance as a lightweight helped Weymouth win the Bay State League title...O'Toole will obviously be a top returnee next season. Weymouth coach Kevin Mackin: "Ross is very aggressive. He had a goal to be the best freshman wrestler at WHS and pretty much shattered every record we had."

Paul Robinson - Junior
112 - Rockland

After suffering a heartbreaking setback by not making weight at last year's Div. 3 South Sectionals, Robinson returned in style with a trip to the New England Championships... Finished second at the Div. 3 South Sectional, was fourth at the Div. 3 State Meet, and a strong sixth at the All-State Championships...Made the jump to 112 this season after wrestling at 103 the last two years and is one of the better lightweights on the South Shore...A three-time Patriot League All-star, Robinson also plays football and track at RHS.

Bryan Sforza - Senior
130 - Rockland

Following the strong wrestling tradition in his family, Sforza capped his career with a solid season...The senior was the runner-up at the Div. 3 South Sectionals this season and went on to finish a strong fourth at the Div. 3 State Championships...Competed at the All-State Meet...Was named a Patriot League All-star this season and helped the Bulldogs to a third-place finish in the final standings...Also a football player at RHS.

Jim Egan - Junior
103 - Hanover

It was a breakout year for this talented lightweight...Egan won his first Div. 3 South Sectional title this season and went on to finish third at the Div. 3 State Meet...Egan competed at the All-State Championships as well...His performance this season earned him a spot on the Patriot League All-star team and he helped the Indians capture second in the PL standings...Set a new HHS record for pins in a single season with 26...Egan will obviously be a top returnee next season. Hanover wrestling coach Bill Dunn: "Egan is one of the hardest workers on the team. He works on his sport continually. Jim plans to keep working on his skills and continue the hard work right through the summer months and into the next school year."

Guy Matisis - Junior
189 - Hingham

A standout on the Hingham team for the last two seasons, Matisis won his second-straight Div. 2 South Sectional title this year and went on to the Div. 2 State Championships...Was a key member of the Harbormen team that won the Sectional title in 2002...Matisis racked up 38 wins this season and was named co-wrestler of the year by teammates...Also a standout running back on the HHS football team, Matisis is making his second appearance on our All-Scholastic squad...He will be a top returning grappler next season.

Stephen Barry - Junior
135 - Scituate

Stephen Barry

This is the third All-Scholastic honoring for Barry... wrapped up his marvelous high school career by capturing the Div. 3 South Sectional crown, and then lost by just one point the following week, 8-7, in the Div. 3 state championships, his first loss of the season after 27 wins...also won a match at the All-State championships the following week to finish his season with a 28-3 record...had a big regular season win over New England Championships qualifier Joe Kehoe, of Cohasset...was ranked top 10 in his weight class for most of the season...hopes to wrestle in college...a year round wrestler who has attended several renowned wrestling camps, including the Jay Robinson Clinic in Minnesota...has also done Orange Crush and Grizzly Wrestling camps...is being recruited by coaches from Bridgewater State College and Roger Williams...leaning toward majoring in Criminal Justice with an eye toward a career law enforcement ...Scituate coach Greg Ranieri: "Steven is a very talented wrestler and was an outstanding leader for our very young team. He was undefeated in the regular season action and dominated his competition right through the 135-pound sectional championship. I am proud to have coached Steven and appreciate the hard work he put in for our program."

Christian Vercollone - Junior
130 - Silver Lake

Christian Vercollone

Another two-time Mariner All-Scholastic ... Pembroke resident became the first Silver Lake wrestler to qualify for New England's since 2001 after placing sixth at All-States...won the Div. 1 South Sectional championship, then took second at States before his sixth place finish at All-States...lost his only match at New England's...posted a 23-2 regular season record, his only two losses coming in late December at the Marshfield Tourney...unbeaten in dual meets...the fifth Vercollone to star in multiple sports at Silver Lake...also the fifth of 11 children...one-year older brother Anthony is also a member of this

COASTAL STARS YOUTH HOCKEY

Mite C1, C3

Coastal Stars versus Coastal Stars, South versus North. This past weekend featured a Yankee League playoff game between the Stars Mites C-3 team winners of the South Division against the Stars C-1 team winners of the North Division. The Mites C-3 team emerged victorious with a 6-1 win after a hard skating, action packed contest, which pit two teams that had only one regular season loss between them. Stars C-1 applied tremendous offensive pressure during the first period only to be stymied by superb goaltending by Max Hemingway, who made several acrobatic saves. Some late period offensive rushes by the C-3 forwards were equally denied by C-1 net minder Burchill. The first period ended in a scoreless tie. The C-3 team found their skating legs in the second period picking up the intensity and controlling the flow of the play. James Daley finally got the C-3 team on the scoreboard netting his first of four goals early in the second period on a behind the net feed by winger Mark McGoldrick. Stars wingers Curtis Golden and Hugh Healey had several quality scoring opportunities on feeds from center Ryan Davis. The C-3 defensive pairing of Sam Topham and Garrett Leahy and gritty play of winger Bryan Bowman forced the play in the offensive zone and allowed James Daley to rifle two more blistering wrist shots past the opposing goaltender. The second period ended with a 3-0 score. The third period saw C-3 defensemen Ryan Melia, Declan Leahy, Jake Denton and Jeffrey Powers skate hard and break-up several opposing rushes while killing off two C-1 power plays. Center Robert Gargano and wingers Andrew Tautkus and Matthew Tautkus attempted to convert on several offensive thrusts only to be denied with solid shot blocks from the C-1 defense. The C-3 team scored their fourth tally on a brilliant pass play from James Daley to Sam Topham who "one-timed" the puck past the goalie. After a goal scored by the Stars C-1 team James Daley scored his fourth goal by lifting the puck over the fallen goaltender. Garrett Leahy concluded the scoring late in the third period scoring on a rebound from in front of the crease on a shot from Mark McGoldrick. Stars C-3 goaltender Max Hemingway played solid throughout the game and turned away many opposing quality shots to preserve the victory. A great skating contest by two playoff caliber teams. Best of luck to both clubs as they advance in the playoffs.

Mite A

The Mite A Coastal Stars finished an excellent regular season with a spirited, 2-1 win against a tough Braintree team. Will Golden got the Stars the early lead on a gritty, end-to-end rush with 11:08 left in the first. After skating past the defense, Golden beat the goaltender with an impossible fake and tucked a backhander into the left side of the cage. Braintree went hard at Connor Maher and the Stars defense, but Maher was impenetrable and racked up nine saves in the period. Kevin McDougall used his speed to break up several rushes, and Jeremy Duchini stepped up for a key steal. Jared McCrystal was solid in front of his net and at the blue line. With just over seven minutes left in the second period, Ken Parnell won the fight at the blue line to keep the puck in the zone and passed to Will Golden on the left side. Golden fed Terrence Doonan in the slot, and T-Dog one-timed a wrister to the five-hole for the 2-0 lead. The Stars pressured Braintree consistently and had several close chances, as Jake McDonough, Tommy Dixon and Chris Cohen buzzed the net, Jonathan Spitz' shot from the left side was saved, and Will DeCoste was robbed on a backhander set up by a nice feed from Colin Whelan. The Stars picked up a penalty with thirty seconds left in the period. Braintree capitalized with the power play goal with 16:40 left in the third. Connor Maher then made a fantastic glove save on a shot headed to the top right corner, and a kick save on a tipped shot through a crowd, to preserve the lead. Brian Smith and Andrew Geddes were instrumental in keeping Braintree at bay with their tight, steady defense. The Braintree netminder kept his team in the game with larcenies against Will Golden and Will DeCoste. Frank Lemieux beat the defense to the puck, bulled his way to the front of the net, and was denied point-blank. Braintree pulled its goalie for the man advantage with 1:03 left in the game, but the Stars were the team that applied the pressure and maintained its lead for a satisfying end to its regular season.

All-Scholastic Wrestling team

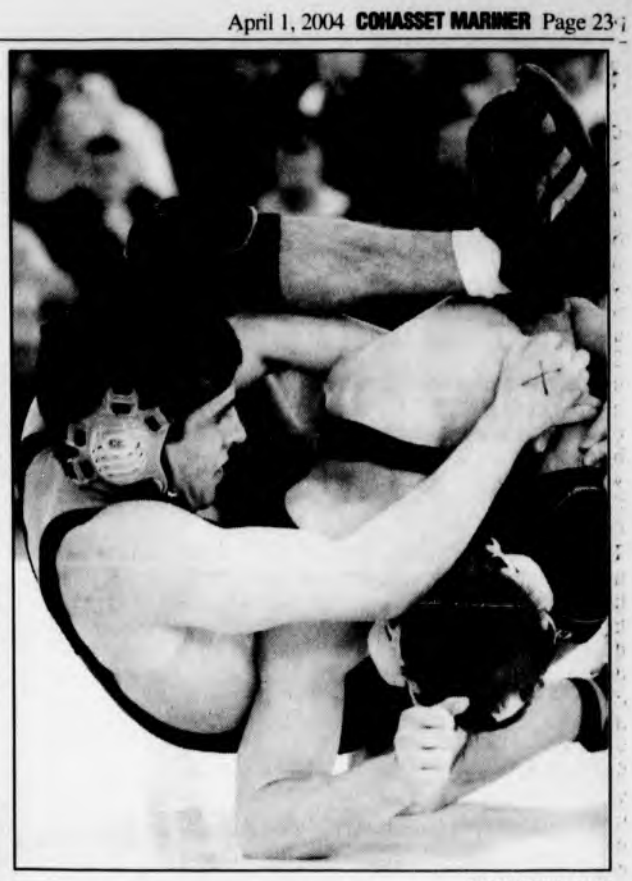
All-Scholastic team and brother Luke (now playing soccer with the New England Revolution) was also a sectional champ…went 21-3 in his sophomore regular season…not bad, considering this is his second favorite sport…Christian is a serious year round soccer player who starred for the OCL champion Lakers this fall and has played on both the state and regional Olympic Developmental Program soccer teams …obviously, an exceptional athlete…was named a Mariner All-Scholastic Honorable Mention for soccer the last two years…hopes to follow older brothers Luke and J.P. and play Div. 1 college soccer…Silver Lake coach Matt Sheridan: "I can't say enough good things about Christian. He's a great wrestler, obviously. But I got to know him during our weekend at New England's, and he's a great kid too. This kid has a bright future in and out of athletics."

Anthony Vercollone-Senior
140 - Silver Lake

Anthony Vercollone



What a senior year…this is the second Mariner All-Scholastic honoring in three months for Anthony, as he also made our soccer team after playing a huge role this fall in leading the SL team to an Old Colony League championship…won the Div. 1 South Sectional championship…at State's the following week, he missed by one spot of qualifying for All-States in a very tough weight class…put together a 15-3 regular season, with losses to three top opponents (including one to fellow All-Scholastic Joey Kehoe of Cohasset)…also earned All Eastern Mass. and OCL all-star honors for soccer this fall…an accomplished vocalist who performs in a barbershop quartet and was the lead in the recent school musical production of "Snoopy"…exceptional athlete… the fourth Vercollone to star in multiple sports at Silver Lake…also the fourth of 11 children…one-year younger brother Christian is also a member of this All-Scholastic team and brother Luke was also a sectional champ…3.1 GPA…leaning toward attending St. Anselms College and majoring in Communications…Silver Lake coach Matt Sheridan: "Anthony was a game day guy. He had so many activities outside of wrestling, but when the match came I always knew just what I was going to get out of him. He has a lot of talent and a lot of athleticism."

Joe Alfano- Senior (Capt.)
125- Braintree

Joe Alfano

Closed out an excellent four year career by placing sixth at the Div. 2 state championships, losing his last two matches by one point to fall just short of qualifying for All-State championships…placed fourth at Sectionals in an extremely tough weight class…posted a team best 30-8 record, with several of his losses coming to top wrestlers, to help the Wamps to a winning season…also a standout for the BHS lacrosse team…finished with over 60 wins for his career in three season of varsity wrestling…wrestled at a lauded off season camp at the U.S. Naval Academy…has also wrestled off season in the Weymouth Grizzly program…Honor Roll student last semester…also a standout lacrosse player at Braintree High… played BHS soccer his freshman year…hopes to play college lacrosse…Western New England and UMass-Dartmouth are his top two choices…plans to major in Business…Braintree coach Mike Bochman: "Joe was a selfless wrestler. He'd go wherever he was needed, even bumping up to wrestle a top opponent, and that's where a lot of his losses came from. He was a team first guy and a good leader."

Cohasset sixth grade traveling team player Lindsay Allard (#23) covers Whitman player during playoff action last weekend at Cohasset High

Seventh grade hoopsters win OCL title

It doesn't matter if it is the National Basketball Association, or girl's seventh grade weekend basketball, if your team has speed, height, plays great defense, and has an explosive fast break, you will win most of the time. In the case of The Cohasset 7th Grade Girls Old Colony League team, you will win all of time. Well, 15 times in a row anyway.

This year's squad brought an unwavering determination to show the league powerhouses Bridgewater & Whitman, just which team was going to be the one to beat, and take home the League title. Ending the regular season at 12-0, Cohasset was the top seed as the playoffs begun. Many of the girls from last year's team remembered how quickly and disappointing it can be to get knocked out by a lower seeded team as they fell to Marshfield in the first round of last years playoffs.

As fate would have it, Cohasset faced Marshfield again this year in the first round.

Same team, same gym, same time, different year—different story. Cohasset won, and advanced to play defending Champions Bridgewater in the semi-final game.

Cohasset jumped all over Bridgewater using the half court trap and fast break to send last years champs home with a 30-19 defeat. Bring on Whitman!!

Let's just say that the game was, um, physical. If you are up in the middle of the night watching cable, you can occasionally catch a game of Australian football on one of the sports channels. The Cohasset vs. Whitman game looked something like that.

Although the game wasn't pretty, winning the championship game 21-14 was a thing of beauty. And the 13 smiling faces holding trophies—a work of art.

Introducing the 15-0, 2004 Seventh Grade Girls Old Colony League Champions:

Maura "that wasn't a foul" Barnes

Natalie "somebody get me a scrunchie" Beukers

Tess "can't miss from the corner" Calorio

Grace "can I be captain?" Clougherty

Gabriella "I want that Jacket" Flibotte

Natalie "lefty" Hunt

Madeline "I have a question" Leahy

Samantha "this is more fun than soccer, just don't tell Mr. Coggins" Lehr

Rachel "no height—no problem" McMorris

Carly " I'm open!" Salerno

Marissa "I only look nervous" Tangherlini

Liz "big plays from the high post" Tetreault

And last but certainly not least..

Carley "Hey, Mr. Salerno watch this" Zappolo

Great season girls. You are going to look good in those jackets.

No re-lax-ing on laurels

"She has the ability to make things happen at both ends of the field, and that's what we'll be looking for from her."

Another veteran defender who will have more responsibility heaped on her as a result of the Meikelham injury is cover point Christen Reardon, one of six senior returning seniors with extensive varsity experience.

"We don't have a lot of experience on defense," said Sweeney, who has directed the CHS lady laxers to a 7-7 record last year, clinching his second state tourney berth in as many years at the helm. "Christen is just one of the girls we'll be looking to to step it up even more with Libby no longer in there."

And sophomore netminder Joanna Hamilton is another. She steps into the big shoes of two-year starter Gia Petrakis, another 2003 casualty to the caps and gowns and a Mariner All-Scholastic honorable mention.

"Joanna has looked pretty good so far," said Sweeney, also CHS's golf and wrestling coach. "She went to goalie camp this summer, so she's taking this seriously. She's working hard."

Fortunately, Sweeney has reason to hope his defense will face less pressure this spring than it did last year, believing his team will be stronger in the midfield and up front.

Last year's team relied heavily on senior captain Maura McKenney, a two time Mariner All-Scholastic who scored a career total 118 goals, including a team best 40 last season. Sweeney feels, though, he has several girls poised for breakout seasons who should help produce a more balanced assault in 2004.

Senior Nicole Turgiss emerged as a noteworthy complimentary threat to McKenney last spring, and actually finished just behind her in the team scoring race, netting 38 goals on the season. She's one of the fastest players in the Pilgrim Conference and also possesses a big shot.

Fortunately, Turgiss is also an adept passer and reads the field well. So, when the double downs come on her, and they will, Sweeney expects she'll have good options on both sides of the net in senior wingers Meghan Marr and Jessie Guild.

"Nicole will draw a lot of attention, so Meghan and Jessie should get their opportunities to score," said Sweeney. "I think they're both ready to take that next step."

Experience will be a strong suit in the middle of the field with key returning starters Lauren Rizzoti and Lisa Spirito, as well as senior playmaker Kara Flint.

Rizzotti, a third year junior starter, was the third leading scorer last year with 25 goals and much of the offense will go through her, as she also has strong playmaking abilities. Spirito, a sophomore and a top notch athlete, closed out her freshman year strong to finish with 15 goals.

"I'm hoping for another .500 season or better," concluded Sweeney. "I feel we have some nice pieces of the puzzle. It's just tough to say at this point how it's all going to come together."

Can they say repeat?

bles the last two seasons. Junior Rachel Garber appeared to have that spot sewn up for today's opener, but Meehan indicated that little about her lineup beyond today is cast in stone...that is other than Stone.

Junior Emma Grinnell and sophomores Amelia Shea (Julie's sister), Susan Curry and Katie Bolger are also making a strong bid for varsity court time.

The second doubles tandem will remain, for now, the senior duo of Emilie Sullivan and Corey Evans, partners since their freshmen years.

"I'd like to think we have the talent to make a run at another state title," said Meehan. "But, even if we do, I know it's going to be that much harder because everyone is gunning for us now. Every ne of our players is going to have to work even harder if we're going to have a chance at that."

Ten Star All Star Basketball Camp

Learn to skate classes at Weymouth and Quincy Shea rinks

A new winter series of ice skating classes will be held at the Weymouth MDC rink located on Broad Street and at the Quincy Shea MDC rink on Willard Street. Classes are for boys and girls ages 41/2 and up as well as adults. Separate skill classes are held at the beginner, intermediate and advanced levels. Skaters can wear either figure or hockey skates and helmets are required for ages 41/2 through 7. Each class includes a small group lesson and a supervised practice.

Classes at the Weymouth O'Connell Rink are held Sundays at 5 p.m. Classes at the Quincy Shea Rink are held Fridays at 4 p.m. or Sundays at 11 a.m.

Bay State Skating School has 35 years of experience holding Learn to Skate classes. Programs are held at 15 DCR rink locations including Cambridge, Cleveland Circle, Hyde Park/Dedham, Lynn, Medford Flynn, Medford LoConte, Neponset/Dorchester, Newton - Brighton, Quincy, Revere, Somerville, South Boston, Waltham, West Roxbury and Weymouth.

Professional instructors teach beginner, intermediate and advanced levels. Many families enjoy taking the lessons together; there are separate instructors for children and adults. Have fun and learn to skate.

To register or for additional information, call the Bay State Skating School at 781-890-8480 or visit www.baystateskatingschool.org.

Kevin Orcutt. "It didn't take me long after I started (At CHS) to discover the (2001) sophomore class was the foundation of this program. Those guys all had talent, but, more than that, they all had a great work ethic, and a willingness to do whatever was necessary to win."

Curran is already starting to develop similar feelings for this year's senior class, 11 strong and led by captains Mike Devine, Conor Buick, Mark Davis, Dewayne Morris and Nick Murphy.

"So far, it looks like this is going to be a real strong group," said Curran. "We've got six or seven who contributed mightily to last year's success, and the should all be even better this year once they get rolling."

It'll take a little longer for some of these seniors to get rolling. Returning standout attackman Mike Rasmussen will likely need at least a couple more weeks to recoup from a broken wrist suffered in the CHS hockey team's second round playoff loss to Bourne three weeks ago.

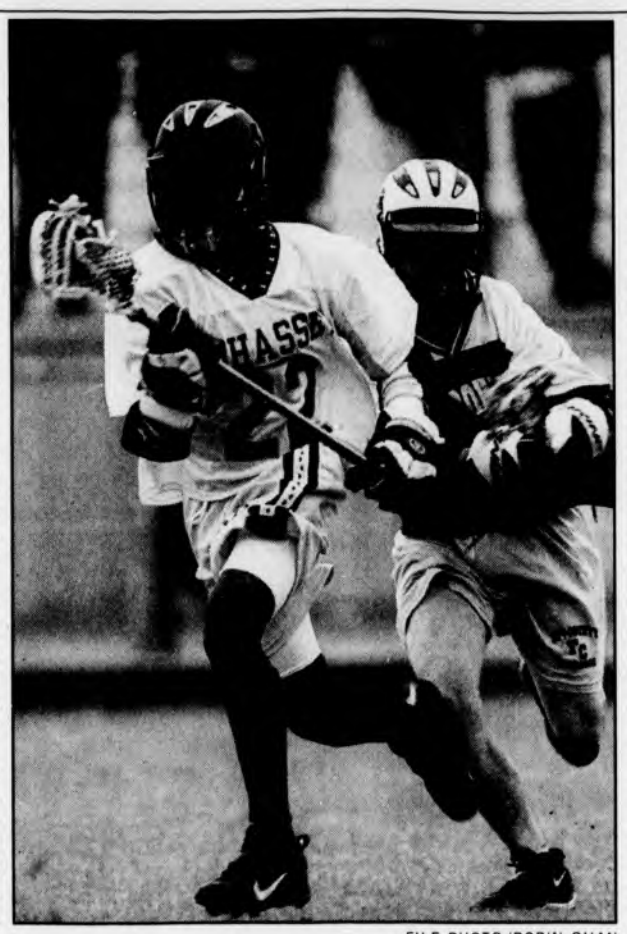
Rob Carpenter, who is back at Cohasset after doing his junior year at B,B&N, is also recovering from a hockey injury, a partially dislocated shoulder, and he'll likely need another couple of weeks before he'll be cleared for lacrosse contact.

Another senior, Mike Hajjar, may miss half the season or more with a back injury.

Curran concedes his team will feel the absences of these three players in the short term, Rasmussen in particular, but feels his team may actually be better in the long run for having to work through it.

"Sure, we may struggle in the early part of the season a bit, especially with all the top quality teams we have lined up right off the bat," he noted. "At the same time, though, we'll be forcing a lot of the younger players who haven't been in the line of fire yet to sink or swim. In the end, hopefully, we'll get a few more players we can count on down the stretch, into the playoffs and hopefully beyond."

Curran has already determined that the strength of his team is in the defensive end.



Devine, who missed the majority of last season with a broken hand, is expected to anchor the longstick line, along with fellow senior captain Buick and Steven Davis, another senior. A third senior captain on the backline is Nick Murphy, who returns to start in goal.

Well thought of junior Casey Coleman will be the main longstick middie, lending support to both the defense and attack.

"This is a real strong and experienced group," noted Curran. "We should be a tough team to score on, and those guys can work the ball up field quickly and hopefully lead our transition game and get us a couple of easy scoring opportunities. I think this group can do that."

Depth on D will be provided by senior Dan Roth, surprising first year junior player Crandon Leahy and bruiser Matt Baroudi.

Vying for time in net will be junior Chris Grimm and sophomore Ben Libby, an undersized but extremely skilled netminder who Curran compares favorably to former Cohasset star Kyle Weber, a two-time Mariner All-Scholastic selection.

Senior captain DeWayne Morris is one of those who is being looked upon to step into a key role in the midfield this season for the Skippers.

Graduation hit the midfield particularly hard. Tom Anderson, John Durkin and Matt Davis leave some big shoes to fill, but Curran likes the competition that's been created by those trying to do just that. Coleman has locked up the number one longstick job. Likely to join him in the starting midfield are captain Mark Davis and hard working junior Joe Durkin (John's cousin).

Speedster DeWayne Morris, a senior, should also see plenty of time in the middle, as should juniors Sam Steele, Bill Carbone and Jake Kovack, and extremely promising freshmen Dan Trendowicz and Jeff Brown. Carpenter and Hajjar will also figure in this mix once they're fit for duty.

The big and powerful Baroudi and Steve Davis appear the likeliest candidates to take face-offs.

Some questions also exist up front. Kahn, who led the Skippers in scoring each of the past two seasons and finished his career with over 200 points, could prove nigh irreplaceable. Much of that burden, though, will fall to gifted junior Jake Previte, who finished second to Kahn in scoring last season with 46 goals.

Most believed the big and athletic Rasmussen was likeliest to emerge as the primary compliment to Previte up front this spring. His injury, though, has forced the onus onto others.

Senior Ryan Tufts has impressed coach Curran in he early going, as have sophomores Aidan Buick and Trevor Brady. Junior John Grimm would also appear a strong candidate to step into a prime time scorer's role this season now that he is almost completely recovered from a broken leg suffered this past fall during the soccer season.

"We've still got some questions right now, but you can say that about a lot of teams," concluded Curran. "I do like the potential of this team, though. By the end of the year, I think we'll be in good position to make some noise in the playoffs."

The Skippers will open the season next Wednesday, April 7, at home versus Martha's Vineyard (3:15 p.m. start), and will travel to Falmouth the next day (4 p.m. start) for their Pilgrim Conference opener.

Two-part workshop on raising teenagers

Parents of pre-teens and teens — whether happy and healthy, somewhat troubled, or somewhere in-between — are invited to attend a special two-part evening workshop: "Raising Teens" on Tuesday, April 6 and April 13, from 7-9 p.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Ripley Road.

Eve Sullivan, a popular speaker affiliated with the Parents' Forum in Cambridge, will lead the seminar. "Raising Teens" will address the strong feelings and inevitable conflicts that arise in parenting adolescents. The workshops help participants assess their parenting skills and offer immediately relevant information on habits of communication and conflict-resolution skills.

Parents' Forum was incorporated in 1992 as a practical, solutions-oriented nonprofit program for parents, guardians and grandparents.

This seminar is sponsored by Project Safeguard, a non-profit community group that includes parent volunteers, health education professionals, clergy, and representatives from the PSO and the Cohasset Public Schools. Reservations should be made in advance by mailing a check for $20, made payable to "Project Safeguard," to: Project Safeguard, c/o Cohasset Middle/High School, 143 Pond St., Cohasset 02025. (This is a sliding scale fee based on ability to pay; you may pay a reduced amount or confidentially request the fee to be waived.) For more information, call 781-383-6190.

SPED speaker at regional PAC meeting

Parents Advisory Council for Special Education (PAC) invites South Shore parents and faculty to join them Tuesday, April 6, at the Osgood School at 7:30 p.m. Isabel Phillips, Ed.D. will be joining the group. Dr. Phillips has an extensive background in reading and language-based learning disabilities, assessment and intervention.

The Osgood school is located at 210 Sohier St. in Cohasset. Osgood shares a common entrance way with the Deer Hill School which can be seen from Sohier Street. The Osgood is located behind the Deer Hill School.

In 2001, PAC members from Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth joined to promote communication, combine workshops and establish a broader network. The South Shore Regional PAC goal is to meet informally throughout the year.

Poetry contest for middle school kids

Two-part workshop on raising teenagers

Parents of pre-teens and teens — whether happy and healthy, somewhat troubled, or somewhere in-between — are invited to attend a special two-part evening workshop: "Raising Teens" on Tuesday, April 6 and April 13, from 7-9 p.m. at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Ripley Road.

Eve Sullivan, a popular speaker affiliated with the Parents' Forum in Cambridge, will lead the seminar. "Raising Teens" will address the strong feelings and inevitable conflicts that arise in parenting adolescents. The workshops help participants assess their parenting skills and offer immediately relevant information on habits of communication and conflict-resolution skills.

Parents' Forum was incorporated in 1992 as a practical, solutions-oriented nonprofit program for parents, guardians and grandparents.

This seminar is sponsored by Project Safeguard, a non-profit community group that includes parent volunteers, health education professionals, clergy, and representatives from the PSO and the Cohasset Public Schools. Reservations should be made in advance by mailing a check for $20, made payable to "Project Safeguard," to: Project Safeguard, c/o Cohasset Middle/High School, 143 Pond St., Cohasset 02025. (This is a sliding scale fee based on ability to pay; you may pay a reduced amount or confidentially request the fee to be waived.) For more information, call 781-383-6190.

SPED speaker at regional PAC meeting

Parents Advisory Council for Special Education (PAC) invites South Shore parents and faculty to join them Tuesday, April 6, at the Osgood School at 7:30 p.m. Isabel Phillips, Ed.D. will be joining the group. Dr. Phillips has an extensive background in reading and language-based learning disabilities, assessment and intervention.

The Osgood school is located at 210 Sohier St. in Cohasset. Osgood shares a common entrance way with the Deer Hill School which can be seen from Sohier Street. The Osgood is located behind the Deer Hill School.

In 2001, PAC members from Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth joined to promote communication, combine workshops and establish a broader network. The South Shore Regional PAC goal is to meet informally throughout the year.

Poetry contest for middle school kids

Buttonwood Books and Toys in Cohasset is hosting its third annual poetry contest. All middle school students (grades 6, 7 & 8) are invited to participate. This will be a month long event to celebrate poetry month. Students may submit their entries directly to Buttonwood Books & Toys, Rt. 3A, Shaw's Plaza.

¿Dónde está Su Escuela? Aquí, say preschool-age children

"At the end of 16 weeks, the child may not say 100 words, but they are building the language center of the brain," Baldeón said, which allows them to recognize and understand Spanish words even if they cannot vocalize them.

What makes Baldeón's program unique, is the fact that all her instructors speak Spanish as their native language. In fact, Baldeón said she is the only instructor who can speak English. She said there are two advantages to having all native Spanish speaking instructors. First, children will not learn to speak Spanish with an American accent. Growing up in Constitucion, Chile, Baldeón has always spoken Castellano, a dialect of Spanish which is pure and without any regional accent, which is almost the equivalent of Oxford English. That is passed on to the children, who very accurately mimic what she and the other Castellano speaking instructors say. The second advantage is that the children have to use their Spanish in class, because the instructors do not speak English. Their primary language cannot be used as a "crutch" and the student and teacher must work together to communicate.

Baldeón has incorporated many facets of her culture into the classes taught at Su Escuela. "When a child comes here, they are in another country," said Baldeón, adding everything down to the crafts, which sometimes use beans and lentils, as Chilean children would use, has a hint of her heritage. Su Escuela even has its own library of books written in Spanish, including the children's favorites, "Goodnight Moon," "Green Eggs and Ham," and "Rainbow Fish," which students are allowed to take out for a week at a time. Instructor Jesica Neira records audio tapes of herself reading the stories that the children can take home with their books.

Because she was raised in Chile, Baldeón knows all too well the importance of being immersed in a language that isn't your native tongue in order to learn it quickly. While attending college at the University of Connecticut, she completely immersed herself in the English language, and was able to overcome a significant language barrier. Now, she feels being bilingual is essential for a complete education.

Busy schedules

Baldeón said she understands the busy schedules children have these days, as she has three of her own. She and her husband Victor live in Hingham with sons Sebastian, 4, Elias, 6 and Adrian, 14. "We are all bilingual," she said, adding Adrian is actually trilingual as he also speaks French. But even with all the activities, she said if her children weren't already bilingual, she would see learning another language as a priority, as it will prepare them for the world of the future.

Su Escuela currently offers three levels of classes — beginner, intermediate, and advanced. Each level has three phases for children to progress through. Classes are taught for 16 weeks at a time, except for the summer sessions, and classes are limited to seven students. Classes are currently offered for children between the ages of four and nine, but because of the high demand Baldeón has seen for Spanish classes, even in the first couple of months Su Escuela has been open, she said she is going to be looking to expand her curriculum to include children as young as three and up to age 11. Once the program gets going, and children begin completing all levels Su Escuela currently offers, programs could be started to allow students to continue in their studies. Ho any changes will most take place next fall, as Ba would prefer to start th gram off slowly, in order t time to make necessary ch as classes become establish Jessica Neira works with Tess Lenihan as Nina Swett looks on at Su Escuela, a Spanish langu doors at 152 King St. (Route 3A) in Cohasset.

Anna M. Kugler

Anna M. (Waldbuesser) Kugler, 97, of Cohasset, died March 19, 2004, at Life Care of the South Shore.

She was born in Philadelphia and worked as a secretary in a main-line law firm. She loved to tell stories of when she was about 23 years old and dad brought her a "hutmobile." She and a girlfriend drove it to Tennessee and had the grand adventure of a lifetime. In midlife, while living on Long Island, she became a door-to-door saleslady selling Avon products, vacuum cleaners and cemetery plots. Although she didn't drive she outsold the men salesmen who did. She spent the last two years at Life Care of the South Shore and was a spirited participant in all of their activities, bus rides and music programs and bingo games. While there, she made many good friends, who were a great support. Until a few months ago she enjoyed good health and visited at her daughter's house 2 or 3 times a week.

Wife of the late Leonard L. Kugler, Sr., mother of Leonard L. Kugler, Jr., of San Pablo, Calif., Arthur Robert Kugler of Vacaville, Calif., and Marianne White and her husband Matthew B. White of Cohasset.

She leaves seven grandchildren and eleven great grandchildren.

A memorial service will be held at a later date.

In lieu of flowers, expressions of sympathy may be made to Activities Director, Life Care of the South Shore, 309 Driftway Rd., Scituate 02066.

William A. Litchfield

William A. Litchfield, 87, formerly of Boston, died March 18, 2004, at the Queen Anne Nursing Home in Hingham. He was a retired carpenter.

Mr. Litchfield was born in Cohasset and spent his early years there before moving to Boston many years ago. During his younger years, he enjoyed horseback riding and breeding, and raising beagles. Some became champions.

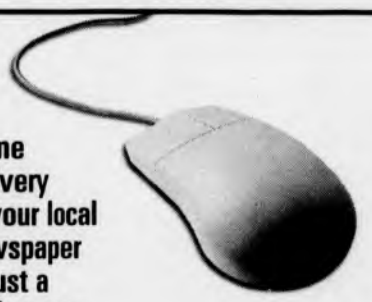
He leaves three sons; Donald M. Litchfield, Sr., of Scituate, William A. Litchfield Jr., of Jeffersonville, Vt., Richard Litchfield of Ruther Glen, Va.; and two daughters, Frances Cipullo of Marshfield and Diane Mello of Cohasset. He also leaves 10 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

A private burial will be held at Mt. Hope Cemetery in Sciutate.

Arrangements by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

WORSHIP NOTES

Great Vigil of Easter at St. Stephen's



Saint Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Ave., will celebrate the Great Vigil of Easter, a candlelight service on Saturday, April 10, at 7 p.m. with baptisms and first communion. The worship is dramatic, beginning with the church in darkness. Candles are lit and at the moment when resurrection is proclaimed the lights are turned on signifying that the resurrected Jesus is the light that no amount of darkness can overcome.

Worship Easter morning, Sunday, April 11, will be at 8 a.m. with quartet and brass and 10 a.m. with full choir and brass. This worship finds women, followers of Jesus, at the empty tomb enjoined to "Go and tell" Christ is risen. Both services, Eucharist with sermon, will be in the church.

Prior to Easter, there will be worship in the church on Maundy Thursday, April 8, at 7 p.m. This Eucharist commemorates the last supper and the importance of community for the church's life together in Christ. Following the Eucharist will be a simple meal of foods typical of Jesus' place and time - bread, cheese, olives, nuts, fruits and milk and honey.

A 24 Prayer Watch will begin on Maundy Thursday at 3 p.m. Parishioners sign up for an hour throughout the day to be in church to read, pray, just to be quiet, or meditate. It recalls Jesus' words at Gethsemane, "So, could you not watch with me one hour?" and the words of Psalm 130: "my soul waits for the LORD more than those who watch for the morning, more than those who watch for the morning." It is a powerful experience of prayer each minute throughout the day bringing the church into Good Friday.

Good Friday worship begins at noon on April 9, with an hour of quiet. The Prayer Book liturgy begins at I p.m. A service for children takes place at 2:30 p.m. and ends the traditional three hours of worship while Jesus was on the cross. A number of parishioners will participate in the 20 mile Good Friday walk raising money to assist economically poor areas of the south, particularly in rural Mississippi.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

TIME IS RUNNING OUT

HELP! "It's April and my kid's not enrolled in camp yet!!

Not to worry, help is on the way! the following tips, from the American Camping Association of New England will help parents who still haven't signed their kids up for camp:

1. First and foremost, you should call an organization that knows what camps are filled and can refer your child to camps that are still taking campers and that best match your child's likes and dislikes.

2 Before making the call, make sure your child is ready for overnight camp. Make sure he or she has gone on at least one sleepover date and successfully stayed away from home for the night if you plan to send them to an overnight camp.

3. Clarify exactly what your child wants and needs from camp. Is your child athletic and loves sports? Make sure to say that and look for a camp that meets this criteria. Loves theatre and the arts in general? Doesn't do well in an extremely structured environment? Has a weight problem? There are camps that meet every one of these criteria...know exactly what you're looking for.

4. Start immediately - there are still fine camps with some spaces available.

5. Contact the camps you are interested in - they might have an opening for a camper who is the precise sex, age and grade as your child

6. A number of camps - primarily agency camps do not open their registrations until February/March.

7. You might need to be more flexible regarding your first choice - perhaps enrolling for a different number of weeks than you originally planned for or for different weeks in the month

8. There is no harm placing your name on a camp waiting list - however, you should not bank on it and must continue your search; ask the camps director the likelihood of getting in based on where you are on the list - while they can make no guarantees, they can usually make estimates based on previous seasons

9. If you do not get into your first choice - find out from the director when you can apply for the next summer

Spring preview to benefit Daffodil Days

"Spring was in the air" at King Jewelers on Wednesday, March 24 as "Daffodil Days" were celebrated to benefit the American Cancer Society (ACS). The store blossomed with hundreds of the bright yellow flowers while members of the community arrived to claim their bouquets.

King's had taken orders for daffodils for several weeks preceding this celebration. The fight against cancer is a particularly meaningful one to this independent jeweler, as members of the King family, staff and countless customers have been touched directly by the disease.

Vicky King of King Jewelers holds a basket of raffle tickets as Shelly Donze and Laurie Berlinguet from the Road to Recovery choose the winners. In the background are Blanche Clark and Michelle Termin.

All participants in "Daffodil Days" who had placed advanced requests for the flowers were entered into a drawing for two lovely pieces of jewelry donated by King's.

Laurie Berlinguet of Hingham and Shelly Donze of Cohasset, co-coordinators of the "Road to Recovery" program of the South Shore were present to select the names of the winners of an ekdesigns sterling silver and hand blown bead necklace, and a Kurt Gutman gold awareness brooch.

"Road to Recovery", a program in which volunteer drivers transport cancer patients to and from medical appointments is one of the services offered by the ACS and supported by the proceeds from Daffodil Days. Kings was honored to have Berlinguet and Donze at the event to represent this volunteer service and the many community members who give time and talent so generously to assist cancer patients and their families.

King's hosted a Spring Jewelry Preview throughout the day as a gesture of gratitude to all who supported this event. Guests were treated to a display of spectacular Jarretiere jewelry; a collection of gold, diamond and colored stones used in innovative designs. Jarretiere is the winner of Town and Country's "Best in Gold" Award. Also on view was the colorful and elegant Spring 2004 collection of ekdesigns, distinctive estate jewelry, and an assortment of magnificent fancy yellow diamonds. This blend of flowers and jewels, in the fresh, joyful colors of springtime reflected the hope and courage of those battling cancer, the kindness of those who support them and the anticipation of the beauty and warmth of days ahead.

"It has been an honor to be involved in Daffodil Days", said Vicki King, graduate gemologist at the store. "It is great to see so many people supporting others. Welcoming spring like this creates an atmosphere of optimism; I hope this tradition continues and grows. Sea Chest Consignments opens Monday

Shoppers with tastes in fashion, fine jewelry and home decor will be interested to know that Sea Chest Consignments in Cohasset, is scheduled to open for business on Monday, April 5.

The Sea Chest's two managers, Andrea (Andi) Merrill and Colleen Roth — formerly with the Cohasset Consignment Shop — have spent years building a reputation among Cohasset, Norwell, Hingham and Scituate residents for providing apparel for men and women, as well as children. With the opening of Sea Chest Consignments, Merrill and Roth are confident their blend of quality merchandise, low prices and customer commitment will allow them to further expand their base of loyal customers and volunteers who have been awaiting the store's opening.

"We are absolutely thrilled to be part of such a wonderful organization."

— Andi Merrill, Sea Chest Consignments

Sea Chest Consignments is owned and operated by Road to Responsibility, Inc. (RTR), a human services organizations. Based in Marshfield, RTR provides residential, recreational, day habilitation and employment programs for adults with disabilities, including mental retardation. While the store provides job opportunities for disabled adults, sales revenues also help support Road to Responsibility's entire slate of services.

"We are absolutely thrilled to be part of such a wonderful organization," said Merrill. "With Sea Chest Consignments, not only can Colleen and I continue to work in a business we enjoy, but with the direct connection to Road to Responsibility we can also do something positive on a much more fundamental level." Merrill went on to say that a more formal and festive grand opening celebration is planned for early May.

Conveniently located in the Dwyer's Building on Route 3A in Cohasset (next to Lapel's Cleaners), Sea Chest Consignments will be open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. - 4 p.m., and Sundays, 1 p.m. - 4 p.m. The store's phone number is 781-383-2293.

Habitat welcomes new homeowners

South Shore Habitat for Humanity invites you to join them on April 3, at 43 Elm St., for a House Dedication Ceremony to celebrate the Ahrens family's new lives as Habitat homeowners.

Friends, family, volunteers, neighbors, and supporters of South Shore Habitat for Humanity will join Robert and Diane Ahrens at their current home in Cohasset, which they share with their three children, Caitlin (12), Casey (10), and Corianne (6). The ceremony will begin at 4 p.m. at 43 Elm St., with refreshments to follow at St. Stephen's Church.

The Ahrens family has an especially unique Habitat story. They were selected out of 12 Cohasset families to become South Shore Habitat's 37th Family Partners in August 2003. Instead of building their own home, the Ahrens bought and immediately moved into an existing condominium in Cohasset that South Shore Habitat re-purchased from the previous owners.

Even though their home was already built, the Ahrens family was still required to complete 500 hours of "sweat-equity," which many families spend constructing their own homes. The

The ceremony will begin at 4 p.m. at 43 Elm St., with refreshments to follow at St. Stephen's Church.

Ahrens completed most of their hours working in Marshfield and Norwell on Habitat homes for other families. "Their energy, hard work, and positive spirit at Habitat's work sites make the Ahrens family great neighbors," says John Seavey, Family Selection Chair and Board Member. The strong partnerships the family has developed with different towns and volunteers truly embodies the spirit of Habitat for Humanity. Executive Director Cynthia Hargrove explains, "South Shore Habitat's mission is to build more than just houses; we also strive to build communities and lives." The Ahrens' Dedication Ceremony in April celebrates the completion of their "sweat-equity" hours and the beginning of official Habitat homeownership.

South Shore Habitat for Humanity uses a comprehensive evaluation process to select families based on need, income, and willingness to partner with Habitat. The Ahrens have purchased their home from South Shore Habitat and will pay for it through a long-term no-interest mortgage. South Shore Habitat recycles the monthly mortgage payments through a Fund for Humanity, which aids in the construction of additional homes.

South Shore Habitat for Humanity, a Habitat International affiliate founded in 1986, is a nonprofit, ecumenical Christian ministry dedicated to building simple, decent homes in partnership with families in need. Together with families, volunteers, churches, and community and business leaders, South Shore Habitat builds on the vision of making basic housing a reality for families in need. South Shore Habitat for Humanity serves 32 cities and towns south and southwest of Boston. Projects are currently underway in Braintree, Norwell, Marshfield, Easton and Hingham.

For more information about South Shore Habitat for Humanity, visit www.sshabitat.org or call 781-843-9080.

BUILDING PERMITS

The following building permits were issued recently at Town Hall:

Roy Fitzsimmons, 116 Doane St., remodel bathroom, $13,500; Therese Joslin, 465 Jerusalem Rd., repair fire damage, $30,000; Carl Sestito, 51 Hill St., remove/reconstruct porch, $15,000; Dana Cushing, 271 Beechwood St., reconfigure bedrooms, $15,000; Samuel Morse, 78 Forest St., entry addition and int. work, $84,000; James Hughes, 100 Pond St., #10, addition 10 x 8, $16,000.

Opening burning season has started

Cohasset residents may obtain permits on a daily basis through May 1 for open burning. Permits may be obtained by calling the Fire Department Dispatch Center at 781-383-6047 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Permits are valid for one day only.

Burning may be conducted during periods of good atmospheric ventilation and must not cause a nuisance. Adverse weather conditions (wind and drought) will impact permit issuance. Burning hours are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on days permits are issued. Decisions to issue permits are made daily at 9 a.m. Persons calling for permits before that hour will be advised to call back.

Open burning permits are issued for the disposal of brush, cane, driftwood and forestry debris. Burning shall be conducted on land proximate to the place of generation. Burning shall be conducted at a distance greater than 75 feet from any dwelling. Select a safe area with no ground cover. While burning the fire must be attended until completely extinguished. Have a water hose, rake and shovel nearby for fire control.

Alternatives to open burning

Open burning releases large amounts of carbon dioxide, other gases, and solid substances directly into the air, which can contribute to respiratory problems. Disposal of natural materials is never as good for the environment as using them again in a different form. Tree limbs, brush and other forestry debris can be chipped or composted into landscaping material. Check with the public works or highway department; many have chippers at their municipal recycling center or transfer station, and will process debris from homeowners.

URBAN ANGST

If you live in an urban environment, you may have more reason than most to have your hearing checked. According to screenings for over two decades of 100,000 older New Yorkers by the League for the Hard of Hearing, the rate of hearing failure in men between ages 60 and 69 increased 15%. Among women in the same age range, it increased 25%. Among men and women between ages 70 and 79, rates of hearing failure rose by 40% and 50% respectively. Hearing experts attribute this trend largely to environmental noise pollution. A survey of restaurant noise levels at dinnertime ranged between 74 and 98 decibels. Prolonged exposure to 85 decibels is considered hazardous to hearing.

If you would like to learn how to safeguard your hearing from hazards of all kinds, FAMILY HEARING CARE CENTER invites you to ask the people who know, the people who have your best interests at heart - the people at 534 Main Street (Rte. 18), across from the Stetson Bldg. in Weymouth. We provide audiologic care in a friendly, comfortable atmosphere. Having trouble hearing? Don't put it off any longer. Call us at 781-337-1144, for a hearing evaluation and to see what we can do for you. We also have an office in Abington.

P.S. A survey by the Centers for Disease Control indicates that 12.5% of children aged 6 to 19 have noise-induced hearing threshold shifts, which are possibly precursors to more serious hearing loss.
